US Court of Appeals partially favors BEH

On Aug. 15, the U.S. First Circuit Court of Appeals partially ruled in favor of Boston Executive Helicopters (BEH) regarding its combined motion – previously denied in federal district court – to enforce the 2019 settlement agreement between it and the Town.

The reversal pertained to opposing interpretations of a lease executed between the Norwood Airport Commission (NAC) and BEH, and their dispute over whether it allowed an easement favorable to FlightLevel Norwood (FLN).

The lease in question – regarding a parcel of Airport space referred to as the West Apron – was a key term of the settlement that temporarily resolved BEH’s 2015 lawsuit against the Town, in which it contended that the NAC and FLN had conspired to prevent it from obtaining a fixed base operator (FBO) permit.

An FBO permit holder can provide a wide array of aviation services, including the sale of fuel, but for one to be able to conduct business effectively, it also requires land.

In 2015, FLN was the Airport’s only FBO, and it held – and still holds – the vast majority of its apron and hangar space. Since 2010, BEH had sought an FBO permit and, to that end, had completed an NAC requested and Town and Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) approved fuel farm and hangar by the end of 2012. However, unable to reach

MBF nets $28,000 for Falmouth Road Race

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Matt Brown Foundation (MBF) announced this week that it managed to raise more than $28,000 with the help of 10 runners in the Falmouth Road Race (FRR) this past Sunday.

Matt Brown said he was thankful to all the runners and those who donated to the team.

“It was definitely a warm one for the runners, but everyone finished and I’m incredibly proud of our runners,” he said. “I think we raised $28,000, just between the 10 runners, and so overall, it was just an absolute success.”

Runners this year included Marykate Galvin, Thomas DePoalo, Katie Hiltz, Cameron Francis, Will Kenny, Sean O’Neill, Jessica Cesario, Sophia Canova and David Hiltz Jr.

“This was actually our first year as a foundation so we were able to get 10 bibs,” Brown said. “We’re super grateful to the FRR and the Numbers for Nonprofits (FRR’s charity arm), who were able to get us in. The FRR has been close to our family and friends of our family for a very long time. I got pushed in the race in 2011 with Lucas Carr and then in 2017 with Austin Glaser. I’ve been going down for years and years watching everyone run. We had friends and family run it in the 1980s and 1990s, and as I’ve gotten older, more and more friends have been running.”

ConCom: Young trout in Traphole Brook a big deal

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Norwood Conservation Commission (ConCom) met on Aug. 17 in a virtual format and discussed a recent wildlife survey concluded at the Traphole Brook.

The brook was recently opened up by the removal of the Mill Pond Dam for the purposes of cooling off the water and thereby (hopefully) increasing the local wildlife. Conservation Agent and Environmental Planner Holly Jones said there have been incremental increases in much of the local wildlife, but the observation of newly-hatched young trout in the brook was a big cause for celebration.

“It was a ridiculously hot day, it was 96 degrees and I think the water temperature was actually in the 70s, which is much hotter than you want for brook trout,” she said. “But we did find young brook trout who had been hatched this year in the stream, both downstream and where we had just created the new stream itself. That was really exciting.”

ConCom Chair Stephen Washburn emphasized this with his own apparent excitement.

“It’s incredibly exciting Holly,” he said. “When I joined the ConCom, the former Conservation Agent Al Goetz and I talked about fishing – I took some interest in casual fishing – and he told me it had been a really long an agreement with the NAC regarding the lease of apron space, it ultimately filed suit.

As part of that lawsuit's 2019 settlement agreement, BEH was granted its FBO permit, and was offered leases for the West Apron and another lot in order to do business.

As outlined in the court's opinion, during settlement negotiations, a major point of contention between BEH and the Town concerned the latter's proposed inclusion of an easement in the West Apron lease permitting FLN to bring trucks onto it to access its fuel farm. BEH disputed this condition and entered into the settlement agreement only after the Town's legal counsel had stated in open court that – based on a Board of Selectmen vote approving BEH's settlement terms – there would be no lease easement.

The easement dispute continued, with district court ruling in late 2020 that the executed settlement agreement did not specifically state that the Town had to provide BEH with an easement-free lease, and that the “standard form, non-exclusive lease agreement” that it did require left the door open for encumbrances, despite the Town counsel's announcement to the contrary during the prior year's settlement hearing.

BEH consequently appealed for the first of three times regarding enforcement of the settlement. During this process, it also signed a five-year lease on the West Apron, noting its absence of language regarding encumbrances, while the Town maintained that the lease's integration clause superseded all prior agreements and granted FLN its easement.

In its Aug. 15 decision, the court ruled in favor of BEH regarding its lease, with Circuit Judge William J. Kayatta writing that there is no reason why it “must be viewed as inconsistent with a prior obligation to provide a West Apron lease without an easement.” He adds that nothing in its integration clause “renders moot the issue of whether the parties, before signing the new lease, agreed that there was to be no such encumbrance.”

Kayatta states that it is “crystal clear” from BEH's stance during settlement negotiations that there was to be no easement and adds, regarding the “non-exclusive” term, that “it is hardly self-evident that the word as used here was intended to allow Norwood to turn around and encumber the property so as to fundamentally interfere with its intended use.”

As a result of this reversal, this provision of BEH's appeal was remanded to district court in order for it to “fashion an appropriate remedy to the extent that Norwood has yet to provide a lease for the West Apron free of any easement in favor of FlightLevel.”

The court also ruled on three other provisions, affirming – for each one of them – the lower court's prior denial of BEH's motion to enforce the settlement.

The first concerns BEH's contention that the NAC has not supported its FAA petition seeking permission to remove TOFA (taxiway object free area) markings that would provide it with more space to park aircraft, and that it had also breached the agreement by seeking to increase TOFA markings in areas around the BEH hangar. The court ruled that the Town has met its settlement requirements, thus far, by submitting a letter to the FAA – albeit late but with no damage done – supporting BEH's petition, while adding that the Airport's increase of TOFA markings is beyond the agreement's stipulations.

Norwood Day on the horizon Volunteers needed

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

Norwood Recreation Department Superintendent Travis Farley said Norwood Day is a hectic, stressful, and chaotic time when it takes place. He said the trick is to get ahead of it as much as possible.

“Planning starts in January, and so right now everyone's booked and everything's set,” he said. “We're just trying to line up a few things as it gets closer, but as far as planning goes, to be honest with you we're kind of in the home stretch, and almost locked and loaded.”

Farley said that doesn't mean the day of Norwood Day gets any easier. There's always something that needs doing at any given time, and they are always in need of helping hands.

“Something of this magnitude always takes a lot of hands to make the day a success, and we always hope to get about 35 or 40 volunteers for something like this, but the reality is we never really get what we need,” he said. “We're always looking for

The second addresses BEH's complaint that the Town had not distributed copies of all emails and correspondence by and between the NAC and BEH or FLN during the first 18 months after the settlement's execution. While the court's opinion acknowledges that BEH's motion for reconsideration did cite newly discovered emails that it claims should have been produced earlier, it waived that argument by not raising it in its opening brief.

The third deals with BEH's allegation of the Town's exclusion of it from meetings with the FAA regarding the NAC's creation of a joint corrective action plan (JCAP). This plan was a requirement of the FAA's 2018 ruling against the NAC in response to a formal complaint filed by BEH at roughly the same time as its lawsuit. Noting that BEH had not cited any ongoing or future negotiations with the FAA related to the JCAP, the court found no basis to believe that the agreement would be breached in the future.

On Aug. 17, the NAC went into executive session before its regular monthly meeting to discuss the case. After about 40 minutes, it held a brief open session, during which it approved all commercial permits – including BEH's FBO permit – for FY2023.

Its main agenda item – the continued discussion of BEH's Airport activity and behavior – was tabled until next month; earlier that afternoon, the BEH legal team had participated in a post-trial hearing regarding the March 16 Superior Court verdict in favor of FLN.

The NAC typically meets at 111 Access Rd. at 4 p.m. on the middle Wednesday of the month. For more information, visit its page on the Town website.

Nuggets get ice time, Plasko blasts transit hub housing law

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Norwood Board of Selectmen, the Skating Club of Boston (SCB) and the Norwood Nuggets met on Tuesday, Aug. 23 for the Board's regular meeting and approved an amendment to the original Payment in Lieu of Taxes (PILOT) agreement the Town had with the SCB.

The amendment okays the Norwood Nuggets to enter into a five-year agreement with the SCB that would allow the group to use the SCB's facilities for practices and home games within the South Shore Conference on Sunday mornings.

Selectmen Chair Bill Plasko explained that PILOTS are set up when a nonprofit like the SCB wants to contribute to its host municipality, and while the original PILOT set up a mechanism for local organizations like the Nuggets to get ice time if it became available (and an agreement with said organizations could be reached). Plasko said an agreement was never reached. Instead, the SCB has been paying the Town in lieu of ice time. SCB Executive Director Doug Zeghibe said that has recently changed.

"It took some time to work through the needs and availability and so forth, but with a lot of flexibility, and no acrimony, we were able to work something out that we're really happy with," he said. "We're really looking forward to better serving the Norwood community."

Zeghibe said the group reached out once again the spring to initiate conversations and, this time, the two organizations were able to hash out a deal.

"This was a breath of fresh air and we really appreciated the new leadership approach," he said.

Nuggets Program Development and Co-Activities Director Ian Moorhouse said it means a lot for the kids to be able to play in their hometown.

"I represent nearly a thousand families in Norwood, and we are very excited that we could get the conversation going," he said. "We've been telling our families that hockey is staying in Norwood, and that's pretty critical when you're trying to get three kids to multiple places for practices. We thank all of you, and Bill for being the champion to get all this happen. It's been pretty critical. Sept. 1, we'll get our skates on the ice."

Zeghibe said they were able to accomplish this by ending several of their more short-term agreements with other clients.

"What we did to make this ice available was not to renew the contracts that we could," he said. "We have other long-term contracts, 10-year contracts, that we needed for the bank in opening the facility, but where's there's a will there's a way."

Selectman Matt Lane asked about increasing the Nuggets' ice time, since originally the group wanted more. Zeghibe said they would work with the group to get them as much ice time as is feasible.

"We've made a commitment to the partnership that as ice time becomes available, we'll reach out to them and see if it works," he said.

The Board voted to amend the PILOT so that the SCB could end its cash payments to the Town and start providing ice time to the Nuggets at what Plasko called an, "incredibly reduced rate."

In other news, Plasko related news that the Department of Housing and Community Development (DHCD) guidelines around the proposed new zoning regulations, known as 3A, designed to increase multi-family housing around transit hubs, has been made available to affected municipalities. Plasko said the finalization has not improved his outlook on the law.

"I think it's a horrible piece of legislation. It's a mandate on the communities, it doesn't help us voluntarily increase housing, it requires it and mandates it, and that's not a good practice."

Selectmen Chair
Bill Plasko

The new law would require Norwood to allow denser zoning around its MBTA Commuter Rail Stations, to the tune of creating zoning that would allow another 2,700 units (that's not to say it would require the Town to build

What Are My Wife's Benefits While I'm Living and as My Widow?

Dear Rusty: I will be 70 in January and my wife will be 65 in February, at which time we will both go on Medicare. I am currently working, and my approximate Social Security benefit will be around $2,900. My wife was a stay-at-home mom and, therefore, has minimal Social Security benefits on her own. At 65 she is eligible for $870 and at full retirement age will qualify for $990. A few questions: if she starts to draw benefits at 65, what would be her total spousal benefit? If she waited until her full retirement age, what would the amount be? Of greater concern, what would be her survivor benefit given the same criteria as mentioned above.

Signed: Planning Ahead

Dear Planning Ahead: Based on the Social Security amounts in your email, your wife is eligible for a spousal benefit while you are both living. Her spouse benefit when she claims will consist of her own Social Security retirement benefit plus a spousal boost to bring her payment to her spousal entitlement. Spouse benefits are computed using full retirement age (FRA) benefit amounts, so if your age 70 benefit is "around $2900" then your FRA (age 66) benefit amount (known as your "primary insurance amount") should be around $2,225. Your wife's base spousal boost would be the difference between her FRA amount and 50% of your FRA amount, so her total benefit, if taken at her full retirement age, would be about $1,112 (her $990 plus a $122 spousal boost). But taken at age 65, both her own benefit and her spousal boost would be reduced. At age 65 your wife's total benefit would be around $963 (her own $870 plus a reduced spousal boost of about $93). Regarding your wife's survivor benefit as your widow, if she has reached her full retirement age (66 years and 8 months), at your death she would get the same amount you were getting when you died — the $2,900 you will get by claiming at age 70. Your wife's survivor benefit as your widow will replace the smaller spousal amount she was receiving while you were both living. Since your wife will be already collecting a spousal benefit from you, if she has reached her FRA when you pass your wife will be automatically awarded her survivor benefit at that time. If she hasn't yet reached her FRA when you pass, the spousal portion of her benefit will stop but she can request a reduced survivor benefit early. In that case her early survivor benefit will be actuarially reduced by .396% for each month before her FRA it is claimed. If you were to die in the month your wife turns 65, her early survivor benefit would be about $2668.

One final thought about Medicare: if you continue to work and have "creditable" healthcare coverage from your employer, you can defer enrolling in Medicare Part B (coverage for outpatient services), thus avoiding the Part B premium until you stop working. If your wife is covered under your "creditable" employer healthcare plan, she can also defer enrolling in Medicare Part B until that coverage ends ("creditable" is a group plan with at least 20 participants). However, enrolling in Medicare Part A (coverage for inpatient hospitalization services), for which there is no premium, is mandatory to collect Social Security after age 65.

those units, just allow them through zoning).

The law was proposed as a way to help increase multi-family housing in communities that may be using zoning regulations to keep density low, property values high and the necessary average income of its residents very high so as to be able to afford to live there. However, Plasko said he felt it still wasn't worked out correctly, to say the least.

"There have been a couple of changes that have been perhaps favorable to some of the communities, and I know I raised a lot of pain when it first came through, and generally speaking they haven't done enough changes," he said. "I think it's a horrible piece of legislation. It's a mandate on the communities, it doesn't help us voluntarily increase housing, it requires it and mandates it, and that's not a good practice."

Plasko said he felt it could be an unfunded liability to the Town through increased demand on schools and other Town services. He also said he feels that the properties that should already count towards the 2,700 units are not being included because of affordability maximums put in place by the law, which he feels do not make sense.

"It restricts the affordable housing component to 10 percent," he said.

Plasko pointed out that the proposed 25 percent affordability proposed for the 150 units at 259 Lenox St. would not have counted towards the 2,700 units. The developer pitched the 25 percent affordability component as something desirable for the Town, as it would then have counted the whole building towards its Chapter 40B law requirements (if the Town doesn't have enough affordable units or land dedicated to affordable housing the state allows developers to skirt certain local zoning laws to get those affordable units in).

Plasko said he felt this put the Town in an awkward position.

"And, in fact, if you look to see if we might get credit for the lofts next door of the (Norwood Central) MBTA Parking Lot or Avalon Bay, we would not be able to get credit for those either because it says if there are units under another DHCD program like 40B or 40R or what have you, that can be over 0 percent, but it can't be more than 20 percent," he said. "And again, we have 25 percent on those and I think most towns that had to have affordable housing went for the 25 percent so they could count the whole development as affordable units, otherwise under 25 percent you can only count the actual number of units that have the affordable designation. I still think it's a tricky law. I still think it's not fair at all to the communities, and we can all thank our legislatures for passing it on down to us."

Principal: "Award result of teamwork"

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

Norwood High School Principal Dr. Hugh Galligan said this week that while he's grateful for the recognition from the Massachusetts School Administrators' Association (MSAA), he couldn't have done what he did to earn that praise without his team.

Galligan said the 2022-2023 High School Principal of the Year Award should first and foremost go to his staff, faculty and students at the Norwood High School (NHS).

Dr. Hugh Galligan recently received an award from the MSAA, but he said it was all a result of the work of his staff and students.

"It's a tremendous amount of collaboration at NHS," he said. "From our students, from our staff, our families and this tremendous sense of care for our students, every single person works as hard as they can to make the NHS experience a positive one for students, where students feel like they belong and are connected to their learning. So many people have put in so much effort to make that happen and I'm so grateful for that."

Galligan said he's worked with the MSAA before, and found it to be a helpful organization. He said they provide professional development and guidance for school administrators around Massachusetts. He said this is also a collaboration, as many principals from similarly-sized schools share their experiences of what worked, what didn't, and what they're looking to try. He said that's invaluable for someone in his position. There's only one NHS Principal, for example.

"I've participated in their professional developments and conferences and collaborated with my fellow principals from other towns through that network," he said. "They're not a top-down organization at all. They're meant to provide a vehicle for collaboration and support for school administrators. And I would say that for me as a high school administrator especially, that can sometimes be a lonely position. At other levels you might have other schools with like five elementary schools and five time since any real trout had been seen in our waters. Seeing the pictures of the baby trout in particular, was just really exciting to me. It was a real, fist-in-the-air-at-my-desk kind of moment."

Jones said the survey was led by the Massachusetts Department of Fish and Wildlife, which also went north of Sumner Street to look at the wildlife there. She said they found large eels, a full grown 10-inch brook trout, a type of catfish and more.

"It was a great day and I'm very excited," she said. "I think last year they had found a few trout downstream of the dam, but they were all stocked we think. They were all the same size, indicating that they were leftover from stocking, but now we're seeing that the brook trout are successfully reproducing, which is just awesome."

In other news, Jones reported that a peregrine falcon nesting box was installed at the tower of Norwood Town Hall. She said ConCom member John Gear built the box and installed it, and said that if it successfully attracts the attention of a peregrine falcon mother looking for a home (real estate prices notwithstanding), it will be one of 50 such nesting areas in the state.

"That installation went off without a hitch and I think the next step is to get a camera up there, which I think NCM (Norwood Community Media) agreed to help with, and then just watch for falcons," she said. "It's outside of wetlands but definitely conservation-related. I think right now there are only 49 nesting pairs of peregrine falcons in the state, so we would be number 50 if we got one. Their populations were reduced because of DDT use in the 1950s. They're just starting to make a comeback now."

"There were so many people involved and it just worked out great," Gear said.

Also, Jones said a resident recently reached out to her regarding phosphorus levels in the Town's waterways. At the previous ConCom meeting, members discussed a recent report card from the EPA and the Neponset River Watershed Association (NepRWA) regarding two failing grades at Meadow and Germany Brooks for E. coli and phosphorus levels.

Jones said that since the Town has an approval process for charity car washes when they're held on public properties and parking lots, they could conceivably regulate them so as to lessen the phosphorus phorus impact on waterways. "I suggested to the Board of Selectmen that they include a sort of checkbox that the applicants agree to use a soap that doesn't contain phosphorus," she said.

Phosphates are used in detergents to soften hard water and increase the cleaning effectiveness of the soap, but phosphorus can be hazardous to the environment, as it tends to increase levels of algae and water plant life which can decrease dissolved oxygen levels in waterways, causing damage to the local ecosystem. It can also cause toxic algae blooms, like the cyanobacteria that recently caused the State Department of Conservation and Recreation to ban dogs from Stony Brook in Hyde Park for a time.

"I provided a list of a few soaps that met those criteria and I'm hoping they'll take that up and sort of look at it favorably," she said. "It seems like a pretty easy tweak. Most of those car washes are in the Meadow Brook Watershed, which has elevated phosphorus already, as we talked about last week."

Vice Chair Catherine Walsh also brought up the issue of oil and grease, and Jones said one recommendation for nonprofessional car washing is to get your runoff to go to grass and not down a catch basin.

"Soil is much better at treating those types of things," she said.

Jones also pointed out that commercial car washes have more stringent requirements to clean and basically de-oil their wastewater and are known to work with the community for charity events.

"That's something I would like to think about and talk with the Department of Public Works about if there are ways we could bring barriers or that type of thing," she said.

Walsh said they might be able to place temporary inserts into the local catch basins when car washes are taking place to catch any excess oil and grease before it goes into the stormwater system. Jones said they would look into it.

This led to a much broader conversation about education around stormwater systems and how residents' actions have consequences. Washburn pointed out that many residents still think stormwater systems and sewers run to the same places. In reality, they do not. Jones said they would think about how to educate residents on this issue.

In that vein, Jones said recently there was an incident at Meadow Brook where the stream seemed to turn white. She said they have not been able to determine the reason as of the date of publication, but she said they are investigating.

people were going to come out because it was kind of the first real event, but a lot of folks came out and we're kind of hoping to build off of that and have a good year. It far surpassed what I thought it was going to be. People were still kind of nervous but it went remarkably well. This year should be a blast."

According to the Town, there will be more than 200 tables and organizations at the event. The day kicks off with fireworks at the Coakley Middle School on Sept. 9, followed by the parade the next day at 10:30 a.m. with the annual street fair to follow at the Norwood Town Center. The day will feature a age 21+ food/beer tasting, kiddie rides, rock climbing and racing. Buttons are $3 before the event and $5 day of.

"Obviously, there is no cost to the taxpayers for this event," he said. "We have about 15 to 20 sponsors who lined up and donations we collected from the buttons that pay for police details and marketing costs, and things we don't have sponsors for," he said.

Farley said they usually sell a few thousand a year.

"It's hard to ballpark, but we generally sell around 4,000 to 5,000 buttons a year," he said. "It's a lot of buttons. We generally get around 6,000 or 7,000, so we've never sold out but we get pretty darn close."

Buttons can be purchased at the Town Hall, the Morrill Memorial Library and the Norwood Civic Center.

principals, but with most towns, unless you have a larger district, there's probably one high school administrator, and so you find that level of collaboration in school leaders from other cities and towns and this organization helps you to do that."

Galligan said while he's appreciative of the honor, he and the district are not resting on their laurels.

"In education, there's always a sense that even if you make progress, there's always more to do," he said. "I think fulfillment is not the right word. There is a sense of pride in what we've achieved so far but there's always so much more progress that can happen – that's the nature of education, right? You're always looking for opportunities to enhance what you're doing."

The award itself, according to a press release, was bestowed due to two main initiatives: a study of the high school schedule in 2020, and the implementation of a Portrait of a Norwood Graduate.

It should be noted that the 2020 schedule study is not in any way related to the five-year school start time study and the changes that took place district-wide this year. The NHS study, Galligan said, was centered around giving students more leeway in their course selection. The study concluded last year and was implemented for the 2021-2022 school year.

"The study revolved around what classes do students take and what options they have to be able to accumulate credits over time," he said. "We felt that students had limited voice and choice in their courses. That was kind of the first indicator that this was something to look at, and we're always looking for opportunities to help our students experiment with lots of different things and get lots of types of exposure, especially in the early grades, to allow them to figure out what they're interested in and what they're not interested in, so they can choose learning more relevant to prepare them for college and or career."

The MSA also singled out the Portrait of a Norwood Graduate program because of its focus on the 5Cs of communication, collaboration, creativity, critical thinking and citizenship. The idea was to encourage students to develop those general skills in their education, as they helped to build a complete person during the education process.

"Principal Galligan has been an innovator for our high school and an asset to the district as a whole, and this is just a small sampling of his accomplishments and impact over the past few years," Superintendent David Thomson stated. "I am pleased to see him recognized for his work and dedication to our Norwood High School students and staff, and congratulate him on this honor."

Norwood Bank and Foxboro Federal to merge

Norwood Bank and Foxboro Federal Savings today announced their plans to merge in order to create one stronger community bank. The new bank will have a new name and branding which will be developed prior to the completion of the merger. With more than $900 million in total assets, the combined banks will have a very strong capital position and the resources required to maintain the highest levels of service.

"This is a merger of two well-capitalized community banks with very similar histories, visions, and cultures," said John Galvani, President and CEO, Norwood Bank. "The goal is to create one larger, stronger community bank with an expanded branch footprint and more resources to better serve our customers."

When asked why the banks are merging, Dennis Parente, President, Foxboro

Federal Savings, said, "Given the dynamics of today's banking environment, Foxboro Federal must evolve into a larger institution. The most beneficial way to do this for our customers and employees is to combine with another strong community bank."

"This merger will enable us to stay ahead of a rapidly changing banking industry, remain competitive, and allow us to better invest in our people, technology, products, and services," added Galvani. Benefits of the merger to customers, employees, and the community include:

* Additional deposit insurance through Massachusetts Deposit Insurance Fund (DIF), providing protection beyond the $250,000 guaranteed by the FDIC for all customers

* Four full-service branch locations – Foxboro, Norfolk, Norwood, and Plainville

* No changes to current banking relationships as every employee from both banks will remain in their roles with opportunity for growth

* Foxboro Federal and Norwood Bank's shared passion for community investment will only continue to grow as the new entity will provide additional resources to increase donations through an enhanced charitable foundation. Galvani will remain as President & CEO after the merger is complete. Parente will be retiring but will remain on the board of directors of the combined bank.

The merger has been approved by both banks' boards of directors. Based on the way Foxboro Federal Savings is organized, its customers must also approve the merger. These customers will receive more information and a proxy ballot in the coming months. It is expected the name of the new bank and other details will be announced before the end of the year.

founded the MBF two years ago, at the start of the COVID-19 pandemic.

"I wouldn't recommend anyone doing that (a pandemic start), it was a little challenging at first, but our support system truly came thru in 2020," he said. "In 2021, we had our first event, our golf tournament, and then we had our participation in the fall Boston Marathon. We had Lucas and I running along with Marykate Galvin. We followed that up with two bibs in this last April's Boston Marathon with Lucas and I again and Jessica Rooney. We had our golf tournament again in July and now the FRR."

Brown said the money they raise goes to help others who have been affected by spinal cord injuries.

"Recently, we helped an individual and their family renovate their house for accessibility," he said. "I teamed up with the Boston Bruins Foundation, the Thomas E. Smith Foundation and the Travis Roy Foundation to get AJ Quetta his car last May, and then in July we were able to give a good chunk of money to Marie Conway."

Brown said Conway originally suffered a spinal cord injury back in 1979 and had been driving a modified van for the last 20 years.

"Last August it finally just died out on her," he said. "So in February, she reached out to us and we were able to work with Mobility Works. She had some money set aside, and we covered the rest. We were able to get her an accessible van. So this $28,000 we raised from the FRR is going to be able to help quite a few individuals who may need renovations to their house, or some could go towards an individual looking for a new van. we just committed $15,000 to Christopher Boshar on the North Shore looking for a new van costing $80,000. Their GoFundMe just started this week and when I saw they were at $65,000, I gave them a call and said, 'I wanted to let you know the MBF will cover the rest.' So they're getting a new van."

Brown said while getting a whole organization off the ground wasn't easy, Norwood and the surrounding communities have been extremely supportive.

"I'd say in the last year we really got the ball rolling and hit our stride, and I owe everything really to our support system," he said. "I was lucky enough to have a support system around me when I was going through high school and college and the years after. They got me through all the tough times."

Brown said the steadfast support from friends, family and others throughout the years is what got him through his injury. Now, he wants to help bring that support to others.

"That support system has been unbelievable, I've been incredibly lucky," he said. "I see individuals facing the same challenges I faced. And their families are facing the same challenges we faced, yet some of them don't have a support system like I have. So it was time for the village around me to expand and become a village for someone else. It's really hard to put into words what we've been able to do. I'm lucky enough to have my name on the foundation, but it's truly because of everyone who donated, supported us or just spread the word of what we're doing."

CLIMATE CHANGE: WHAT IT MEANS FOR NEW ENGLAND

The Morrill Memorial Library is partnering with the Ashland Library and other Massachusetts libraries to bring a virtual program to our communities on Thursday, September 8 at 7:00pm via Zoom.

Quentin Prideaux presents the basic science of climate change and its effect on New England. Combining powerful images of the early effects of climate change with concrete data on what is happening right now, this presentation is both moving and enlightening. The talk will cover the impacts and causes of climate change, the actions we need to take, and what it all means for the Northeast.

Quentin Prideaux is a Partner in the management consulting firm Alder Associates, and a Board member of Sustainable Wellesley. He has a degree in Physics, an MBA, and a Masters in Sustainability from Harvard Extension School. He lives in Wellesley with his family.

Quentin has long been engaged with climate change action and began giving talks in 2012. He continually updates his material to cover the science, the impacts of climate change, the actions we need to take, and what it all means for Massachusetts and the Northeast.

Registration is required. Please register by visiting the library's website, norwoodlibrary.org/morrillcalendar.

DISCUSSION WITH THE AUTHOR OF "THE FAMILY ROE"

Join the Morrill Memorial Library, Newton Free Library, and over a dozen other MA libraries on Monday, September 19 at 7:00 pm for a virtual talk with Investigative Journalist Joshua Prager about his deeply researched book, The Family Roe: An American Story. With abortion rights poised to fall, The Family Roe, which was named a finalist for the 2022 Pulitzer Prize, offers extraordinary insight into the Supreme Court's most divisive case and its plaintiff, Norma McCorvey.

The Family Roe is an engrossing family saga that confronts a half-century of propaganda and myth. Prager spent years with Norma; discovered her personal papers, a previously unseen trove; and witnessed her final moments. He also found the unknown Roe baby, Shelley Thornton, whose conception occasioned the lawsuit. Prager's profile of Thornton for the Atlantic, adapted from the book, made worldwide front-page news. Hailed by critics on both sides of the debate, Prager's astonishing book helps us to look with honest eyes at the five decades of struggle that brought us to where we are today.

We are delighted to welcome Tiziana Dearing, host of Radio Boston, as our moderator.

Registration is required for this virtual event. Please visit the Norwood Library's website to sign up and receive your Zoom link: norwoodlibrary.org/morrillcalendar.

NORWOOD 150TH ANNOUNCES ROLLING TOUR OF NORWOOD CHURCHES

The Norwood 150th Evangelical Committee is pleased to announce a seven-week rolling church tour event, from mid-September to the end of October.

In 1972, as part of Norwood's 100th Anniversary celebration, Norwood arranged for anniversary services at 11 of Norwood's places of faith. Each service was the only anniversary-linked religious event on its day, and there were other religious events during the year, including a massed ringing of the bells and a massed choir event at the Junior High School. In 1997, religious events were scaled way back for Norwood's 125th Anniversary celebration, as were all other types of events. One inter-faith service was held at the First Congregational Church – Norwood's oldest church by a wide margin.

This year, the events at the individual churches are shorter so that the entire program of events will fit into a month-and-a-half, which has been dubbed a "rolling tour." The churches that have signed up and chosen their dates, time slots, and program details have all chosen a program with these elements: An Open House, available tours of the facilities, and information about the church, on flyers, posters, or other medium.

No matter how well you think you know Norwood's faith community, you will learn some interesting facts, see some striking architecture, and meet some fascinating people over refreshments.

Here is the schedule so far. Additional churches have committed to the tour but are still considering dates and times. Their schedules will be announced as they are finalized.

SUN, SEP 18: St. Catherine's of Siena Catholic Church, 549 Washington Street, 2:00 to 4:00 pm. United Church of Norwood, 595 Washington Street, time TBD.

SAT, SEP 24: Trinity Community Church, 234 Walpole Street, 11:00 am to 1:00 pm. Heritage Baptist Church, 615 Washington Street, 1:00 to 2:30 pm. Emmanuel Lutheran Church, 24 Berwick Street; and Grace Episcopal Church, 150 Chapel Street, both from 1:00 to 3:00 pm.

SUN, SEP 25: First Baptist Church & Anglican Church of the Redeemer, both located at 71 Bond Street, 12 to 2 pm. First Congregational Church, 100 Winter Street, 2 to 4 pm. SAT, OCT 1: Fulfilled Life Ministries, 661 Pleasant Street, 2:00 to 3:30 pm. SAT, OCT 8: Waters Church, 668 Walpole Street, 9:30 to 11:30 am. SUN, OCT 30: First Church of Christ, Scientist, 12:00 to 2:00 pm. St. George Orthodox Church, 6 Atwood Avenue, 2:00 to 3:00 pm.

Dave Penza, an acoustic solo artist who hails from Wrentham, will open the concert, performing "The Story of My Life", a walk through his musical memories from childhood through the present day. Andrew Geano, a Boston-based singer-songwriter who's been performing in the Metro area since 2011, will follow with his unique style of deep, enigmatic acoustic pop-rock. Closing out the show will be Diandra Doble from North Attleboro, a recent graduate of Anna Maria College with a Bachelor's Degree in Music Therapy, playing songs from the '60s through the present.

Ask The Doctor

Junior Damato began servicing vehicles in 1969. He owns an 8-bay center in Middleboro, MA. Junior is an ASE-certified Master Technician, ASE-certified L-1 and ASE-certified Natural Gas.

There is no question electric vehicles are here to stay. I have driven a lot of them and the last 2 weeks I drove both the Hyundai Ioniq 5 AWD and the KIA EV6 RWD. Both cars were powerful. A high output battery charger brings the battery back to full charge in a short time. I used my regular 110 house outlet at night and kept the battery above 50 percent. The Ioniq5 is a practical choice here in New England with AWD to manage the snow covered roads. A preheated system for both battery and interior heater takes a bite out of the cold winter. Hyundai built the Ioniq 5 with all the driver assistance safety and convenience features one would want. Heated and ventilated front seats and heated steering wheel. One pedal driving mode does take a bit of time getting used to. Both dash cluster and 12 inch touchscreen are clear and easy to read and navigate. A super large panorama fixed roof with sun shade. A fun and powerful car to drive. Pricing as tested $56,300.00. The KIA EV6 RWD is also a powerful car and both cars have a sport mode which I drove in most of the time. The EV6 electric motor is rated at 225 HP the Ioniq5 with a bit more power at 320 HP. Driver assist technology is in both cars as is 10 year, 100,000 mile battery warranty. priced at $48,700.00. Both cars look amazing and will qualify for tax credits.

Junior Damato, the "Auto Doctor," has agreed to field auto repair questions from Bulletin and Record readers. Please send your questions to news@bulletinnewspapers.com and we will do our best to get them answered.
