About 20 residents came out on Wednesday, May 10, to protest the loss of 61 inpatient psychiatric beds and six psychiatric rooms at what will be the new Norwood Hospital.

The news that the hospital plan had been approved without psychiatric beds, a maternity ward and obstetric services has riled the community. Residents showed up at the hospital site holding signs protesting the loss, many using the phrase “Same hospital, NO commitment,” to parody the sign on the hospital’s reconstruction site: “New hospital, same commitment.”

“I’m pleased with the turnout, even if it’s just one or two. I think there needs to be attention to the fact that this is a community that has been waiting for these beds for a long time,” said organizer George Sigel. “And many of us may be late to the party. We’re shocked that the new plans did not include any mental health beds. None. That’s egregious considering the pandemic we’re living through currently, and I don’t mean COVID, I mean substance abuse and mental health. And whether Steward likes it or not, they’re going to be dealing with a mental health population, because people go to the nearest hospital many times when they’re experiencing a crisis. Whether that’s appropriate or not, that’s another conversation, but that’s what people do.”

Sigel is a practicing psychiatrist and said the loss of the beds in the Norwood area is going to be a problem. He accepted that Steward has moved those beds to the Good Samaritan Hospital in Brockton, but pointed out that while Brockton isn’t very far away, it’s not even close to the communities Steward has previously stated as its coverage area for the Norwood Hospital.

tified problem as far as their assessment of community needs in their 21 communities,” he said. “Their number one problem was behavioral health, which includes mental health and substance abuse. For them to publicize that a year ago and then come forward with a plan with no mental health beds is the nearest you come to an oxymoron in my opinion. I do think they finessed the solution by suggesting they were going to take care of all the mental health services by moving them to Good Sa-

Town Meeting concluded on Thursday with little confrontation.

What confrontation did occur surrounded the two appropriations for the Morse House in South Norwood with funds from the Community Preservation Act (CPA) fund as recommended by the Norwood Community Preservation Committee (CPC). The two appropriations, $10,000 for a consultant to get the site on the National Historic Register and $192,000 for exterior rehabilitation, constitute Phase 1 of a three-phase plan to bring this piece of Norwood’s history up to a usable status.

The Morse House Subcommittee has been meeting for the last year to figure out possible uses for the house, and the three-phase plan is estimated to total $2 million or more. The subcommittee has repeatedly stated that Phases 2 and 3 are extremely fluid, and that they would be dependent on what uses the Town ultimately decides to utilize the property for. Town Manager Tony Mazzucco and Subcommittee Chair and Board of Selectmen member Bill Plasko said during those meetings that the

The Norwood Conservation Commission (ConCom) met on May 16 and voted to continue its hearing in relation to the proposed 19-single-family housing development at 76 Prospect St.

The issue has drawn heavy scrutiny from both the neighbors and the Town. The Norwood Planning Board has hired a peer review company, Tetra Tech, to review issues of stormwater drainage around the site, and its results are somewhat contentious.

According to 76 Prospect St. attorney David Hern, Tetra Tech had signed off on the proposed stormwater plan. Norwood Conservation Agent Holly Jones said this is somewhat the case, but it doesn’t tell the whole story.

“The conclusion from Tetra Tech was that they supported essentially the ability of the Planning Board to close the public hearing at this point and additional materials could be provided as a condition,” she

This year's Run for a Vet attracted hundreds of runners to raise funds and awareness of the myriad of issues veterans face today.

Norwood runs for Veterans

More than 200 community members gathered at Norwood High School on Saturday, May 13 for the "Run for a Vet" five-mile race. Proceeds from the race benefit 22 Mohawks, a group that helps raise awareness of Veteran suicides.

The "Run for a Vet" event has been hosted in Norwood for eight years. Veteran and Norwood Police Officer Diego Silva is the organizer of the race. Silva was deployed in Afghanistan in 2012 and 2013. He and other Veterans from 22 Mohawks have been hosting events to raise awareness of Veteran suicides since after they returned from active service.

"I'm very supportive of our Vets. This is such a great cause," she remarked. Connolly helped with runner registration at the race.

Race Director Jim Henry has been involved with "Run for a Vet" since it started eight years ago.

"It is probably my favorite race because it's a great cause. All the races I do have a charity component to it, and we try to give back to the community. This one is special because it gives back to the Veterans," explained Henry. Eight years ago, Silva approached Henry about the idea for a race raising awareness of Veteran suicides. Henry called Silva "the heart behind the event."

"When I got back, I saw there was a big hole in the guys that came home. They weren't able to get back into how things were before they were deployed," he explained. "While we were overseas, we lost a few guys from a sister unit. Two of them were double amputees. Three guys had severe traumatic brain injury. We did a car wash to raise money for them, and the response was life changing. So we started doing the road race."

"Every Veteran that we come into contact with, every life that we impact with the money that we raise from this and other events, fuels us to do more and more," said Silva.

Before the race, the National Anthem was performed by the Mansfield High School Band. A moment of silence was also held for Veterans. Runners began their run on Nichols Street, and ran down Bond, Winter, Pond, Oak and Brook streets. The weather for the race was sunny and 80 degrees, which was perfect for the spectators, but a bit hot for the runners. One runner ran the race in a military uniform while carrying an American flag. Volunteers and community members lined the streets to cheer on and support them. A couple of Veteran service dogs were present at the race.

On average, 22 Veterans die by suicide every day. 22Mohawks provides assistance to Veterans who need help navigating the struggles of everyday life when they return home from duty with physical, mental and financial support. To learn more about 22Mohawks, visit 22mohawks.com.

Dozens of volunteers joined the event, helping runners sign in, handing out snacks and drinks, guiding runners, and handing out t-shirts. Free t-shirts were given to the first 100 runners that signed up. Community member Eileen Connolly, a volunteer at the "Run for a Vet" event, said she enjoys helping out at the race because she wants to support veterans and because she is the sister of a Vietnam veteran.

Tony Delogne finished first in the "Run for a Vet" race with a time of 29 minutes and 41 seconds. Eric Kewriga of Norwood finished second by completing the race in 34 minutes and 30 seconds. Mike Sheehan of East Walpole took third place, completing the race in 35 minutes and 13 seconds. Complete race results can be viewed here: bit.ly/3nZH49N

Norwood... The Movie coming soon

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The 10th District Studios team of Jerry Kelleher and Brendan King recently returned from Washington D.C. after winning Best Documentary at the D.C. International Cinema Festival for their “F. Holland Day & the Art of Photography” production.

“We entered it and we got best documentary and so we went down there and got the hardware,” Kelleher said. “It’s a juried show and they take the best films of the year I guess. There were several short films and a few features and our documentary was screened to an audience.”

Kelleher said he and King worked for two years on the film and it felt good to get that accolade.

“It’s nice when somebody sees it and appreciates it,” he said. “They were really interested in the subject matter, as this film was about Fred Holland Day, the photographer, and the work is amazing considering the time period and the equipment. I have some pretty nice cameras, and we’re in the digital age now of course, but this guy had a box glass plate camera with negatives and he made these spectacular images. It was nice to bring it to new people. The audience wasn’t familiar with his work before that. That’s what it’s all about for us.”

He said while the film is available for digital release, he prefers to show it in a theater to a live audience.

“You can really judge the reaction right away,” he said.

Kelleher said the genesis of this movie, as are most of his movies, is finding something interesting to talk about.

“My partner Brendan King really runs the business, and he says that there’s just so much history around us, if you know where to look.”

In that spirit, Kelleher said they are trying to wrap up their next film, “Norwood... the Movie.” The idea is to tell at least

NPS awarded grant funding for new math program

Superintendent David Thomson and Principal Michael Baulier are pleased to share that the George F. Willett Early Childhood Center has received grant funding that will be used to integrate a new educational software program.

The award includes more than $40,000 in licensing, professional development and support fees over three years, which will be used to implement Spatial-Temporal (ST) Math programs.

The grant was awarded by the One8 Foundation, as part of the Mass STEM Hub program, which partners with Massachusetts schools to implement high-quality, applied learning programs.

As part of the program, Norwood Public Schools also will be connected to a network of other schools across Massachusetts that are also implementing ST Math and sharing best practices.

"On behalf of the entire district, I would like to extend my gratitude to the One8 Foundation for this generous grant and to our Norwood teachers and staff who have made this possible," said Superintendent Thomson.

Principal Baulier, district champion Laura Donnelly, and three ST Math school champions, including Kindergarten teachers Katie Lambrenos, Colleen Reynolds and Special Education Teacher Daisha Sullivan, will work closely with the programs ST Math Education Success Manager to support the implementation of the program.

ST Math is a PreK-8 visual instructional program that leverages the brain's innate spatial-temporal reasoning ability to solve mathematical problems. ST Math's approach provides students with equitable access to learning through challenging puzzles, non-routine problem-solving and formative feedback. The program starts by teaching the foundational concepts visually, then connects the ideas to the symbols, language and robust discourse.

THANK YOU TM FOR LOOKING OUT FOR US

To the Editor:

We would like to send a heartfelt thank you to the 151 Town Meeting members who stood up and voted to support Article 2 at the Special Town Meeting on May 8. Not only did your votes help to preserve a beautiful green space that is of vital importance to

Norwood, but you also showed genuine care for your neighbors, fellow residents, and for this wonderful place we all call home. You served as an inspiration to us, and to our children, that underdogs can make a difference, even against great odds, obstacles, and opposition. When we all take care of each other, support one another, speak up for what is right, and are not afraid to admit and fix mistakes, we all win. So we thank you, from the very bottom of our hearts. Each one of you made a tremendous difference, and we are forever grateful to you.

building has to be rehabilitated in order to keep it from deteriorating.

Town Meeting Member Eric Bodenhofer said he wants to have an idea of what the Town will do with the building before money is spent on it.

"Do we have a plan for the Morse House? We've had a study; the Town's owned it since 1973. I've heard things about a cultural center, an education center, a historic center, and in some ways I think we're approaching this a little backwards," he said. "In some ways, I think we're being asked for $300,000 (actually $202,000) to restore a house, and I don't really know that I know why. I mean putting aside its historic value, what are we planning to do with it?"

Bodenhofer said he was uncomfortable with spending hundreds of thousands of dollars on a house that the Town does not have a solid idea of what it's going to do with it with the likelihood of millions to be spent later.

"If we're just shoring up the exterior without the idea of what we're going to use it for and we have to repair the interior to use it for anything, then we're going to be back here putting more money into it," he said. "I'm not saying we shouldn't, but I want to know why because there doesn't appear to be a clear plan for the house going forward."

Norwood Historical Commission member and Subcommittee member Toni Eosco said she felt it was important to preserve the house as part of Norwood's history.

"This house represents Norwood's full history; we embarrassingly have nothing else in the state's book or the National Register of Historic Place and it meets all the criteria," she said. "The figure the previous speaker referred to, the Gienapp Consulting report had lots of things in it we're not going to do. It was a feasibility study and a master plan, and we took the essence out of it from the structural firm company that said the house is in fairly good condition for its age and the minimal work that's been done to it. We've put no money of any great import into this house since we got it for a dollar almost exactly 50 years ago. Town Meeting accepted it on May 11, 1973."

Eosco added that they are looking for other avenues of funding for further work on the house.

"Rest assured, you're not going to see a $2 million project come," she said. "We want to look for donations; we would look for grants and things like that. I'm not going to say we're not going to look for further CPC funds because I'm not in charge. There's a committee with this."

Eosco said before any of that can happen however, the house needs to be standing.

"But the discussion about its future can't take place unless we know the future of the house is secure," she said. "And that's what we're trying to do."

Town Meeting approved all CPC items in Article 10 of the ATM, including $350,000 for window and siding replacement on the Norwood Housing Authority's McDonough Housing Complex, $5,000 to preserve the Town's 1890 Directory, $10,000 to restore and preserve the Memorial Hall Furniture, $11,000 to preserve and restore several Annual Town Reports dating back to the late 1800s, $530,000 to replace fencing, install gates and perform landscaping improvements at the Old Parish Cemetery, $10,000 for a Conservation Land Reserve and $41,040 for a master plan at Winslow Park.

Article 7 dealt with the NPS budget, which came in at $54,824,884. Norwood Public Schools Superintendent David Thomson said there were about 20 full-time equivalent (FTE) positions they were unable to fund and keep in line with the budget. These included four special education teachers, a 1.4-FTE special education occupational therapist position, a .5-FTE Board Certified Behavioral Analyst position, 6.3 FTE paraprofessional positions, a .4-FTE assistant Transportation Director, a 1.1-FTE adjustment Counselor, a .4-FTE English language administration assistant, a 1.3-FTE elementary physical education teacher, four teachers at the Balch, Coakley, High School and Oldham, a .6-FTE middle school administration assistant and a middle school computer science teacher.

"Those were 22 no's that didn't make me very popular," Thomson said.

Other articles approved:

Article 1 dealt with accepting reports from Town officers, boards and committees. Articles 2 and 3 dealt with the approval of revolving funds from services funded by fees from either the Town Administration or the Norwood Public Schools (NPS).

Article 4 dealt with the Town Budget, which came in at a total of $110,080,176, split between the Town Administration total of $89,600,200 and the infrastructure total of $20,479,976.

Article 5 dealt with a request from the NPS for $500,000 of free cash to fund transportation for students to and from school with the help of outside contractors.

Article 6 dealt with two requests from the NPS, one for $372,000 of free cash for the total amount of Medicaid and homeless student transportation reimbursements anticipated from the state and the other was for $1,487,643 from the Override Stabilization Funds to supplement the school district's needs for special education costs.

said. “They reached the point where they didn’t think additional review was needed and had bullet points of what they thought the Planning Board should ask for.”

Engineer associated with the project Dan Merrikin did say they are planning to follow up with Tetra Tech on those requested items.

Regarding riverfront property and ConCom jurisdiction, it got a bit more complicated.

The site is a large parcel with two homes on it surrounded by trees that are then enclosed by single-family homes and the surrounding streets. Essentially, the site is the interior of a suburban subdivision. The site also has a vegetated wetland area to the south and an intermittent stream in the same area, which became the largest topic of singular discussion.

Jones said there are protections from the ConCom that have not been accounted for in the plan.

“The elephant in the room is that we do have riverfront standards applying to intermittent streams which the Commission has historically, for as long as I have been agent, given riverfront area to those intermittent streams,” she said.

The Norwood Wetland Protection bylaw allows the Commission to set no disturb areas depending on the type of wetland resource in the area. For wetlands like those found on the eastern side of the site, the Commission can and usually does set a no-disturb buffer of about 100 feet from the delineated wetland site. But for “riverfront” areas, the no disturb (or no build or setback areas) is set at 200 feet, which Merrikin’s plan did not seem to take into account or provide any alternative analysis or information on what percentage of riverfront area is being altered.

“And so without those pieces of information, it is difficult to determine if the project is meeting our standards set forth for riverfront,” Jones said.

Hern stepped in at this point and made his case as to why the 200-foot buffer does not apply.

“Your regulations that appear to make an intermittent stream part of riverfront area are not legal and go beyond the authority you have under the bylaw,” he said.

Hern summarized a letter he submitted to the ConCom the day before and said it was his opinion that the definition of an intermittent was laid out in the bylaw and does not apply to riverfront areas.

“The regulations can effectuate the provisions of the bylaw, not change them,” he said. “... looking at the characteristics of an intermittent stream running not year-round, whereas the definition of a stream in the bylaw states that it runs year-round, they are two different things. The standards and definitions with respect to the buffer zone fit an intermittent stream. To make it all of a sudden riverfront area is to take an intermittent stream and change its definition.”

The bylaw Section III, which deals with jurisdiction, does put intermittent streams as protected in number 13 of Section III, but lands near them are separated. Number 17 states: lands within 100 feet of any of the aforesaid resource areas; rivers, streams and creeks whether perennial or intermittent, known as the buffer zone.”

Number 18 states: “Lands within 200 feet of any river, stream, or creek (collectively the ‘resource areas protection by this Bylaw’), known as the Riverfront Area.” Hern pointed out that while intermittent streams are listed in 17, they are not specifically listed in 18.

Hern added that the definitions section of the bylaw has stream and intermittent stream in separate sections.

“So this does not fit within a riverfront area,” he said.

Jones said she spoke briefly with Norwood Town Counsel David DeLuca that day and he said he has not yet had time to fully look over the bylaw.

“But he thought having a judge look at the definition between stream and intermittent stream, or perhaps even perennial stream, would be looking at how the word is used commonly within the field, as well as the definitions provided in the bylaw itself,” she said.

Jones said she didn’t feel that Hern’s analysis was unreasonable, but she interpreted the sections differently. She said she felt that in number 13 the inclusion of the word streams includes intermittent streams.

“Though it’s true the definition of stream says, ‘year-round,’ we don’t have a definition of rivers in our bylaw and we don’t have a definition of perennial streams and so I suspect that intermittent streams were called out specifically to emphasize that those are subject to protection that is not granted within the (Massachusetts) Wetlands Protection Act, but that streams as a term was not meant to exclude intermittent streams but rather to include them,” she said.

Jones may consult a professional scientist about how the words are used in the field and may get an opinion from a judge to move forward. The ConCom voted to continue the hearing to its next meeting on May 31 at 7:30 p.m.

maritan. That's not even in their service area, and nor is it convenient. The fact that the state went ahead and bought that is egregious."

Sigel said they should also be picketing the Massachusetts Department of Public Health.

"This new facility could and should be required to at least build back to the (original) capacity and I think any architect could figure out a way to re-purpose the current plan, even with construction underway," he said.

One resident, who asked to remain anonymous as they still work in the healthcare industry and did not want their livelihood to be threatened from speaking out said, "I worked in psychiatry and the need for services here is great. We were always full and sometimes we had to turn people away. Steward had a call center here in Norwood where people would call for beds. They would find beds all over the system, and sometimes we would get patients from Western Massachusetts or the Cape, and we were always full."

Susan Fitzgerald just retired from working 50 years in the Norwood Hospital Maternity Ward, and said both losses are extremely concerning.

"There's just not enough beds, not just in Massachusetts but all over," she said. "I looked in The Record last week, and a quarter of the calls in the Police Log were mental health calls."

Resident Neil Patterson said he's used the mental health services at Steward and beyond and said he wouldn't be here today without them.

"I've been hospitalized many times," he said. "I've had mental health problems for many years, but thanks to the mental health services I got, I'm basically symptom-free."

Patterson said he hopes to change Steward's mind about the loss of the beds, and added he's seen similar changes to the hospital's interior in the past.

"They can always put a unit in (Norwood Hospital), because when I was working at the hospital, they remodeled it all the time," he said. "It can be done."

Residents Pam Chubet and Trish Monahan said they came out because having local psychiatric beds are essential for residents. Chubet is the Senior Resident Services Coordinator at the Norwood Housing Authority and said having those services close by has been a lifesaver for them in the past.

"I'm on my lunch break by the way," she said. "I have on many occasions been involved with making sure that residents going to the old in-patient unit of the Norwood Hospital have that communication with case managers and we worked together to make their discharge successful, and having them local is also very good for the seniors."

Monahan said she used to work in elder services and saw the need for local psychiatric services daily. She saw the study Sigel mentioned and is mystified.

"I don't know why they would cut that service out when they know that's who needs it the most," she said. "They say, 'New hospital, same commitment,' but it's really not. You're not bringing the same thing back and that's why I'm out here, to hold them to their word."

Resident Jean Palmateer said she has had to secure psychiatric services for her children, and it was extremely difficult even when those services were in Town. She said for her son, those services were required by law. She said she also needed services for her daughter.

"The bottom line is both of my children needed mental healthcare locally and it's just not reasonable that a new hospital being built here is not going to have mental health beds."

THIRD ANNUAL PRIDE PICNIC ON THE COMMON

The Town of Norwood invites everyone to join the town's third annual Pride Picnic on the Norwood Town Common on Thursday, June 1 from 5:00-7:00 pm. They ask that you please bring your own food, picnic blanket, and whatever else you'll need to prepare for comfort and weather. Everyone is advised to dress comfortably and colorfully for this fun, casual picnic with neighbors. This is a drop-in event and no registration is required.

Norwood's Pride Picnic marks the beginning of Pride Month, a month dedicated to celebrating and honoring LGBTQ+ history and culture with parades and other events around the country. These annual events, gatherings, and parties grew out of the Gay Liberation Movement following the Stonewall riots in 1969. Modern Pride events seek to celebrate, center, and affirm the experiences, contributions, and identities of LGBTQ+ people the world over.

"We're so excited for this year's Pride Picnic. The library's table will have lawn games, free swag, and of course books!" said Library Director, Clayton Cheever. "We've been able to make so many positive connections with residents at previous Pride Picnics. Community-driven events like this only fuel our commitment to supporting the LGBTQ+ community throughout the year, not just for Pride Month in June."

Spearheaded by Progress Norwood and proudly sponsored by the Town of Norwood and the Morrill Memorial Library, this year's Pride Picnic is supported by a rainbow of other Town Departments and local organizations, including the Norwood Police Department, Norwood Health Department, the Norwood Council on Aging, Friends of Norwood Center, Norwood Historical Society, Black Norwood, League of Women Voters, and Norwood Juneteenth.

The Norwood Police Department will be selling rainbow NPD patches, with all proceeds going to support the Trevor Project, which provides 24/7 crisis support services to LGBTQ+ young people. Progress Norwood will also have Norwood Pride lawn signs available for $10 each.

MAPPING THE HAITIAN REVOLUTION

On Tuesday, May 23 at 7:00pm the Morrill Memorial Library's 2023 Artist-in-Residence, Charlot Lucien, will present "Mapping the Haitian Revolution into the US: The Massachusetts Connection," a lecture about the Haitian Revolution and its connections to US history and the abolition movement, in the Simoni Room.

The aftermath of the 1791-1803 Haitian Revolution saw intensified interactions between Haiti and the United States. This revolution impacted the US abolitionist movement and left powerful imprints on the US East Coast and Midwest maps. This lecture will retrace Haiti-related markers and landmarks (monuments, historical archives) in some 10 states that speak to the little-known but definite influence of the Haitian revolution in antebellum America and beyond, including interactions with local leading Massachusetts abolitionists.

This program is supported in part by a grant from the Norwood Cultural Council, a local agency which is supported by the Mass Cultural Council, a state agency. Registration is required. Please register at <https://www.norwoodlibrary.org/>

some of the story of the first 150 years of the Town since its official incorporation. The idea came about while he was working on the logo and tagline preparing for the Town's 150th anniversary last year.

"It's entertainment for current residents, but it's sort of like a legacy thing too," he said. "It's a source of pride that we can hand this down to the 175th Anniversary Committee or the 200th. Like this is where we came from. If I'm lucky enough to be on the 200th Committee, I think it would be exciting to show this film. I'm trying to look at it from current and future perspectives. Something that we can leave behind, you know?"

"This film, I know I know it's year 151 right now, but the film is about the first 150 years and where we stood during what was going on in the world," he said. "So there's 15 decades, and we'll show at least some of each one and how Norwood fit in the world during that time and what was going on in the Town at the same time. We break down the major events and people and difference makers and the technology and the growth of the community as time went on. It's very interesting and it's a lot of work, but it's a labor of love."

They will start with how Norwood "broke off" from Dedham and how Norwood's industrial capacity took off in the early 1900s.

"We can show some of those industrial areas; I really dig for footage and photos and we'll show the printing industry, which was huge in Norwood, the tanneries too and then we go into more high tech things," he said. "We'll cover Raytheon, Analog Devices, Factory Mutual, The AutoMile. I mean, we're going to take you on a journey."

He's almost finished the information gathering stage and will be putting it together soon.

However, if anyone has any photos or footage they think might be relevant, Kelleher said to reach out at 10thDistrictStudios@gmail.com.

"I can include them in the film and I'm happy to do it and put them in the credits," he said. "Videos from sports, specific events, or even home movies from the 50s, 60s or 70s. I want to include as many people from the Town as I can in the project. I had a lot of support from folks and I appreciate it."

For more information on the film, go to 10thDistrictStudios.com

Kelleher wants to thank the local sponsors for the film, which include One Local Bank, Central Chrysler Dodge Jeep Ram Fiat of Norwood, Dempsey Insurance, King & Bishop, the 150th Anniversary Committee and the Norwood Light Broadband Company.
