

Anxiety over change orders? High School spending under close scrutiny

Brad Cole
Staff Reporter

The cost of change orders associated with the new Norwood High School construction project has been reasonable so far. However, some recent and upcoming expenditures threaten to take a considerable amount out of the project's contingency budget.

If all the remaining items in the Pending Change Order (PCO) log are approved, a total of $1,678,322 will remain in the contingency budget, which originally started at $2.3 million. This represents $621,678 in contingency costs, or a little over 27 percent of the contingency budget.

This does not include the addition of $432,280 due to a difference in electric bid results or the $476,618 for a photovoltaic (PV) solar system for the gymnasium roof. Line items for both of these were built into the initial project budget, meaning it was not necessary to take the $908,898 out of the contingency budget to cover these costs.

"The PCO's keep coming, and we're only 61 percent done with the project," Permanent Building Construction Committee (PBCC) member Bill Kinsman said.

The PBCC approved a pair of change orders at last Thursday's meeting. Change Order 11 was the $476,618 PV system, while Change Order 12 represented $1,858.75 in miscellaneous costs. Normally, change orders are much more expensive than this, but the majority of costs associated with Change Order 12 were offset by an $18,912 credit that came from eliminating the sealant at the top of non-rated walls. This sealant was deemed unnecessary, and the cost associated with this returns in the form of a credit. The change order also included a credit of $758 due to modifications of a chain link fence.

The most expensive cost associated with Change Order 12 was the $12,786 for a filter fabric for the turf field. Other costs include $5,587 for ductwork modifications in the mechanical room, $1,634 for "5 minute idling" signs and $1,522 to install a key switch back box and conduit to allow for a key to control the electrified door hardware.

While this change order was only $1,858.75, numerous other expenses are on the horizon. Several large PCOs were approved at the Aug. 12 meeting, including $20,570 for changes to the school's library.

"The work there was to modify the cabinetry, add three rows of computers and bring in the infrastructure to do that," Steve Theran of Compass said, adding the $20,570 price tag also includes a 4,500 lumen projector and screen.

Another expensive item was the $26,366 public address system (PA) system for the Press Box at the field

SPED transportation costs revealed

Brad Cole
Staff Reporter

A total of $1,208,816 was spent on SPED transportation for the 2009-2010 school year. This money was used to transport 72 students in-district and 66 students to out of district locations.

This $1,208,816 total comes in above the budgeted amount of $921,665. Part of this is because $146,839 was used to prepay the third year of the lease of the 17 vans used by the department. If this amount is subtracted from total spending, SPED spending was still $140,312 over budget.

"2012 is going to be a very critical year for us, and it will help if we prepay," School Committee member Paul Samargedlis said.

A total of $989,078 was budgeted for FY 2008-2009 SPED transportation service, which ended up costing $806,443. During this time, the schools were utilizing contract services from YCN Transportation. Richard Armour of YCN Transportation projected that SPED transportation costs in FY 2010 would be $792,000, due to a decline in enrollments. Despite this lower projection in costs, the decision was made to take the SPED transportation program in-house last year. It appears the decision has proved costly.

Of total spending in 2009-2010 school year, $518,585 was available to the schools in the form of an Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) grant, which is given to states and public agencies that provide early intervention, special education and related services to children with disabilities. Neighbors review Wilson St. plan

Staff Reporter

Several neighbors attended Monday night's Planning Board meeting to express their concerns about a two-lot subdivision at 43 Wilson St. The two-lot subdivision in question is owned by James Roche and Diane Eppich, and they are looking to split the property and build a pair of houses on the land.

This would also lead to the creation of a long driveway and cul-de-sac at the site. The plan presented at the June 21 Planning Board meeting called for the removal of the cul-de-sac. Instead, the site would feature two long driveways, each leading to their respective house. The driveways in question would be approximately 400 feet long. However, the Planning Board had some concerns about this plan, and a new one was presented at the Aug. 16 meeting.

"We've taken the cul-de-sac and shifted it over, allowing us to move this house forward," Don Myers, of Norwood Engineering, the Senior Project Manager grant, $690,231 was spent by the school department on SPED transportation in FY 2010, $116,212 less than in FY 2009.

The School Committee hopes total costs to the schools will decrease in FY 2010-2011. A total of $995,663 has been budgeted, $75,000 more than the budgeted amount for FY 2009.

"We figured we could live with an overall increase of $75,000," Ralph Dumas, Director of Finance and Operations for Norwood Public Schools.

If they stay within this budgeted amount, a total of $519,587 will be covered by the IDEA grant. The remaining $476,076 will be the responsibility of the Town.

Members of the School Committee were provided with a budget summary sheet outlining the basic costs for FY 2010. A more detailed breakdown of SPED transportation costs will be outlined at their Aug. 25 meeting. This breakdown will include costs associated with the McKinney Vento Cost Sharing program, which ensures educational rights and protections for homeless children. When a homeless family is placed in temporary housing, the family is allowed to choose whether to have the child attend public school in their town of origin or in the town they are placed. These two towns will then share the cost associated with transporting the student to school.

For example, if a homeless Boston student is temporarily placed in Norwood, the family can choose to have the child educated in Norwood or Boston. Regardless of which town is chosen, Boston and Norwood split the cost associated with transporting the student.

"We don't have a specific line item budgeted for McKinney Vento," Dumas said.

However, they will identify the costs associated with McKinney Vento, which was described as an unbudgeted surprise, though the program is not new to education systems.

"McKinney Vento is beyond our control," Samargedlis said, though he added it was important to identify the price associated with it.

School Committee member Courtney Rau noted it is impossible to create a trend for these numbers, as McKinney Vento represents costs associated with homeless students placed in a transitional service. They might be in such a service for two weeks or six months, making it very hard to determine the approximate cost per student.

"It's going to be impossible to predict how much we'll be spending year to year on this," Rau said.

In addition, the school department's new Director of Transportation was announced at last Wednesday's School Committee meeting. Sean Danaher is the third person to hold this position in a little over a year. He takes the place of Kristen Correia, who in turn took the place of Joseph White.

Danaher has nine major goals for SPED transportation: no outsourcing, reduced labor costs, better vehicle upkeep and maintenance, improved route efficiency, route sharing, better quality drivers, a reduction in general department expenses, improved communication between departments and improved communication with families.

"[Danaher has] been looking at our transportation routes," Dumas said. "He's looking at trying to share routes with other districts and looking to make sure our routes are efficient."

The idea is that increased efficiency would lower the program's costs and reduce the potential need for outsourcing.

"If we do have a need for outsourcing, we will make sure to use the bidding process," Dumas said.

Currently, the entire SPED transportation is run in-house, though there was need for outsourcing last year. Because the buses and vans weren't ready for use in July 2009, the School Committee entered into an agreement with the Canton-based TLC Transportation, who administered the program until July 14 and was used on a day-to-day basis after that date. TLC was paid $36,000 to administer the program for an eight-day period last July. Their service, which included a $1,600 startup fee, cost approximately $4,300 per day.

Dumas added that another goal for the 2010-2011 school year was improved communication.

"We're making sure we have drivers that interact well with parents and understand and are sensitive to the needs of children," Dumas said.

Home Market Foods wants parking reduction

Brad Cole
Staff Reporter

Home Market Foods is looking to install a 129.8 foot tall, approximately 23,000 square foot freezer at their 140 Morgan Drive location. This expansion requires approval from several boards, including the Planning Board, as the plan has triggered a site plan review.

Currently, the 140 Morgan Drive site is home to Home Market Foods and a Home Depot delivery site. However, Home Depot is leaving the area, allowing Home Market Foods to significantly expand their operations.

Home Market Foods is requesting relief in the form of a reduction in the number of parking spaces required at the site. Currently, there are 125 parking spaces at the site, and they plan to increase this number to 222. There is also an area set aside for 57 additional spaces, should they become needed in the future. They are required to have 347 parking spaces available.

"We don't believe we will need the spaces with the employee count we have," Daniel Campbell of Level Design Groups said.

Currently, there are 192 employees spread across two shifts. In addition, there have been up to 50 seasonal employees working at the site. However, not all of these employees drive to work. An internal survey completed by Home Market Foods indicated that approximately 50 percent of the employees carpooled to work.

"I'm just worried that 222 parking spots might not be enough," Planning Board member Ernest Paciorkowski said, because if Home Market Foods is to receive a tax increment financing (TIF) agreement, they will need to increase the number of employees at the site by 100 by 2012.

Campbell feels that the 222 spaces will be able to accommodate the employees that currently use the site, and may be adequate for an additional 100 employees.

"We're talking about 100 more parking spaces for the employees that we have now," Campbell said.

Related to the issue with parking was the number of trucks that use the site. Currently, about 64 Home Market Foods, 54 Home Depot and two UPS trucks access the site daily. Obviously, Home Depot leaving the site will reduce the truck traffic significantly, but Home Market Foods is taking measures to ensure there won't be trucks queuing outside the site on Astor Avenue. They are doing this by installing a paved, loop road on the site.

"There's a lot of activity, and there is a lot of congestion," Campbell said. "What we tried to do with this loop road is add queuing space. This allows 12 trucks to queue off of the street."

In the past, the most trucks seen at the Home Market Foods site at any given time was ten, meaning the loop road should be long enough to allow for even the heaviest amount of traffic there.

"This will undoubtedly eliminate the queuing on Astor Avenue," Campbell said.

A third issue the board had with the site was the odor emanating from the building. At this point, Home Market Foods is under an administrative consent order to reduce the food smell coming from the site. As a result, they are pilot testing a new technology to see if it will help control the odor. Traditionally, this technology is used to control dust and particulates leaving the site, though Home Market Foods hopes it can be adapted to minimize the odor as well.

"The goal is to control the odor or minimize it to the point where it is no longer a nuisance," Corrine Shultz of Home Market Foods said.

Campbell added that the freezer would not add to the odor problem.

"There is no production there," Campbell said. "It's a cold storage facility," and as such, will not contribute to the smell that comes from manufacturing food.

The freezer's height was also a concern, but the decision regarding the 129.8 foot tall building falls in the hands of the Zoning Board of Appeals. Even though this is out of the Planning Board's purview, members had some comments on the structure.

Planning Board member Paul Donohue asked if they would be able to expand horizontally instead of vertically. Mark Carnicelli of CNC Associates, the architect associated with the project, said this was not a possibility.

"Home Market owns a lot of land that is unusable due to its wetland condition," he said, noting that while Home Market Foods owns 27 acres of land, only eight acres are actually usable.

Campbell added, "We are hemmed in, not only by the wetlands, but by the no build zone."

SNATCHING HEADLINES FROM TRAGEDY

The suicide of the so-called Craig's List Killer, Philip Markoff, is understandably the talk of the town.

But what is being said, by local media and politicians, is frustrating and irresponsible.

The Boston Herald undermines the tragedy inherent in the story by trying way too hard to channel a bad Mike Hammer novel.

Markoff committed "a slow, gruesome suicide" we are told, even though the method used to kill himself remained in debate as of Tuesday (plastic bags, ballpoint pens and razor blades have each been suggested without full verification). Markoff, according to the Herald, was "apple-pie handsome." His one-time fiancée was a "New Jersey bombshell." The victim was a "a bee-stung-lipped New York actress." The newspaper's target readership these days, we assume, is gumshoes and watch-twirling grifters.

The Boston Globe, though less melodramatic, shared a particular problem that the Herald had — a full and accurate depiction of the crime.

Both papers dance around the situation the young victim put herself in. She was an "actress" and a "masseuse," they go out of their way to tell us, mostly avoiding any additional innuendo.

No disrespect to the dead intended, but let's not fall prey to revisionist history. This is a horrible crime that snuffed out a young life far too early. But let's be brutally honest, this was a girl who rented a hotel room to service a line-up of clients by advertising her services in the "adult" section of Craig's List.

We assure you that if the victim wasn't white and attractive, the descriptions would have been far more blunt, much less forgiving and, were it not for the handsome medical student angle, a one- or two-day story at best.

Isn't there a story to be told of how a beautiful young woman fell into such a sordid business? What was the catalyst? Where were her family and friends while bad, ultimately lethal, choices were being made?

We are not blaming the victim, we are trying to understand how she became one, perhaps long before Markoff even entered the room that night. We are searching for the sliver of a silver lining a cautionary tale might play in saving someone else from the same fate. It is one thing for friends and family of a victim to be in denial. It is another for an allegedly impartial media to fuel it.

The dailies, as well as television stations, are also giving City Councilor Steve Murphy plenty of attention as he demands answers from Sheriff Andrea Cabral over how the suicide could have happened on her watch. The family, he says, has been denied justice because Cabral failed in her duties.

We've said it before and we will emphasize it again. Murphy, despite his constant resume floating, is one of our hardest working councilors when it comes to budgetary and public safety matters. But he is transparently seizing the circumstances to bolster his run for State Treasurer while seeking a bit of revenge against the woman who beat him when he ran for sheriff.

Where was Murphy when other suicides took place? Did he bother to weigh in while a yearly average of 58 inmates under local lock and key have tried, and failed, to off themselves? Or about the four others who have succeeded in recent years? Oh, but there weren't any TV cameras back then. This time is different, so grab the pancake makeup and a boom mike.

Did Cabral fail to protect Markoff, or other inmates? Time will tell as facts emerge. The bottom line here, however, is that a murderer — a repeat offender and possible serial killer — is no longer a burden on taxpayers and has spared all involved a trial that would dig up far too many skeletons. Justice wasn't served in a courtroom, but it was accomplished nonetheless.

East Coast Aero approved

Brad Cole
Staff Reporter

The East Coast Aero Club bought out the Norwood Flight Academy, and appeared before the Norwood Airport Commission on Wednesday, Aug. 11, to apply for a commercial permit.

Mark Holzworth, president and owner of the East Coast Aero Club appeared at the meeting, alongside Mike Thomas of the Norwood Flight Academy. Much like the Norwood Flight Academy, they offer aircraft rental and flight training.

"[The transition] should be seamless," Holzworth said. "We're using the same office [at 101 Access Road], the same parking, the same fuel vendor and the same employees."

Holzworth has over 30 years of experience in both civil and military aviation. He served 33 years as a member of the United States Air Force and National Guard. During this time, he reached the rank of Lieutenant Colonel.

The East Coast Aero Club was founded in 1985 and has locations in Bedford, MA and Nashua, NH.

Norwood Memorial Airport Manager Russ Maguire noted that the East Coast Aero Club meets the airport's commercial standards.

"The company does meet our minimum standards," Maguire said, adding, "Their paperwork is in order and their insurance is on file."

As a result, the Norwood Airport Commission unanimously agreed to revoke the Norwood Flight Academy's commercial permit and issue a new commercial permit to the East Coast Aero Club.

Four other commercial permits were issued for Fiscal Year 2011 on Wednesday. Norwood Air Multi-Engine Training, New Horizon Aviation, Swift Aviation and Blue Hill Helicopters all had their commercial permits renewed by the commission. Maguire noted that all four companies had their paperwork on file with the state. In addition, the Norwood Airport Commission approved three new tie-down leases for FY 2011.

The Airport Commission also received an update on the runway 10-28 reconstruction project from Jeff Adler, Senior Project Manager for Dubois and King. The Town received a $572,850 grant from the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) on July 19. This grant covers 95 percent of the costs associated with the project. The project has a $603,000 price tag. The remaining five percent will be split between the state and town, each paying 2.5 percent of the cost.

The construction work will be done by the West Bridgewater-based IW Harding Construction, who bid $420,000 for the project.

"They anticipate being able to start shortly after Labor Day," Adler said, adding, "It's only a 30-day construction period, so even if we start after Labor Day, we should be done in early October."

Letters to the Editor

NOT THE WHOLE STORY

To The Editor:

You might say that I was inspired to write this letter after reading Peter O'Brien's critical letter in the August 12, 2010 Norwood Record (RE: SPED Transportation spending).

There is much more to be said than what Mr. O'Brien says. Do the drivers get the same benefits? Does the school make a profit? Are the students being served as well, and many other specifics.

Mr. O'Brien should be more specific and not use inflammatory rhetoric unless his intention is to incite emotions. Regarding professionals, there is more experience in dealing with small children within the school system than there is in a small transportation company.

behind Norwood High School.

"In Whitman-Hanson, there was no PA system included," Owner's Project Manager Tim Bonfatti said. "It should have been included here, but it wasn't because of the model school."

Another large expense is the $15,583 to install on/off switches at all 221 variable air volume (VAV) boxes in the school. It costs approximately $70.51 per box to install. Each of these VAV boxes is associated with a transformer, and can be turned off remotely. The installation of such a switch allows for turning off individual units should they need repair or maintenance.

These items will be featured on a future change order.

There are several other expensive items in the PCO log, including the cost of approximately 1,000 cubic yards of unsuitable materials buried at the site. These materials were buried out behind the track, and included an old baseball scoreboard, leaves and utility poles. It is estimated that it will cost $100,000 for removal and replacement of these materials.

There will also be work at the Peabody Road and Nichols Street intersection. Currently, the estimated cost of this work is $50,000, but that is just an estimate. It could be considerably more expensive or significantly cheaper.

"The idea is to get rid of the island and reconfigure the intersection," Bonfatti said.

The PBCC allotted $14,010 to redesign the intersection. This is just the cost of a new design, it does not reflect the construction cost.

Solar panels approved

Brad Cole
Staff Reporter

The Permanent Building Construction Committee (PBCC) approved of a 77.7-kilowatt photovoltaic (PV) system for the new Norwood High School.

The solar panel system would be installed on the gymnasium roof, which can hypothetically hold a 130-kilowatt system. A total of $500,000 was set aside in the $68.6 million construction budget for such a solar system, and this amount allows for the installation of a 77.7-kilowatt system. It will cost $476,618 to install. This number includes the contractor and subcontractors' 15 percent markup for materials.

This system was approved as Change Order 11. Unlike most other change orders, this $476,618 does not come out of the project's $2.3 million contingency account. The total project budget included a $500,000 line item for this system, and that will be utilized to cover the costs associated with the system and its installation.

The cost of installing this system has decreased greatly in the past year: at the Mar. 11 PBCC meeting, it was reported that $500,000 would get the school a 63-kilowatt system. This number increased to 71-kilowatts, then to the 77.7-kilowatts it is today.

"We started at $10 per watt in the initial budget," PBCC member Paul Meyer said. "We forecasted at $8 per watt when we started this a year and a half ago. We benchmarked at $6 per watt, and we came in at about $5 per watt."

The $10 per watt figure was based on the system used at the Whitman-Hanson Regional High School, which was installed nearly 10 years ago. The 50-kilowatt system installed there cost $500,000, or $10 per watt. As the years pass, PV technology has become less expensive, allowing for a more powerful system with a cheaper price tag at Norwood High School.

The system also honors Dr. Michael Crowley's request for a small portion dedicated to the science labs for use in experiments. The idea is that a small section of the PV system generating a low voltage- approximately 12 volts- could flow to the science lab and be used for educational purposes.

"This stand alone system is included," Steve Theran of Compass said.

The system will only produce a small portion of the power consumed by the new Norwood High School.

"Power produced is four percent," Theran said, meaning that it won't greatly reduce the electric costs associated with powering the building. However, because the school will be producing energy, they will receive Renewable Energy Credits, which can be sold on the open market.

An added bonus is the cost of maintaining this system.

"They basically do take care of themselves," Meyer said, meaning maintenance costs associated with the system are minimal. As long as the system is installed at a 21-degree angle, rain and snow will slide off of involved in this project, said.

Instead of a pair of driveways, the plan now features an approximately 380-foot long, 24-foot wide roadway leading into an 80-foot diameter turning circle. This provides the necessary frontage for both lots on the site, and gives adequate access to public safety vehicles, should they need to access the site.

"This is suitable for fire and utility vehicles," Myers said.

The roadway in question will be a private way, with ownership split by Roche and Eppich. There is a mutual maintenance agreement, meaning they and all future owners have agreed to split the cost and pay for all costs reasonably necessary for proper maintenance of the road.

Roche and Eppich are requesting seven waivers for the site, and most of these passed without comment. However, the requested waiver of street lighting concerned several Planning Board members, considering the length of the proposed private way: 380 feet.

"That's quite a distance without any lighting," Planning Board Chairman E. William Bamber said. "I assume, for safety purposes, there should be some sort of lighting there."

Planning Board member Ernest Paciorkowski noted that overhead lighting could cause problems for the abutters that live around the subdivision, and member Marco Brancato added that if they required lighting on the roadway, they would also need to require shielding. However, there was agreement that 380 feet was a long way to go without any sort of lighting.

"I think there should be some type of lighting, even if it's just a light post at the end of both driveways," Bamber said.

Roche said he would have no problem installing a light pole of some sort at each driveway.

Myers noted that the subdivision is surrounded by neighbors, and a few of these abutters have requested shielding or fencing around the lot. Myers said they are receptive to this idea.

"Jack [Roche] will be discussing with each of the homeowners who have a concern with this about what they'd like to see from their property," Myers said.

Several abutters were in attendance at Monday night's meeting, and they had a chance to express their concerns with the project. A few expressed concerns over privacy, as the lot is surrounded by houses on almost all sides.

"The problem I have is it really is in our backyard," abutter Jim Naughton said. "It really is a backyard for us, even if it's a side yard for the new house."

He asked if it would be possible to move the new house back, to provide some additional distance between the two buildings. Myers estimated that the current plan places the houses at approximately 120 feet apart.

However, if the Planning Board feels there is an issue with privacy, they can require a fence or shielding.

"These privacy issues can be addressed with a fence," Town Planner Steve Costello said. "The board is empowered to require a fence, if it so chooses."

Abutter Charles Wright of Orleans Road had concerns over whether this subdivision is legal.

"I'm not fully convinced the applicant has the right to put in a private right of way," he said, noting he could not find private right of way listed in the use table in the Town's zoning by-laws. "I see nothing that says you can create new ones."

Costello said the bylaw calls for frontage on a street. In the zoning bylaw, a street is defined as a public or private way, meaning such a use is allowed.

"I have no doubt that we're creating legal frontage," Costello said.

Wright was also concerned about what blasting at the site might do to nearby homes in the area, though Bamber noted that blasting is the purview of the Fire Department, not the Planning Board.

"They will go in and review the properties prior to blasting," Bamber said. "We don't have any jurisdiction over the blasting itself."

No decision was rendered at the Aug. 16 meeting, though the public hearing was closed. The earliest a decision could be made is at the Planning Board's Sept. 13 meeting.

Tidepools Alive!

The New England Aquarium brought all sorts of sea creatures to the Morrill Memorial Library as part of their "Tidepools Alive!" presentation on Tuesday, Aug. 10.

The program was lead by New England Aquarium Educator Jackie O'Mara, and she introduced nearly 100 children to the sea stars, snails, hermit crabs, mussels, clams and horseshoe crabs.

"These are all animals you can find at the beach," O'Mara said to the children in attendance.

The horseshoe crab proved to be a big hit with the children, almost all of whom took a moment to pet it.

"The horseshoe crab is definitely a big attraction at the end," O'Mara said. "We tend to find that the sea stars and the hermit crabs get the most attention."

Due to high demand, three sessions of Tidepools Alive! were held, with about 30 children attending each one. Each featured a presentation about the creatures who live in tidepools and the importance of this wildlife. This presentation was followed by a hands-on session, in which the children in attendance had a chance to touch, pet and feel the creatures of the not-so-deep.

Childrens' Librarian Kelly Unsworth was pleased with the response and interest shown in the program.

"I've been hoping to do this for a long while, and this is the first time we've done it," Unsworth said. "The kids were very excited."

Tidepools Alive! was part of this summer's Go Green @ Your Library program. This is the annual program sponsored by the Massachusetts Regional Library System, which challenges Norwood youth to read numerous books over the summer. As part of this program, there have been several eco-friendly events at the library, including Tidepools Alive! and the weekly Recycle, Reuse, CREATE! event, which takes place every Wednesday, from 10 a.m. to noon.

These events are appropriate for children in Kindergarten and up, and are sponsored by the Friends of the Library.

While the summer season is almost over, it isn't too late to join the summer reading program. Young readers have until Aug. 23 to sign up for the Go Green @ Your Library program, Since there isn't enough room to expand horizontally, Home Market Foods is looking to expand vertically. The structure would become one of the largest buildings in town. To draw a comparison, the tower atop Town Hall is approximately 120 feet tall, meaning the freezer is about 9.8 feet higher than Town Hall's highest point.

Planning Board Chairman E. William Bamber questioned the height of the freezer, saying, "The height bothers the devil out of me. It's more than double what we allow in town."

He is also concerned how the Norwood Fire Department will respond should the freezer catch fire, leading him to request a comment from Fire Chief Michael Howard before he votes on the structure.

"The Fire Department will sign off on the building," Carnicelli said, adding that they are looking into an internal fire suppression system for the building. They are considering two options: a sprinkler system or reduced oxygen levels in the building.

The tower would be 129.8 feet tall in a limited manufacturing district that allows for buildings up to 60 feet tall. The area in question allows for large structures, as cell phone towers of up to 140 feet tall can be placed there, but buildings of that height are not allowed without a variance.

There are no plans to place anything on the roof of the freezer, but Carnicelli noted they might be required to place a beacon there by the Federal Aviation Administration.

Home Market Foods will appear before the Zoning Board of Appeals on Aug. 24 to apply for a dimensional variance.

Dust once again an issue

Brad Cole
Staff Reporter

One of the recurring issues neighbors have with the new Norwood High School construction site is dust control. The dry summer has caused these problems to once again come to the forefront.

Compass Project Management received an email from abutter Nora Cavanagh regarding the situation there.

In her email, Cavanagh wrote, "I live on Peabody Road, and we had a terrible time on Friday and Saturday [Aug. 7 and 8] with dust from the school. I need to get water down every day, even when they are not working, and many times a day when the construction is active."

She added that trash from the site, including foam and cups, were finding their way to her house.

There is no denying that the construction site is dusty, so Agostini Construction and Compass are working to deal with any issues that arise.

"The [water] truck is running about eight hours a day," Brian Jarvis of Compass said, adding that the vehicle has been out on the site almost nonstop for the past week.

Michael Moisé, Executive Manager for Agostini Construction, confirmed that the water truck runs over the whole construction site multiple times per day. However, the hot summer weather causes the area to dry quickly, and this dryness causes the dust to spread.

In addition to the email from Cavanagh regarding the situation, District 4 Town Meeting member Anne Haley stopped by the weekly High School community meeting to discuss the problem, saying the issue with dust was especially bad last weekend.

"You get this dust inundating your house and your yard," Haley said. "It is a mess."

Haley noted that aside from the ongoing issues with dust, work at the new Norwood High School construction site has gone well.

"It's been a really dry summer, and people are having a hard time," Haley said. "Things have been going really smoothly, but the dust is causing problems."

Agostini Construction and Compass will continue to look into dust control at the site, and continue to water the area in an attempt to keep it under control. Ultimately, one of the best ways to control dust is rainfall, but dry weather has kept the precipitation away.

the system. However, someone will need to go up to the roof to remove any leaves or other items that could block sunlight from reaching the PV panels.

In order to determine if this system was appropriate for the new Norwood High School, members of the PBCC, Theran and representatives from Munro, Levangie Electric and Agostini Construction took a trip to the Cummings Building on Route 128 in Woburn. This building features a similar 98-kilowatt system.

"[This PV system] is the bracket system we preferred from the Woburn visit," Theran said.
