Jeff Sullivan Staff Reporter

Norwood Police Department (NPD) Detective Sergeant Tim McDonagh and Justin LarRoche are running in the Boston Marathon this year to raise money for Cops for Kids with Cancer (CFKC).

The pair ran the Marathon last year for the first time and managed to raise $12,000 for the charity, which donates $5,000 increments to families with children facing cancer to help out with necessary expenses.

McDonagh said the idea to run the Marathon came in 2021 when he was on a police detail in Wellesley covering the race.

"I was 41 at the time and I had never been to it," he said. "I saw these people running and thought I could do this. The most I had ever run in my life was 10 miles at the police academy when I was 24 years old, and ever since, nothing," he said with a laugh. "In 2019 I started running to lose weight and did a keto diet, lifting weights here and there and running 3 or 5 miles on the treadmill."

McDonagh said he was almost 300 pounds when he started to lose weight in 2019. He started on the treadmill and then began running in local races. His first was the Norwood Firecracker 5K on July 4 and then he just kept going.

"That's basically all I do now; if there's a race I'll run it," he said.

School Committee braces for "difficult budget year"

Mary Ellen Gambon Staff Reporter

At its virtual meeting on Wednesday, Feb. 8, the Norwood School Committee discussed the belt tightening that is in progress as budget season looms on the horizon.

Member Teresa Stewart gave a report on the Budget Subcommittee meeting she attended on Feb. 1. The outlook was not promising, she said.

"This fiscal year 24 is really challenging," Stewart explained.

She noted that the next meeting on Feb. 15 was originally planned to discuss a budget that featured an annual 3.5 percent increase over this fiscal year's budget.

"We will not be at only a 3.5 percent increase," Stewart said.

Part of the reason is that the principals and department directors initially submitted requests for a total of 30 additional full-time employees (FTE).

"As you've heard from [Superintendent David] Thomson before, all 30 are very valid and needed requests," she continued. "There's nothing that our principals and directors and admin team requested that aren't legit and very much needed."

When the subcommittee met the previous week, the amount of FTEs was whittled down to 19.9. As of Feb. 8, that number was further slashed to 11 FTEs. Even at 11 FTEs, this accounts for a 10.4 percent increase over FY 23.

"I truly believe that everybody is looking at this as best as they can," Stewart said. "And just getting from 30 additional FTEs down to 11 has been a significant and challenging task."

Also included in the budget requests were the 14.9 positions for the English Language learners (ELL) and special education departments that the School Committee approved this school year since July 1, 2022. Those positions are federally mandated to give those populations equal access to education.

Thomson said that everyone is looking for reductions and grants to save money.

Vice President David Hiltz noted that this problem is not unique to Norwood.

"Most districts are facing similar issues, and it's sort of a convergence of things," he said. The effects of the pandemic, supply chain issues, transportation costs, inflation, escalating energy prices, and the drying up of federal emergency funding are combining to hit school districts hard at a time when they are short staffed. The 14 percent increase in out-of-district placements also is causing "quite a high hike" in costs. Stewart noted that she has been working with state Rep. John Rogers to advocate for circuit breaker funding to cover the 14 percent cost.

"I'm confident that we have solid policies and procedures that are put into place to get us through this," Hiltz added. "And we just need to acknowledge that it's going to be a difficult budget year."

Stewart added that another problem is that the amount of funding available through Chapter 70 "is still unknown." Part of that funding includes monies through the Student Opportunity Act (SOA). SOA expenses are required to be

A Norwood resident trying to do better

Jeff Sullivan Staff Reporter

Norwood resident Thomas Frey has been turning his life around the past few years and is now working to help others with opiate and substance abuse issues he struggled with throughout his youth.

Frey started using because of shyness, beginning with alcohol and other party drugs to try to fit in and become the life of the party. Unfortunately, at the beginning it worked.

"Alcohol gave me what I couldn't give myself."

Opiates followed the alcohol, leading him down a self-destructive path that could have easily cost him life several times over. "I grew up in Norwood, my father is from Norwood and works for the Town, my mom's from Norwood and she's a teacher in the Town, and I have extended aunts and uncles heavily-involved with the Town" he said.

Frey said he had a pretty average childhood. He was involved in school activities, sports and other clubs.

"I was raised with a moral compass, but when it came to substances it gave me this feeling I had never really felt before," he said. "You know, even dating back to when I was super young, I never really felt comfortable with myself, or at peace. I'd always walk into a room and in the back of my mind I was always con-Frey documented, she explained.

"We have tried really hard to avoid falling off fiscal cliffs," she explained. "But there are just so many moving challenges at one time."

The override pledge will end after FY 24, which will present the Town and the School Committee with new fiscal challenges as they decide how to move forward financially.

Chair Anne Marie Mazzola said the Budget Balancing Committee (BBC), of which she is a member, met to discuss the district's financial situation, among other concerns.

"We know it's going to be a really challenging budget year," she said. "But one of the reasons we really wanted to have this meeting even though we know that we don't have any numbers yet ... was to start the discussion on how we divide up especially things that are related to schools like Chapter 70 and Medicare reimbursement."

She added that she was encouraged to hear discussions about possibly putting Medicaid funds into a special education revolving fund.

Stewart said that the Town and the schools need to figure out a way to move beyond the override pledge after FY24 "in a way that is sustainable for everybody."

Before giving the superintendent's report, Thomson called for a moment of silence in honor of Tyler Lawrence, the Coakley Middle School student who was shot to death in Mattapan on Jan. 29.

"He was a friendly, wellliked young man by all of his classmates," he said. "That absence is deeply felt by his friends and especially the Coakley Middle School community.

Thomson added that Lawrence's classmates are "working on a way to honor him." He thanked the Coakley staff for "their loving support" and the Norwood Police Department for bringing in therapy dogs from surrounding communities, noting that the need for one for Norwood was pointed out to him.

The memorial service on Sun. Feb. 5, which was attended by more than 450 people, displayed "the true character of Norwood in the support that they are offering the Lawrence family," Thomson said.

Thomson also discussed how the school start times implemented at the beginning of this year are working and noted that there will be a forthcoming survey for families to express their views. The debate over changing the times during the previous year had been contentious, prompting new candidates to run for School Committee in the last election in opposition to the shift.

"When we actually made the shift, all those pieces were well planned, and they worked well," Thomson explained, adding that there were no "hiccups" in its implementation. Some things needed to be tweaked, such as the elementary schools having a "more expedient dismissal."

There will be a family survey going out in late February to assess the impact of the school start time changes to assess any possible need for changes.

Staffing challenges have affected the district all school year, with one position advertised last May still not filled, Thomson added. Buses have been running on time, and there has been an improvement regarding fewer students being tardy.

"At the elementary level, it's more of an adult thing than it is a kid thing," he said, adding that everyone is still "dealing with a post-COVID reality" where students and staff can be out with the coronavirus. It may take a few years for statistics on the school start times to "become valid pieces of data" because of the pandemic's aftereffects.

Also at the elementary school level, there will be more activities planned for after school, including MCAS tutoring. There have not been as many afterschool activities for middle school students this year, but Thomson said he expected that to change within the next couple of years.

"Sports transportation has still been hamstrung by driver shortages," Thomson added.

One program that has been "extremely successful," Thomson noted, is the grab-andgo lunch program on half days. The program has been particularly important for families experiencing food insecurity.

Another successful initiative, Thomson said, is the program for culturally responsive and sustainable teaching practices (CRSP). In his recent school visits, he observed aspects of this philosophy being implemented in the classrooms. Thomson will be increasing his school visits throughout the district, he added.

During the meeting, Thomson described the review of the school district by the state's Department of Elementary and Secondary Education (DESE) that is occurring this week. This review occurs every five years. The DESE team collects documents and data and conducts interviews with personnel.

"And then they give us feedback on the strengths and challenges and our current practices to use in our planning going forward," he explained.

Town refutes legislators' allegations, calling them "extraordinary"

Jeff Sullivan Staff Reporter

The Board of Selectmen met with Town Counsel David DeLuca on Tuesday to go over the allegations recently declared against the Board, Norwood Fire Department Chief David Hayes and Norwood General Manager Tony Mazzucco.

The allegations came from the offices of State Sen. Michael Rush and State Rep. John Rogers relating to actions the Board and Mazzucco supposedly took to further legislation that would have allowed Hayes to continue to work as the Norwood Fire Chief after the required cutoff age of 65 (as dictated by Massachusetts General Laws).

For a more detailed explanation of Rush and Rogers' allegations, please see last week's issue of The Norwood Record at https:// /bit.ly/3K3e0Xw.

"The Selectmen take any allegations of impropriety seriously, and while we had our own opinions on the merits of these accusations, the Board, and myself abstaining, referred the matter to Town Counsel to investigate and determine any merit to these allegations," said Board of Selectmen Chair Bill Plasko.

DeLuca went through and essentially refuted the applicability of each accusation detailed in the letter. He said the response was based on only the legal issues described in the letter and did not delve into the political aspects. He said the letter itself was "extraordinary."

"It is extraordinary in its accusatory tone towards Norwood Town officials and it is extraordinary in so far as it is based upon various misrepresentations, exaggerations, not based on facts, and is generally a misstatement of applicable legal standards," he said.

The first item was the allegation that Mazzucco "conspired" with Plasko to violate the Open Meeting Law Massachusetts General Law (MGL) Chapter 30A by directing Board members to attend a fundraiser for Senate President Karen E. Spilka on Nov. 9, 2022, and allegedly attempted to sway Spilka into bringing forward the legislation to keep Hayes on staff with $100 cash donations from Plasko and Mazzucco.

DeLuca said the allegation of direction from Mazzucco was baseless and was not a violation of the Open Meeting Law. While there were enough members of the Board present at that fundraiser to form a quorum, DeLuca said there are provisions in the law for them to attend events like fundraisers without violating the law.

"There was no meeting or deliberation as defined by the Open Meeting Law Chapter 30A Section 18," he said. "Voluntary attendance at a fundraising event does not qualify as an Open Meeting Law violation."

He said the law allows for attendance because there was no meeting and nothing within the Board's jurisdiction for them to deliberate on. He also said donations to political entities were not forbidden under the conflict of interest law MGL Chapter 268A. He added there was no evidence to suggest Plasko and Mazzucco were trying to influence the legislature with donations.

DeLuca also used this reasoning to refute an allegation of a violation of the Open Meeting Law for a meeting at the Statehouse on Nov. 17, 2022.

The letter also alleged that Hayes had illegally used Norwood public resources to lobby for his position at the NFD. He pointed out that MGL Chapter 3 states that lobbying laws do not apply to employees of a city or town. He added that the Norwood Policy for personal use of Town computers permits personal use, "as long as it is not disruptive to the work unit."

DeLuca also refuted the accusation that the five-year contract Hayes signed before Town Meeting was improper or illegal. He said the Town has the ability to negotiate contracts as "expressly authorized by MGL 41 Section 108O." And he added that the contract was contingent on Town Meeting approving the measure and the legislature passing the associated home rule petition.

DeLuca also refuted that Hayes accepted a compromise to the legislation pushed by the Norwood Firefighter Union Local 1631 that would see his contracted expanded to three years instead of five.

Lastly DeLuca pointed out that legislation like that proposed for Hayes is fairly routine and many others like it have passed recently with no conflict.

"The Dedham Fire Chief and several other fire chiefs in the state were extended during this legislative term, and the Norwood police chief was similarly extended in the past," he said, "all without the real or imagined personal or legal obstacles here."

Selectman Bob Donnelly also read out a statement summing up the Board's position and why the Board thought the legislation failed.

"The Board of Selectmen has concluded that the home rule petition failed to be enacted due to the inaccurate testimony submitted to the legislature's Joint Committee on Public Safety by lobbyists from the Professional Firefighters of Massachusetts and the lack of information received from our state legislative delegation regarding the progress of the petition," he said.

Donnelly alleged that the Board asked the legislative delegation, Rush and Rogers, to keep them informed of the bill's progress and that did not happen.

In related news, Plasko said he wanted to clarify something he said during the Jan. 26 Board of

For me and many of the residents of Norfolk County, President's Day has always held a special significance. Yes, it is a day off for some, but it is also a day to reflect on what a special form of government the United States of America has. People may not know that four of the fortysix Presidents of the United States were born right here in Norfolk County, more than any other county in the United States.

Despite this day holding significance for so many, very few actually know the origins of the holiday and why President's Day is celebrated on the third Monday in February.

President's Day was originally established in 1885 to recognize the accomplishments of and memorialize the first President of the United States, George Washington. The concept of a day celebrating a President dates back to 1800, the year following the death of Washington, whose February 22nd birthday became an annual day of remembrance.

The unofficial holiday gained widespread popularity, particularly because, even at that time, George Washington was considered a legend. So, The Norwood Record in 1879, President Rutherford B. Hayes signed legislation to make February 22nd a federal holiday, but it took another six years to be celebrated nationally.

Delving deeper into the history of this day reveals that even though most people know the federal holiday as President's Day, neither Congress nor any President has ever specified that the name of the holiday observed as Washington's Birthday be changed to "President's Day."

If the official name of the holiday is "Washington's Birthday," why is it not still held on February 22nd, George Washington's birthday? It is because in 1968, Congress passed the Monday Holiday Law to provide uniform annual observances of certain legal public holidays on Mondays. By creating more 3-day weekends, Congress hoped to stimulate the economy and give workers more time off.

This law changed two aspects of the holiday; first, it was adapted to also honor the birth of United States President Abraham Lincoln (February 12), and second, it was moved to be observed between both birthdays on the third Monday in February.

This position on the February calendar actually makes it so the celebration of Washington's birthday will never actually be held on the 22nd; the latest it can be is the 21st. In fact, of the four Presidents with February birthdays, George Washington (the 22nd), Abraham Lincoln (the 12th), William Henry Harrison (the 9th), and Ronald Reagan (the 6th), none have birthdays that can coincide with the holiday.

Why is the federal holiday celebrating Washington's birthday known as Presidents' Days? The answer is that, regardless of its noble origins, the holiday has been redefined, as it was in 1885, from a day of remembrance to a day of celebration. For many, the day has become a time to honor all Presidents, past and present.

Here at the Registry of Deeds, we take a moment to honor the lives of four Presidents born right here in Norfolk County.

The second President John Adams was born on October 30, 1735, in a section of Quincy that was formerly part of Braintree. Adams graduated from Harvard College in 1755. He taught grammar school in Worcester, and in 1758 he moved back to Braintree and began practicing law in nearby Boston. The 1780 Constitution of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, drafted by Adams, is the world's oldest functioning written constitution. It served as a model for the United States Constitution, which was written in 1787.

The sixth President, John Quincy Adams, was also born in a part of Quincy that was split off from Braintree. He attended Harvard College and was the son of John and Abigail Adams. He served as a diplomat, foreign minister, ambassador to foreign nations, and treaty negotiator. John Quincy Adams drafted the Monroe Doctrine. He was one of the greatest diplomats and Secretaries of State in American history. He became President in the 1824 election, defeating Andrew Jackson. Following his four-year term, Adams became a member of the House of Representatives, where he conducted a consistent and dramatic fight against the expansion of slavery.

The thirty-fifth President, John F. Kennedy, was born on May 29, 1917, at 83 Beals Street, Brookline, a threestory house built in 1909, located in a middle-class neighborhood. He graduated from Harvard University in 1940. During World War II, Kennedy was a PT boat commander in the Pacific theater. After the war, Kennedy represented the 11th Congressional District of the U.S. House of Representatives. He then won election to the U.S. Senate from Massachusetts. While serving in the Senate, he published "Profiles in Courage," which won the Pulitzer Prize.

What is not common knowledge is that the fortyfirst President, George Herbert Walker Bush, was born in Norfolk County on Opinion

Sullivan to seek Finance seat

Sarah Sullivan is excited to announce her candidacy for Norwood's Finance Commission. The town election will be held on Monday, April 3, 2022.

The majority of Sullivan's professional experience is in budgets and planning. For the past 16 years, Sullivan has worked as the Business Manager at Norwood Community Media, managing the financial and human resource sides of the operation. Prior to her time at Norwood Community Media, Sullivan worked as a budget analyst at Houghton Mifflin, Co. and DC Heath Publishing, a division of Raytheon. She holds a Master of Business Administration from Babson College and Bachelor of Arts in Communication from Boston College.

From 2014-2020 Sullivan served on the Board of the Turner Syndrome Society of the United States as Treasurer. While on the board, Sullivan worked closely with the Executive Director to develop and track the $500,000 operating budget each year and was part of the team that developed a comprehensive 3year strategic plan.

Sullivan is a 16-year District 9 Town Meeting member. She has been active in town committees including the Capital Outlay Committee and the DPW Building Committee. In addition, Sullivan was a leader of the Norwood High School override campaign and the Middle School override campaign. Sullivan and her husband, Daniel Sullivan, moved to Norwood 30 years ago and raised their two children, Danny and Caitlin, both graduates of Norwood High School here. Sullivan was an active parent, serving as PTO president and member of the School Council at C.J. Prescott Elementary, Coakley Middle School and Norwood High School. Sullivan also served as a teacher in the Youth Formation Ministry at St. Timothy's Church in Norwood. Sullivan said, "If elected, I hope to continue to serve Norwood, combining my passions for public service and finance. I am proud of the work I have done to support Norwood's investment in the infrastructure of our schools, and as a member of Capital Outlay and Town Meeting, I recognize the work we need to do to support all parts of the town infrastructure. There are many needs across town, and as a member of the Finance Commission I believe I can help find ways to continue to invest in a manner that is mindful of the need to work within a budget."

Greenwell to seek Selectmen seat

Shannon Greenwell, an appointed member of the Norwood Zoning Board of Appeals, has taken out nomination papers to run for Norwood's Board of Selectmen.

Greenwell has lived in Norwood with her family since 2015. As the daughter of a firefighter and public employee, serving the public has been ingrained in her from an early age. Her husband, an educator, is a member of the Norwood Trails Committee and the Norwood Cultural Council. Her daughter is an enthusiastic first grader in Norwood Public Schools and enjoyed her early education years at Saint Catherine's. "I am very grateful to call Norwood home and have always admired the level of commitment residents have for our community. Following that example, I have found opportunities at every scale to contribute to the great work taking place in our town," Greenwell said. "Building on the foundation set through my work with the Zoning Board of Appeals and shared accomplishments through my volunteer work I am excited to offer my service to the Norwood Board of Selectmen."

Greenwell is a double Terrier, having received her Master of City and Regional Planning degree after completing her undergraduate work at Boston University. Her professional experience is in policy development, project and program management, and community engagement. Her volunteer work includes leading annual Earth Day cleanups and contributing to the 150th Committee's Arts and Culture Festival, where she assisted with setup and performed as an Irish Step Dancer, going as far as to hold an impromptu dance lesson for interested children. She views coleading a Norwood Girl Scout troop as one of her greatest privileges and takes pride in helping a growing number of girls develop an appreciation of nature, community service, and entrepreneurship. Greenwell said, "I'm excited to engage with residents over the next few months to listen to their visions for our community and the ways in which I can continue to lend my skills and experience in service of the Town of Norwood."

The Norwood Record CPC considers requests for Old Parish and NHA

Jeff Sullivan Staff Reporter

The Norwood Community Preservation Committee (CPC) met on Feb. 8 and discussed with organizers three proposed projects for this year's slate of Community Preservation Act (CPA) funding.

The biggest-ticket item is the Old Parish Cemetery at $530,000 for Phase 1 of the cemetery's proposed master plan. The master plan was the result of a feasibility study also funded by the CPC. The plan was presented by Norwood Department of Public Works (DPW) Director Mark Ryan and Old Parish Preservation Volunteers organizer Patti Fanning.

"It's Norwood's or South Dedham's original cemetery, established in 1741," he said. "This project will preserve and enhance Norwood's oldest historic site."

Ryan said they are seeking the $530,000 for all three phases of construction, which will take place over the course of a few years. The full cost of construction will be $946,000, with the remaining costs paid through Town funding, grants, donations and the DPW/Cemetery budget. He said it would provide open space and enhance the passive recreation of the site, despite this primarily being a historic preservation project (CPA funds can only be used for recreation/open space, historic preservation or affordable housing).

"For many years, especially with the Old Parish Preservation Volunteers getting more actively involved, we have annual tours of the cemetery," he said. "You'll see stones up there with names like Guild, Elliot, Balch, Bird and Ellis. It's really remarkable and if you ever want to stop by the Norwood Engineering Department, we have the layout there with names of people who died in wars. Soldiers who fought in the French and Indian War, the American Revolution and the Civil War are buried there. So it's a very important historic site in Norwood."

Phase 1 would replace the current fencing around the site with a uniform black steel construction made to look like a wrought iron fence. Right now it is a patchwork of chain link fence.

"It's not very inviting and the gates are always locked. We're looking to replace that with ornamental steel picket fence at about six feet high," he said. "This replacement cost is $460,000. It's about 1,160 feet of fencing that would go in."

Ryan said Phase 2 and Phase 3 would be fixing up the entrances at Washington Street and Railroad Avenue respectively, totaling about $160,000 and $115,000.

They originally asked for $675,000, but CPA Coordinator Kristen Phelps informed Ryan and Fanning that the CPA cannot fund the entrance portions of the project because they're not technically on the cemetery parcel itself but on another Town-owned parcel. So that reduced the total request to $530,000 for the fencing and other work at the gate.

Ryan said they would work on granite paving at both entrances, the costs for Washington Street's work being $34,000, the work at Railroad Avenue $29,000.

The portions of the project to be paid for with other funds, as listed above, would include landscaping, tree installation, path-finding, trash receptacle installation and maintenance, flagpole maintenance, entrance signs and possibly a rain garden. The entrance work will require other funding as well.

"There are some drainage issues coming off the site on the north side that affect the abut-CPC Requests Continued on page 7

Dear Rusty: I am 56 and hope to hold out to get maximum Social Security at age 70. However, with all of the talk of Social Security funds being depleted, is it wise to continue with this mindset? Will there even BE Social Security benefits for folks in my age bracket? Should I think about starting Social Security benefits as soon as I am eligible? I am employed; however, I don't have a large amount of savings. I contribute to my company's 401(k) and receive the match, and I own my own home (almost paid off) with an estimated $250,000.00 in equity, but I won't be able to stay in the home long term. Any insight you can provide would be greatly appreciated.

Signed: Weary Worker

Dear Weary Worker: I don't suggest changing your strategy due to fears of Social Security not being there – it will be. Although the program is facing some future financial issues, the very worst that could happen is that everyone's benefits might be cut by 20+%if Congress fails to act to restore the program to solvency before the Trust Funds are depleted in the early to mid-2030s. In my opinion, Congress will not likely fail to act because to do so would be political suicide. The fact is, they already know how to fix Social Security's financial issues; they just lack the bipartisan spirit and political fortitude to do so until they extract every possible ounce of political capital from the issue. So, it's largely a matter of how long Congress will wait to reform the program.

Right now, the Social Security Trust Funds hold about $2.8 trillion in reserves to ensure full benefits will be paid. But Social Security now pays out more in benefits than it receives in revenue, so the extra money needed to pay full benefits is taken from those reserves. What is needed is reform which addresses the reality that people today are living much longer and collecting benefits for much longer than the program is structured to accommodate. Many possible solutions are on the table in Congress, including raising the full retirement age a bit to deal with the reality of people living much longer, and increasing the program's tax revenue by withholding a bit more from American workers. The eventual reform will likely include some variation of both, as well as other "tweaks" which further guarantee the program will be there for future generations.

As for the thought of claiming your benefits as soon as you are eligible (age 62), be aware that Social Security has an "earnings test" which applies to anyone who collects benefits before reaching full retirement age (FRA). If you are working full time when you first become ageeligible, you likely wouldn't be able to collect benefits because your benefit amount would be insufficient to pay the penalty for exceeding the earnings limit ($1 for every $2 over the limit) within one year. And, as you may already know, your age 62 benefit would be cut by about 30% from your FRA amount, while your benefit at age 70 would be about 76% more than your age 62 benefit.

So even if the worst case scenario happens (which it almost certainly won't), an across the board cut of 20+% to your age 70 benefit would yield a higher monthly payment than that same cut to your age 62 benefit amount. So, I suggest you stick with your current strategy to continue working and wait as long as practical to claim your benefits (up to age 70). As an aside, AMAC (Association of Mature American Citizens) has, for years, been proposing (to Congress) its "Social Security Guarantee Plus" which would restore Social Security to solvency for generations to come and would not require an increased payroll tax rate. Congressional reaction has been generally positive, leading us to be hopeful for a reasonable solution to the problem.

After deciding to run the Boston Marathon, he began researching organizations that he could represent and learned of CFKC through recommendations from his fellow officers and speaking with CFKC's President and Canton Police Chief Helena Rafferty.

"I learned later from (NPD) Chief Brooks that they had donated to several families in Norwood in the past," he said. "So within a couple of days I was kind of surprised - because I hadn't qualified – but they said, 'Since you're a law enforcement officer and we're a law enforcement organization of all cops, we're going to bump you up on the list.' So that was around Jan. 20 of 2022. After that I just started training."

McDonagh reached out to the department because CFKC was looking for more cops to run for charity.

"Tim knew I was into running so when he joined and got his bib from CFKC for the State Police team, he came up to me and said, 'Hey you're a runner, would like you to run?' LarRoche said with a laugh. "I said, 'Sure, why not?' It was a great opportunity to not only run one of the oldest marathons but also to work for that organization."

McDonagh said running the marathon was a full day, starting with getting up at 3 a.m. to catch a bus ride to Hopkinton.

"We took a little shuttle bus in, which is what's awesome about this team," he said. "The Boston Police and State Police take seven buses from South Boston. We have to get up at 3 a.m., which kind of sucks, but it brings us to Hopkinton with about 100 troopers on motorcycles as escorts. They get to park the buses right on the starting line."

LaRoche said the whole experience really psyched him up for the race.

"It was just exhilarating; you're running the race and the crowd just pushes you. I've heard that from other runners; that you just get wrapped up in the crowd and it's so true. It definitely pushes you on."

In that race, McDonagh came in at 4:33:43, which he felt was a good time for someone of his age and racing ability. He felt bad for LaRoche. who could have done a lot better if he didn't stick with his partner.

"I'm fully convinced he could have started much faster at the beginning, but he's such a good guy he stuck with me to mile 16, then he took off which was part of the plan," he said. "The other guy, Brian Sweeney, who ran for the Boston Police, he took off at the beginning and ran a 3:40:00."

LaRoche said he remembered it a bit differently.

"Timmy's funny and can get kind of anxious; he didn't think he was going to do as well as he did. I'm a bit stronger a runner so I stuck with him for like the first 15," LaRoche said. "We were actually running faster than he thought he could run."

LaRoche came in at 4:13:12, and said he did a lot better than he thought he was going to do for his first Boston Marathon.

"I was thinking about Heartbreak Hill and thought I was going to start walking by then, but I didn't," he said. "I was just so motivated and the crowd really encourages you so it was just an awesome experience all around."

Both LaRoche and McDonagh said they were happy to represent Norwood by challenging themselves and raising money for a good cause.

If you would like to help them along, go to https:// bit.ly/3xni51b. The pair raised $12,000 for charity last time around and would like to raise $15,000 this year.

Norwood hosting pruning lesson to help train would-be volunteers

Jeff Sullivan Staff Reporter

The Norwood Community Orchard needs some help.

MEND Organizer Mark Negron said he's working with the Boston Food Forest Coalition to bring in an expert on pruning to help train residents in the best ways to keep Norwood's orchard growing and productive.

The seminar will take place at the Community Orchard at Endean Park on March 4 at 11 a.m., with a rain date of March 5 at 11 a.m. He said the reason for the seminar is to help get Norwood's residents involved in the process of growing community food.

"The main goal behind this workshop is to train some volunteers to help keep Norwood's food forest trees pruned properly, and the side benefit is it's free to anyone and a lot of people have fruit trees and an interest," he said. "This is a great opportunity to draw those people in and get people engaged in this kind of activity; whether it's for themselves to bring home or to help around the community."

Negron said the community orchard in Norwood will be a step in the right direction to help fight food insecurity in the Town and provide more local produce for residents who might otherwise have a tough time getting it.

And pruning works as it keeps the trees healthy and productive. Negron added that there is also a practical concern with pruning.

"If you have a semi-dwarf tree for instance, they can grow 12 or 15 feet tall, you want to prune them so you can harvest as easily as possible," he said. "Through pruning, you can generally keep that height down to eight or 10 feet if you want. And fruit will grow better too. With fruit trees a lot of times they'll overproduce and you have to sometimes ting site, the Chestnut Green the building. Condominiums," he said. "So the master plan calls for some rain gardens, which is a really cool idea and we're looking forward to putting that in."

Also, Norwood Housing Authority (NHA) Executive Director Sean Barnicle came before the CPC to request $350,000 for the replacement of windows at the McDonough Housing development at Nahatan Village.

The windows were originally installed in 1968 with a proposed lifespan of 30 years. The Department of Housing and Community Development extended that lifespan to 2020, and now Barnicle said they are in dire need of replacement.

"You can see the deterioration of the components," he said. "The weather tightness and efficiency of the windows are in jeopardy... I think this project is money well spent and something that will help preserve and support 152 units of elderly disabled housing at Nahatan Village."

According to Barnicle, the state of the windows is leading to further deterioration of

It should be noted that CPA funding is for one-time payment items only, which are generally referred to as capital improvements. The funds are not to be used for maintenance or staff funding. Barnicle said he knows that this appears like a maintenance issue, but only on the surface.

"This is one source of money; we will also be getting funding from the state and the NHA will be contributing its own funds as well," he said, adding that the total funding for the project would be $1.3 million, with all contributions. "This project will add value to the real property; it's going to prolong the useful life of the real property; it's going to be permanently affixed to the real property so that removal would cause material damage, and it's intended to be a permanent installation."

The newest addition to Norwood's grocery store group opened at the former site of Workout World near Route 1 and Dean Street.

Co-founder Jim McQuade said the idea is to streamline the grocery shopping experience. You order from the store's website before you go, drive up to the location, have your foodstuffs brought out and placed in your vehicle and away you go. It's more efficient for both the customer and the store.

"Every supermarket has an apple pyramid for example, but have you ever seen a 90-percent-empty apple pyramid? No because there are always too many apples. Not all products displayed are for sale. It's there for visual appeal, and it's wasteful."

McQuade said this example highlights a lot of the inefficiencies within supermarkets today, that advertising can be more important than the actual foodstuffs they carry. And the cost of that advertising gets eaten by the customer.

Addies hosts grand opening

So, with that in mind he opened this new super market in Norwood, the first of what he hopes to be many in Massachusetts.

"Norwood is a community on the move and Addie's is just the latest step in that," said Town Manager Tony Mazzucco at the opening. "We're the home of Moderna, with cutting-edge research tech, we're the home of FM Global, a Fortune 500 company at the leading edge of their industry, and Addie's true focus is families, which something that's very important here. We're happy they started this here in Norwood. We hope that this is the first ribbon-cutting of a thousand stores, and I told Jim we're looking forward to the ribbon cutting when you open a big new corporate headquarters here to manage those 1,000 stores."

McQuade said they have partnered with a local food bank network that will redistribute any food that is soon-to-be expired so that it doesn't go to waste.

"And then anything truly rotten goes into compost," she said. "We use Farm to Field, and they pick up our compost and so we have literally zero food waste."

Sustainability Manager Jennifer Eno said that while they haven't been able to install solar panels on the parking lot yet, similar to what's at the Norwood Central MBTA Commuter Rail stop,

February 16, 2023

they are looking to do so in the future.

"With full control of the canopy and the awning that's out there now, we did the math, and with this size awning we could offset the entire electrical demand of this operation."

Eno said they use about a quarter of the electricity that normal grocery stores use, about 400 amps, as opposed to 1,200 amps. The average single-family home uses between 100 and 200 amps.

McQuade said customers not browsing shelves will save customers a lot of time and money, as they won't have to browse to find what they need and it's no secret that stores strategically place items to entice buyers to buy. The rotisserie chicken at the exact opposite end of the store's entrance is a great example. Stores have been known to price such items so low, even at a loss to get customers to buy other things.

McQuade said they are currently hiring, starting at $20 an hour and $27 for supervisors.

sumed with what other people thought of me or how I appear or how I come off."

He was introduced to substances at a young age, and then when he was about 16 years old he tried opiates.

"Within two months of that I was intravenously using heroin," he said. "It was a very rapid takeoff for me. I went from having a lot of friends, being super involved with my family, community, sports and things like that and then all that went away very quickly. My experience was that as soon as I got involved with this stuff, I loved it so much all bets were off."

Frey said he went through a process many opiate addicts go through. Basically what happens is the reward centers of the brain get rewired to desperately want opiates (this is a very simplified explanation. For a more detailed scientific explanation, go to https://to.pbs.org/311tLDJ). Frey said for him it got to the point where he would do anything and say anything to get what his brain and whole body was telling him he desperately needed.

"A good way to describe it would be that opiates were my love," he said. "You could take everything away from me in this world that meant something and I would be fine as long as I had opiates. That's how my brain worked, and that went on for the better part of six years."

During that time, he was in and out of detox centers, constantly lying to people trying to help him. He would say anything in order to get opiates. He actually got a release from a detox center so he could attend his high school graduation. He lived on the streets for a while too, panhandling for money so he could buy the drug.

At the time of his most debilitating addiction, the services available to young people were not good. The stigma surrounding addiction was also not a help.

"I do believe it's getting better now, especially as the years go by and, unfortunately, overdose deaths are through the roof. Now it is more talked about and there are more options and services out there," he said. "But you take it back about 10 years ago when I was in the grips of this thing there weren't a whole lot of options available."

Frey has benefited from the improved services and is now working within its circle.

"I started out working in a sober house in a volunteer position living with a bunch of guys and helping to monitor the house," he said. "I did that for about six months through a program down at Plimpton that has since closed. That was my first experience. Then some friends of mine who helped me get sober were opening an outpatient clinic with a structured sober living component and I worked there for awhile too."

He worked long hours with patients, driving them to programming and medical appointments, participating in group therapy, helping to clean and cook, and generally just being there for those seeking help. He decided he wanted to do more.

"I was just like, 'Well, I've been through this and I know how to help people and I actually like going to work," he said. "I was sober and, ironically, I was bartending, just because I like the high-paced, chaotic work environment of a restaurant. I think that's just how I'm wired. Now, working in this space with addicts, alcoholics, people suffering from trauma or mental health disorders, it just kind of came naturally. It has become my passion.'

Frey said he is now helping to run a new treatment center in Walpole called Resilience Behavioral Health. He hopes he can help as many in need as possible. He found in his treatment that having someone there to talk to who has gone through this experience can be immensely helpful. "That was instrumental he

"That was instrumental, because I felt that a lot of people who I was talking to back in the day couldn't relate to me," he said. "But if put in front of someone who has gone through the exact same thing and knows and understands the immense amount of pain, then I was willing to talk about it. At first I didn't want to, because I was ashamed of the things I had done. But if you put me in a room with someone who had also been through it? I could speak freely and feel like I wasn't being judged. That's what I want to do for others now."

He then said he was "kind of disappointed" that the firefighters under Hayes did not give him a great deal of support during the process, at firefighters. Plasko said he wanted it made clear that this was not the case.

"After watching the tape I could see that with the closeness of the comments how people could think the last comment was meant to be attached to the comment about being disappointed with our firefighters, and as I have said it was not," he said. "I have had five experiences which I could refer to as close calls. In three of those incidents, our fire department paramedics played a vital part in ensuring that I would be here this evening. I could not ever call them disgusting."

healthy. However, other fruit trees, like the apple trees Norwood has planted, don't have that mechanism.

"They can get wildly overgrown and not only do you have to limit the number of branches and the direction of their growth, you even have what they call suckers down at the base," he said.

Negron said this is the result of the fact that apple varieties all stem from one single plant and are propagated through cloning and grafting. Basically, if you plant a seed from a mackintosh apple in the ground, it's almost certainly not going to grow into a mackintosh apple tree. Apple genetics don't really allow this, so when you want to plant one single variety, you have to clone the plant by grafting a piece of the tree onto a new root system. Usually, you want to use root systems adapted to the climate the apple tree is growing in, and you have to take into account those plants' issues as well when pruning.

I drove the vehicle 30-50 miles a day then a 180 mile road trip. I did charge the battery every night with a regular 110 house current and gained about 25 miles each night and the same during the day. The EQB did not have an A/M radio or heated steering wheel. Other than that the SUV is a great SUV that would make a great second vehicle. It is very quiet and comfortable power is also ample at any speed. Prices start at $58,050 plus $1050.00 destination as tested MSRP $59,350.00.

COPS WOULD APPRECIATE YOUR SUPPORT!

Officer Justin LaRoche and Det. Sgt. Timothy M. McDonagh will be running the 2023 Boston Marathon for the great charity Cops for Kids with Cancer. This is our second year, we ran last year and raised over $13,000. This year our goal is just a bit higher at $15,000. Most of our donations come from coworkers, family, friends but we were very lucky to have big donors like Ernie Boch and Peter Catanese. We plan to have police patches made as well for the public to buy. All funds raised by CFKWC are given to the children and families diagnosed with cancer, generally a $5,000 check. Several Norwood families have received the benefit of these checks! I know times are tough now with the economy so we are trying all methods of getting our story out to as many people as we can to help this organization and its mission.
