Norwood celebrates 100th Veterans Day

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

Hundreds of residents and veterans came out on Monday for the Town's celebration of the 100th anniversary of Veterans Day.

The parade stepped off at the Balch school in South Norwood and proceeded up Washington Street to the Town Common, where officials spoke about what the day meant to them and honored local veterans. Norwood Veterans Agent Ted Mulvehill said it was important to honor all veterans, those who came home, those who didn't and those no longer with us.

"This is a very special day for many of us and we appreciate all you nice folks coming out to join us," he said. "One of the things we have started doing recently is asking our Norwood Elementary School kids to give us their definition of what a veteran is, and they're brilliant. These kids get it, they understand... Let me read

Planning Board discusses Site Plan problems

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Norwood Planning Board met with Norwood Town Counsel David DeLuca last week to discuss the Board's options when an applicant does not adhere to the Board's wishes for a Site Plan Approval.

The problem is that there are very little teeth in any legal mechanism the Board, and subsequently the Town, has against an applicant. DeLuca said there may be a way to for the Board to get what it wants, but it's somewhat of a long road.

The reason for this discussion, according to Town Planner Paul Halkiotis, is that the McDonald's on 32 Broadway, near the Downtown area, is requesting site plan approval for several renovations and improvements to the site. At the previous Planning Board meeting, the discussion was tabled

PBCC meets contractor over Town Hall elevator

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Norwood Permanent Building Construction Committee (PBCC) met last Thursday, Nov. 7 and discussed with Salomone Associates the elevator replacement project at the Town Hall the group will be undertaking.

Frank Baratti represented Salomone Construction during the meeting for the $427,000 elevator plan and has been with the company for 17 years as the Senior Electrical Engineer.

“We do elevators, power, lighting and fire suppression systems,” he said. “It’s a small firm, we only have 10 employees, but we do a wide array of mechanical electrical and plumbing.”

Baratti said since the elevator was installed in the mid 1980s (and was built before the Americans with Disabilities Act was instituted) and has a 1,500 pound capacity, the existing elevator (hoistway) shaft makes replacing the elevator with one supporting more weight is impossible.

“If you were to build that hoistway now, it wouldn’t even be up to code,” he said.

“Well we did what we could,” said PBCC Chair Ted Callahan, who was on the PBCC at the time of the elevator’s installation. “We were under ADA pressure at the time so that’s why we did what we did.”

Baratti said the code allows the Town to keep it because it is an existing condition. He went through his evaluation and said the sling and the car itself will remain, but everything else will be brand new and will bring the rest of the elevator

Selectmen debate lack of bartending regulations

Susan Kryczka
Staff Reporter

Selectmen spent over a half hour at their Tuesday, Nov. 11 meeting discussing a recent incident that highlighted the lack of state and town regulations that prohibit drinking while working and its effect on licensing.

The discussion emerged from the show cause hearing on the agenda involving an incident on Sept. 21, 2019 at the Shamrock Pub at 175 Railroad Avenue. Norwood Police reported a possible violation of Massachusetts Regulations 2.05, permitting disorder, disturbance or illegality upon the licensed premises.

The incident was a physical altercation between the pub's bartender and a customer. Norwood Police Officer Kevin Coffey and Detective Brenden Greene arrived at the scene to find the bartender lying on the ground outside and detected a strong odor of alcohol. Witnesses said that a fight had ensued between the bartender and a customer and that the bartender had been drinking. The bartender was arrested, and the customer was not charged. The bartender is currently incarcerated.

Town Attorney David DeLuca acknowledged the facts of the incident but stated that current state and town laws do not prohibit bartenders from drinking, which in his opinion meant that any decision to remove the Shamrock's license would be problematic. This opened up an intense discussion among the Selectmen about the incident and lack of a law to link to this case.

"Very troubling. The bartender was serving himself," said Selectman David Hajjar. He asked Shamrock owner Michelle Kuietauskas if the bartender was TIPS (Training and Intervention Procedures for Servers) certified, which he was. Kuietauskas said, "I'm very angry and disgusted. I'm very, very sorry. The bartender has been fired."

DeLuca said the situation had developed spontaneously and reiterated that there is no prohibition against drinking while working. "That's the legal summary of the matter," he added. Chairman Paul Bishop noted that the bartender did not plan the fight, had worked at the Shamrock for four years without apparent incident, so the establishment was not to blame. Hajjar felt that the owner should have been checking as the bartender was the only employee working that night. "We have four hours of potential drinking...this situation is totally unacceptable." "This clearly appears to be a sudden occurrence instigated by the bartender, not the customers. Did management permit any of this? Obviously not," said Selectman Alan Howard. "I don't see something I can hang my hat on," added Bishop, referring to not holding the establishment responsible. Selectman Thomas Maloney agreed that he felt uncomfortable since there is no regulation stating an employee cannot drink on the job. "Not sure we have the legal justification to do so," he added. Selectman William Plasko agreed that the Board had no standing to move against the pub's license. A motion was passed to send a written warning to Kuietauskas that this type of activity is unacceptable. The motion passed 4-1, with Hajjar opposed. DeLuca said sending a warning was an appropriate action.

Other business included Mark Ryan, DPW Director/Town Engineer Mark Ryan's monthly report of department activities. "There's a heavy volume out there," said Ryan referring to autumn refuse pick-up in the Town. He commented on how patient people have been as the Town continues to do leaf removal. Hajjar asked for an update on the sewer lines. Ryan replied that what is referred to as the "airport sewer" has been inspected to check on water infiltration. "It's more the manholes where a substantial amount of water is getting in there, so they need to be rehabilitated," he said.

Amy Pfingston was appointed to the Norwood Cultural Council. "You'll make the ninth member. I'm delighted that you applied," said Maloney after Pfingston stated her interest and qualifications.

There may hope for dog owners who are looking for a town option to exercise their pets. Plasko, who has previously brought up the need for a dog park somewhere in the Town, said he has a possible lead for a location. "I have an idea of where we would put a dog park. It would be in a fairly isolated location with no neighbors to be bothered by it." Hearing no objections from the Board, he will pursue further the suggested location.

A free Thanksgiving Day meal will be offered at Lombardo's in Randolph. Registration is necessary and anyone interested can call the Senior Center.

Cue up the self-righteous indignation

Picture this scenario. The owner of a Mexican restaurant located on Route One that has had prior reasons to face the Board of Selectmen is once again before them to explain how one of his bartenders, working alone, drank for hours while serving patrons. During the evening, witnesses testified to police that said bartender was obviously drunk. Police also testified that the bartender, at around 10:30 or 11pm, became combative with a patron of said establishment brandishing both a knife and a hammer from behind the bar threatening the customer. Finally, the bartender and the customer head outside to handle things “like men” whereas the bartender gets his butt kicked and ends up flat on his back being questioned by police. Bartender is then arrested and taken into custody where he still is today waiting for a hearing.

The casual Norwood television viewers to said hearing would probably think, “Oh, this bar is screwed”. Now, would said television viewers think the verdict handed down to the bar owner would be any different if say the establishment was a corporately owned steak house on Route One. “Of course not,” they would most likely answer. Well, what if it was a Brazilian restaurant in a neighborhood like South Norwood? “Ridiculous question, a lesson needs to be taught!” viewers would most likely bellow. Okay, one last question: What if it’s an Irish bar frequented by local yokels and located right behind the Town Hall. Would that make a difference in the verdict? To some, the answer would probably be the same. But to others, and you know who you are, the answer would more likely be, “Well, the owner is really nice and the bar has been there a long time, and there really isn’t anything that could have been done.”

The Board of Selectmen discussed the incident that allegedly took place at the Shamrock Pub in September at Tuesday night’s meeting during a show cause hearing and the above details of the bartender were presented.

Norwood’s Selectmen, with the exception of David Hajjar, should hang their heads in shame for pulling what they did on Tuesday evening. To use some ridiculous excuse like the fact that there really is no wording in the local or state statutes specifically addressing drunken bartenders is a disgrace, and it was obvious that their defense of The Shamrock Pub was planned in advance of the clown show.

With the exception of Hajjar, none of the Selectmen appeared to really care that the bartender could have been over serving customers while tending bar, or that he could have been serving minors, or that there was no other employee to share duties or oversee the bartender. At a minimum, wasn’t the bartender guilty of over serving himself? Isn’t that alone enough to instate punishment? Hajjar, appearing incredulous as to what appeared to be taking place, asked other Selectmen, “What if someone was over served and after leaving got into a car accident and killed somebody?” Crickets. A few shrugs of the shoulders from the others, all stating that they wish they could do something but that there really wasn’t legal justification. What a crock of crap.

Nothing was stopping Selectmen from issuing a one, or multi day suspension of the Shamrock License. The owner, who was solemn and apologetic, may have accepted the suspension without an appeal, acknowledging that what happened was really bad and she deserved the punishment. And so what if the owner did appeal? The message would have been clearly sent that it doesn’t matter who you are or where your bar is located, the rules are the same for everybody.

What we do know is that Tuesday evening’s Selectmen’s meeting was just one more example of the Town of Norwood continuing to face serious issues being addressed by a few Townies who don’t have the energy or temerity to rock the status quo. Does this column somehow suggest that Selectmen are bigoted or racist? No, what it is strongly suggesting is that if you aren’t part of the local yokel brethren, you’re facing another set of rules and those rules are discriminatory.

one to you: ‘A veteran is an individual with a sense of duty, one who served his country with bravery and honor.’ Come on, this kid’s in the fourth grade.”

Mulvehill said one in particular caught his eye.

“Here’s my favorite: ‘A vet is someone who takes care of animals, but someone who fought in a war to serve our country,’” he said to laughs from the crowd. “Eh? Just a wonderful thing.”

Mulvehill went over the history of Veterans Day, in that it was first Armistice Day to celebrate the end of the War to End all Wars in 1918 (codified as Armistice Day in 1919). Carillon player and Norwood resident Lee Leach rang the bells in the Norwood Memorial Town Hall 11 times to commemorate the signing of the Armistice itself on the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month.

Selectman Allan Howard introduced both his wife Irene “Renie” Howard and Norwood Vietnam veteran Tim Flynn. Renie said she quilts recreationally and for charity, and donates her works to locals in need. She showcased her work for Flynn, the recipient of an intricately (and seemingly painstakingly created) quilt with several different designs of stars and stripes (of the red white and blue variety).

“We get a lot of phone calls, the VA hospital, all the hospitals, nursing homes, and so I decided a few years ago I was going to give one to a deserving veteran on Veterans Day, and today it’s mister Flynn,” she said.

When Flynn took the quilt amid applause from his fellow Norwood residents, he spoke only a few words.

“I’m grateful to be here, you know?” he said. “Yeah, a lot of my friends didn’t make it back, but I try to live each day to honor them. That’s all.”

Allan Howard detailed Flynn’s service record, which included a Silver Star, a Purple Heart and a Bronze Star. Flynn volunteered for Vietnam in the late 1960s in the U.S. Navy and was assigned to the Brown River Navy, a division of the navy tasked with paroling and clearing the Mekong River Delta.

“On Nov. 22, 1969, Chief Flynn’s boat was on patrol in the Vinh Te Canal, when the lead boat struck a mine and was blown straight up in the air and threw the crew overboard,” he said. “Chief Flynn then maneuvered his boat in between the enemy and his comrades in the water and began to rescue them. One sailor, Don Walton, was drowning and going under, but without regard for his safety and under intense fire from the enemy, Chief Flynn dove into the water.”

Flynn also participated in combat on Feb. 13, 1970, where his boat was struck by seven rocket propelled grenades in an ambush. One sailor was killed instantly and Flynn and several other members of his crew were struck by shrapnel.

“Even suffering from many wounds, he immediately rendered first aid to his comrades and began fighting the fires on his damaged ship,” he said.

“When medical help arrived, he refused treatment so his comrades would be treated first.”

Norwood Board of Selectmen Chair Paul Bishop said the U.S. cannot repay its debt to its veterans, but it will always try.

“We can never fully repay our debt of gratitude to the more than 700,000 servicemen and women who have died in service over the years,” he said. “We can however recognize and thank the 25 million veterans living here today, many among us here this morning.”

Selectman David Hajjar quoted G.K. Chesterton in his remarks, saying “Courage is almost a contradiction in terms. It means a strong desire to live taking the form of a readiness to die.”

“We are lucky to have so many ready to serve this nation with such courage. It’s an honor and privilege to be here. I salute all who have served this nation, and in our own small and respectful way here in Norwood, we pay tribute those who have fallen and those who have survived,” he said. “They deserve it and a lot more.”

Mulvehill also saluted those who make the Norwood Veterans Day Parade such a special time including the Norwood Colonial Boys, the Colonial Pipers and the Norwood High School Marching Band.

Mulvehill also honored his predecessor George “Tiger” Thomas, marine Thomas Collins, Norwood Legion Post 70, the Friends of Norwood Fire Department and resident Jack Carney.

Trails Advisory Committee marks out its events and goals

Mary Ellen Gambon
Staff Reporter

The Trails Advisory Committee had a full agenda at its meeting on Tues, Nov. 12, discussing its recent walk, upcoming events and future goals.

Member Lee Leach talked about the recent walk the group organized beginning at the Willet School and ending at Father Mac's on Veteran's Day, Mon., Nov. 11.

"We had decent weather, overcast, coolish, with very little wind," he said. "We had a couple of dogs walk along with us, so that was a new experience."

He added that during the two-hour walk there were "no new surprises" along the 2.7-mile trail, which was in a similar condition as in previous walks. They traversed the backside of the landfill and what is referred to as "White Mike's Pond," the old skating area. Member Sue Bartlett mapped the trail, which will be used in the next brochure.

Chair Joseph Greeley added that there was a part of the area for which the committee will have to request an easement from the Town because it crosses a residential property at Silver St. at the landfill, which they called Mt. Norwood.

He noted that, although no animals were seen during this walk, sometimes deer have been spotted there, which can attract coyotes.

The group also discussed names for the trail, although none was decided upon at the meeting. The two most popular were the "Father Mac's Trail" and the "Germany Brook Trail."

Unlike the Endean Trail, this site would be ideal for people who were looking to hike on steeper inclines.

The committee also discussed an invitation to partner with the Norwood Women's Community Committee extended by its member Patricia Hawkins Greene.

"They do an awful lot for the Town, and they do it very quietly," member Ernie Paciorkowski said, noting that the organization has been in Norwood for at least 75 years and provides seed money to fledgling groups.

"We are excited to collabo-

apparatus up to code by replacing the power unit and hydraulic unit, the controller, the call station and electronics.

"For all intents and purposes everything else is going to be brand new, new cab interior, new guides, new car top equipment, the whole nine yards," he said. "Typically, unless we find it and say 'oh my God this is trash,' which is highly unlikely, you typically reuse the sling. Everything else would be replaced."

Baratti said Massachusetts safety codes now require temperature controls in an elevator system, which this one will have as well.

Norwood Contract Administrator Catherine Carney said they are more or less ready to start construction, but she wants to get a few more details nailed down before that happens.

"We're all ready to roll, but it's just a matter of going over what we're going to do and I strongly suggest we have some sort of pre-construction meeting," she said. "We need to set some kind of a timeline on this because we have elections, and we'll have this down for about six to eight weeks."

"You're looking at probably eight weeks of construction," said Baratti.

Baratti also said there is a bit of a long lead time before they can start construction.

"And it's probably why the bidding came up a little bit higher. Everybody is doing elevators," he said. "I've done, I don't know, how many in the last two or three years. It's a long lead time; it's a lot longer than it used to be. You're probably looking at four months just to get the equipment. However during that time you're still going to be able to use your elevator. They won't take it down until they're ready to start."

He said once the materials are gathered, they would meet for the pre construction meeting and move forward.

In other news, Carney gave an update on a problem at the St. Gabriel Chapel, which recently had a piece of decorative limestone fall off the north corner inside the building.

"I've got it upstairs," she said. "But what we noticed at the same time is that if you look at the raised area by the stained glass window, we have a lot of water leaks and stains. Our biggest concern is something may be going on up on the roof."

Carney said she contacted Daniel Gienapp to look at it and he said he didn't feel it was anything structural.

"I think the problem we have is that there is leaking possibly where the copper is on the roof," she said. "Possibly I think we have a seam that is splitting where the water is being dispersed," she said.

for a later date because representatives of the franchise said the owner did not have funds to repave or reseal the parking lot as the Planning Board had requested.

“We have asked the applicant to do more than what they’re proposing to do in the project,” Halkiotis said.

Halkiotis said the applicant had estimated that $10,000 would be required to reseal the parking lot above the current deteriorated asphalt. Halkiotis said at the previous Oct. 24 meeting that he was unsure as to the Board’s ability to vote down a Site Plan Approval.

According to Halkiotis, the biggest problem with not even resealing the parking lot is that the applicant wants to saw cut some of the lot to put in a new handicapped parking space. He also plans on a saw cut to the current catch basin at the rear portion of the property that has sunk down meaning it needs to be dug out and leveled to the correct position.

“In situations like this where the parking lot is already old and they’re going to be saw cutting it, where they cut the water will sit and, when it freezes, will expand creating potholes. It quickens the deterioration of the whole lot,” he said. “We had recommended a couple of times that they repave the parking lot and they have flat out refused.”

DeLuca said that Site Plan Approval should be more appropriately called Site Plan Review, and he said in most cases it is a must-pass review.

“It customarily had been an opportunity for principles from different departments to get together around a table to discuss the logistics of a big project,” he said. “It could be police, fire, engineering, electric light, any other big departments that look at the same plan and make suggestions for an applicant. They may say, ‘Hey can you move this over here or that over there?’ The underlying understanding is that zoning already supports the project and is otherwise compliant with the zoning process. Site plan review is really process to get everyone on the same page.”

DeLuca said that it has since morphed into Site Plan Approval, and usually Site Plan Approval is mixed in with a Special Permit Process, and the latter’s approval – for which the Planning Board does have a strong say – is contingent on the following of the former.

“We all know that you have the authority in the Special Permit Process, but in the Site Plan Approval process it’s actually a different quantity of vote that is required,” he said.

DeLuca did say, however, that the Board does have the power to deny a Site Plan Approval based on certain criteria covered in the Norwood Zoning Bylaw (page 125). The language states that “Site plan approval shall be granted upon determination by the Board that the plan meets the following standards.” Those standards include a landscape plan, a storm water management plan, pedestrian and vehicular safety plans, fire and emergency access, lighting issues and a few others.

Town Counsel David DeLuca met with the Board to explain the intricacies of how Site Plan Approval works in the legal world.

“But then there’s a significant statement beyond that,” DeLuca said. “The Board may impose reasonable conditions at the expense of the applicant to implement these standards.’ I think now we get right to heart of the matter articulated by Mr. Halkiotis. Do you have the leverage, the authority, to require the resurfacing of a parking lot in the Site Plan Approval process, and my answer to that is a lawyerly maybe.”

DeLuca said he suggested to Halkiotis that the Board must draw a direct link between their request for a new resurfacing, and one of the standards mentioned in the Site Plan Approval criteria.

“Maybe it has something to do with pedestrian vehicle safety; maybe it has something to do with visible intrusion by controlling parking storage; it may have something to do with groundwater, it may have something to do with storm water drainage, but you better be able to draw a straight line,” he said. “A straight line between what you think is necessary for Site Plan Approval and one or more of these standards that are articulated in your bylaw, because if we can’t do that, we’re going to have a difficult case defending.”

DeLuca said the portion of the Bylaw stating “reasonable conditions” is a key phrase, and that proportionality would be the good litmus test to figure out exactly what the extremely subjective term reasonable would mean. He said, for example, asking for a $3 million change on a $500,000 project is not in proportion. Planning Board member Debbie Holmwood said she feels the whole project is too small and out of proportion. “They just ironing the front of their shirt,” she said. “They’re not ironing the whole shirt.”

Despite that, DeLuca said it is more defensible to ask for something that’s in proportion to what the applicant would be willing to spend. Halkiotis said representatives for the franchise at 32 Broad have not shared specific numbers on what they’re already voluntarily willing to spend, but he feels the scope of the project lends itself to be in the vicinity of at least resealing the parking lot at $10,000, if not grinding and repaving at $80,000 (McDonald’s estimate).

rate with them," Greeley said. "We are coming up with ideas and are hoping to have something to roll out with them in the spring."

Another project Ernie Paciorkowski discussed was trail marking. He recently took pictures on Adams Farm with QR codes of where the three-foot wide by four-foot high by four-foot long posts should be located. Two posts eventually are planned to be located where the road splits at the Edean Trail and at the public gardens there.

"I did get a commitment from Tony (Mazzucco) that the DPW will help us build kiosks for the trails," Greeley said, noting he is using the design from a scout project in Walpole.

Two upcoming events will take place on Sat., Nov. 16. The first will be a work party at the Ellis Pond Dam for an area cleanup from 9 a.m. to noon. Volunteers will meet at the animal shelter to get gloves and loppers. People should dress in long pants and long-sleeved shirts. People can also spray their clothes with permethrin insecticide.

"It's important to wear proper footwear and bring an insect repellent like Deep Woods Off spray," Greeley said. "Most importantly, at the end of the walk or event, it's important to check for ticks. You need to look at yourself or a friend for tourists or clingers-on."

Leach added that, if you remove ticks within eight to 24 hours, there is a "very low" risk of Lyme disease.

Also on Nov. 16 at 10 a.m., Town Engineer Mark Ryan will hold a tour of the pumping station.

"The idea is that it could become accessible as a trail head at some point," Greeley said.

The Trails Advisory Committee also was invited to co-host a presentation with the Walpole Trails Committee at an upcoming sustainability series on February 6.

The committee is in the process of working on its newsletter to keep the community aware of its activities.

Leach said he wants to provide information from the Appalachian Trail Conservancy. There is information for people new to hiking about finding trails, preparing for hikes and trail etiquette.

Greeley said he spoke with the Town's information technology officer about linking this and other resources to the trails page on the Town's website.

Member Gerry Miller added that the Trails Advisory Committee and the use of the trails themselves are picking up momentum.

"I hear that people are watching the videos of the meetings and reading about the committee all the time," he said. "They are wondering when the next walks will be."

Member Ellie McConnoughy suggested doing meditative walks along the trails, particularly the Edean system.

Greeley said the committee needs to "think out of the box" to find ways to attract seniors, people with disabilities and non-drivers.

Come to the Morrill Memorial Library on Monday, December 16 at 6:30 pm for a special screening of Jerry Kelleher's new film about Frank G. Allen, "The Gentleman from Norwood." A Hot Rod SUV For All Seasons

By now you have seen the commercials on TV and magazines that boast about the power that Dodge vehicles have. Well I speak from experience that the Hemi in any version puts out serious power. I spent a week in a SRT 392 (Hemi Engine Size 6.4 liter) just under 500 hp Durango. Our Durango was white with blue stripes and black interior. The blue stripes are large and an option, my personal opinion is leave them off. The Durango does have 3rd row seating and is all wheel drive. This SUV is truly an SUV for all occasions and seasons. The style says I am a power SUV and that it is. The SRT Durango has many of the performance and style of the Charger and Challenger. The interior seating has performance written all over them with both heat and ventilation up front along with a heated steering wheel. The large touch screen is loaded with apps including performance pages and the driver can pick the driving modes for the conditions there driving. You can also leave it in the automatic mode. I tried them all and they all make for a different driving experience. In the track mode the Durango turns into a full performance machine. The exhaust note rumble can be heard as soon as the engine is started. The SRT boys even have launch control like their performance Charger, Challenger, and Jeep Trac Hawk. The 392 Durango is the real thing. The 392 Durango is for the young at heart, or for people that want to be young at heart. Big fat tires and wheels, Brembo brakes, loud exhaust all explain what the 392 Durango is. EPA 13 city 19 highway you mileage will depend on your right foot. The power is instant via the 8 speed automatic. Base price $62,995.00 destination $1,395.00. Optional equipment in our SRT Durango brought the MSRP to $76,645.00. The bottom line is the SRT Durango can fill the bill for a multiple service vehicle for the performance drive, the soccer mom or dad or grocery getter.
