Morrison succumbs to cancer

Daniel Kobialka
Staff Reporter

Norwood resident Kevin Phillip Morrison, 21, passed away at his home on Aug. 20, 2011 after a six-month struggle with cancer.

Morrison, a member of the Norwood High School Class of 2008, was diagnosed with cancer in February.

Morrison had been battling peritoneal mesothelioma, a cancer that affects less than 500 people in the United States each year, under the care of doctors at the Dana Faber Cancer Institute. However, Morrison required experimental treatment only available outside the Bay State, and had been receiving treatments in Arizona recently.

Local residents showed their support for the Morrison family with Kevin's Cause, a fundraiser held at Norwood's Four Points by Sheraton on Aug. 12.

Individuals and businesses rallied around Kevin's Cause in the weeks leading up to the event. The Norwood Fire Department and Norwood Printing sold tickets for Kevin's Cause, several rotary clubs promoted the fundraiser and 45 volunteers donated their time to the event.

Morrison family friend Michael Thornton said at least 1,200 people attended Kevin's Cause. The event raised more than $225,000 in funds through donations, auctions and raffles.

The event offered local residents an opportunity to share their stories about Morrison with friends and family as well.

Norwood resident Billy Goodwin said he met the Morrison family as his son Timmy became friends with Kevin in school. Goodwin recalled a time Morrison sent his condolences to him and his son after their dog had passed away.

"It points to the type of the kid he is," Goodwin said of the gesture.

Town and Country

HI GUYS,

A SIMPLE CLARIFICATION

There is a large degree of difference between a journalist/reporter's column and an opinion column. The following definitions are discernable. JOURNALIST... "one whose occupation is collecting, writing, editing, and disseminating news through the media." OPINION COLUMN... "a belief or idea held with confidence but not substantiated by direct proof or knowledge."

CLASS OF '61 REUNION

Please email cdon@aol.com if you know the whereabouts of the following classmates: Robert Cady, Judith Campisano, Stanley Carita, Roseann Carrabino, Charles Carroll, Barbara Cass, Richard Cavallaro, Fred Chapman, Ann Cherry, John Clancy, Joseph Clancy, Anne Clinch, Barbara Close, Susan Collins, Donna Connaughton, Salvatore Consentino, Jeanne Corcoran, Paula Cormier, Karen Corsini, Frank Crisafulli, Robert Crowley, William Crowley, William Curtis, and Thomas Cyr. More names to follow.

MEDICATIONS

If you have prescription/OTC medications that you wish to discard (rather than putting them in the trash or flushing them), you may bring them to the lobby of the NFD/NPD building and put them in a specially marked container any time of the day or night, no questions asked.

ELECTRIC LIGHT POLES

When you attach a sign for a yard sale/lost pet, etc. to the Town light poles, please be nice enough to remove them when the information is no longer necessary.

NFD

Recently Our Town's fire department took possession of a "state of the art pumper."

Jackie Saber

FARMERS' MARKET

Remember when the market was first held at the Town Common? It was extremely busy since it was in public view. Parking is an issue but, if one is patient, making a few "rounds" will most likely net you a space, as on any given day. When the new theatre opens, parking might be a whole different ballgame.

IN MEMORY

Our Town sends its condolences to Sheila Bennett and Brad Kelley, due to the passing of their mother, Lillie Kelley, and to their entire family. Memory Eternal.

OUR LEADERS?

Since the Republicans, Democrats, and President Obama show their incapability of handling our budget/out of control debt, who will? There seems to be no John Adams among the group. Shirking their duties as elected leaders, they have named a 12-member panel to do the deed, which includes Senator John Kerry of Mass. After the "big dig" in Boston was supposedly completed (mega dollars over budget and still costing money today for repairs), Kerry said, "This tunnel is a bargain!"

HEALTHSCARE BILL

As of Jan. 2013, you and I, through our health insurance, will be paying for breastfeeding necessities and prescription birth control pills at NO COST for all individuals that purchase them. The government has no right to stick their nose into the personal and private decisions made by individuals, then charge you and I for the purchases. Now that the pill will be available free to more young women, it will increase the danger of STDs and AIDS to an entire generation.

SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY

A few years ago, California Congressmen, and the much too powerful Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), allowed the water to be shut off in what is considered the most fertile valley in the United States. Most all of our country's 'greens' are grown there and end up on our tables. The farmers and their families have had to close their farms and find benevolent sources for their own family meals. Now, nature has spoken and has begun to flood the dried and cracked acreage for vegetable growers in the valley. Thanks to an extremely snowy winter, the melting snow is providing the nourishment that is needed for farmers and their families to get back to work in doing what must be a very difficult business. (Sorry Al Gore, you've been trumped by NATURE, something that you will NEVER be able to control!)

DOES ILLEGAL MEAN ILLEGAL?

Pres. Obama signed an "executive order" releasing most of 300,000 illegal aliens in our country that were waiting for deportation for illegal acts. The news stated that only "a few criminals" would go to trial and the rest will stay. Isn't the mere fact that the "illegal alien" is here in America mean a Federal crime has been committed? Politicians will do anything in order to be re-elected. If you are lucky enough to have employment, enjoy your day off on LABOR DAY.

Spiegel steps up for fireworks

Daniel Kobialka

Staff Reporter

A familiar sponsor will provide the funds necessary to make sure Norwood residents have a blast at this year's Norwood Day.

Norwood T.G.I. Friday's owner David Spiegel will donate $15,000 to keep the Sept. 16 fireworks show on schedule.

Spiegel has sponsored the event held the night before Norwood Day for seven consecutive years.

"He's coming forward to help us again, which is great," Norwood Recreation Department Superintendent Gerald Miller said.

Miller said the department was searching for a fireworks sponsor at the Aug. 9 Board of Selectmen meeting as Spiegel had announced he would not be able to sponsor this year's festivities.

The Recreation Department Superintendent acknowledged at that time that finding a new partner would have proven challenging to the department because of the limited timeframe and the number of people involved in coordinating the event.

But Miller noted Spiegel ended the department's search by agreeing to sponsor the fireworks for the eighth time last week.

"He stepped forward again," Miller said. "That's the type of person David Spiegel is."

Spiegel has offered financial support for other town events in the past, including its annual Pops Night. The Norwood business owner acknowledged he was willing to help the community that has assisted him.

"We wanted to support the town that supports our restaurant," Spiegel said.

The annual fireworks show features a colorful mix of lights and sounds filling the night sky. The event will take place at 8 p.m. on Sept. 16, the evening prior to Norwood Day.

Miller noted local residents can expect more of the same with this year's fireworks display.

"It's very nicely done and very community-oriented," Miller said.

Spiegel said he hopes the display will top last year's event.

"I hope [it's] better," Spiegel said of this year's Norwood Day fireworks show. "[Gerald Miller] said it will be a great show."

Local residents collected more than 400 bricks at the Old School on the Hill on Saturday, Aug. 20.

OK, buddy, hit the bricks!

Daniel Kobialka
Staff Reporter

Norwood High School (NHS) alumni battled the heat in its attempt to save bricks from the current high school.

Local residents can purchase a piece of NHS history following the efforts of the NHS alums on Saturday morning.

NHS alums gathered outside NHS to collect bricks from the historic 1926 building. NHS Alumni Association President Gerald Miller said the group collected more than 400 bricks during its four hours at the school.

"We've been trying to get [bricks] with character," Miller said. "We've been trying to get ones that look nice."

At least 11 local residents gathered bricks: Miller, Paula Pelaggi, Victor Babel, Tom Lambert, Michael Reagan, Joe Malinn, Paul Samargedlis, Joanne Gleasone, Tom Cronan, Steve Way and Steve Callahan.

Pelaggi, the NHS Alumni Association Secretary, said the idea to preserve bricks came from June's Last Hurrah celebration. Pelaggi noted demand remains high for bricks from the school.

"One of the questions that always came up was 'Am I going to be able to buy a brick?'" Pelaggi said.

Miller noted at least $800 worth of bricks has been sold to date. But local residents may need to act quickly if they want to purchase a piece of Norwood High history.

"It's first come, first serve to order bricks," Pelaggi said. "Once they're gone, they're gone."

Miller noted the brick collection drew strong support from the community.

"We had a good turnout," Miller said. "We might try to do it again quickly."

Demolition continues at the current high school, but Miller said the group may make a return trip to preserve additional bricks.

"If it's going to be done, it's going to have to be done this weekend," Miller said.

Commemorative bricks remain available for purchase. Order forms are available for download at the NHS Alumni Association's website (<http://www.norwoodhighalumni.org/>) or at the Norwood Civic Center.

Brick prices range between $10 and $150, with all proceeds benefiting the NHS Alumni Association.

Morrison

Morrison touched the lives of the community in other ways as well.

Norwood athletic director Brian McDonough noted that Morrison, a captain of the boys' hockey and football teams when he was senior, served as a leader to his peers.

"He did his job," McDonough said. "Other kids looked up to him."

McDonough said the Norwood community suffered a great loss.

"It's real tragic," McDonough said. "It's a tough call."

Norwood boys' hockey coach Bill Clifford acknowledged Morrison led by example on and off the ice.

"He was always positive and upbeat," Clifford said. "If anyone ever needed anything, he was there to help."

During the fundraiser on Aug. 12, Rick Morrison, Kevin's uncle, noted his nephew was a product of the Norwood community and its sports programs.

"He's a real character," Morrison said of his nephew. "Kevin's a product of that. He's a real good guy."

Editorial

ALL SHOOK UP

We assume that our readers have survived the Great Quake of 2011.

Count us among those who, because we were so engrossed at work or merely daydreaming, failed to feel the shake, rattle and roll.

Don't count us among the alarmists who fled their offices and argued about the proper emergency protocol is. Stand under a doorway? Hide under a desk? Lay in a bathtub?

The reality is if an earthquake of close proximity and greater magnitude were to ever hit this area, it would be devastatingly bad. Our buildings are not, in the vast majority, earthquake-proofed like homes and offices on the West Coast. We have aging, and surely vulnerable, nuclear power plants a short drive away. Boston's entire downtown, built on an ancient landfill, would surely slide into the ocean quicker than you say "San Andreas."

We scoff at those folks who freak out with every snowflake and hide in a panic room every time a hurricane warning goes into effect. But our cavalier attitude is perhaps misplaced. Yes, as we write this there is a potential hurricane heading our way. And, in a couple of weeks, we will be solemnly remembering the anniversary of the Sept. 11 terrorist attack.

Maybe having a little bit of earth-shaking once in a while isn't such a bad thing if it prompts us to revisit the emergency protocols we'll need to remember when a full-on disaster strikes. As the Boy Scouts will tell you: be prepared.

DRIVING CONTROVERSY

News outlets have been all over - and rightfully so - a story that emerged from Milford on Saturday night. An intoxicated driver, an illegal alien from Ecuador, is accused of running a stop sign, striking a young man on a motorcycle and dragging him to death for nearly half a mile.

The anger, not surprisingly, has been zoomed in on the driver's immigration status. Fair enough. But that focus may be missing the real travesty and broader problem.

Illegal or not - and whether the driver might have been weeded from society by the Secure Communities program - we suggest his past record is the bigger issue. Over time, the driver, Nicolas Guaman, has had three arrests since 2007 for driving without a license. He was also convicted of assault and battery on both a police officer and a firefighter.

So why was he still driving? We understand that people disregard such things as having a legal license. But isn't there GPS technology or some other way to perhaps keep tabs on those whose cars should be off the road? And why is it, after three arrests and assault on a police officer that there doesn't seem to have been any real jail time? Have we become so lenient a state that repeat offenders, legal citizens or not, get away Scott free?

The key here isn't whether or not deportation was needed. The bigger question is why there was no real punishment of any kind.

If this was a singular case, we'd treat it as such. But week after week, we hear of repeat drunk drivers being back on the road, only taken off the streets after someone dies. We hear of violent types and drug dealers who are back on the beat without missing a beat. There are seldom real repercussions, it seems.

Deport this scumbag if you want. No tears will be shed. But let's keep our eye on the ball. Why do creeps like this keep getting a free pass? Is there any reason why our police officers have to put their lives on the line every day, only to have their work undermined by the state's revolving door of justice.

Wine Vault receives 30-day liquor license extension

Daniel Kobialka
Staff Reporter

The Norwood Board of Selectmen held a show cause hearing to determine whether it should revoke the liquor license for the Wine Vault Ltd. at Tuesday's meeting.

The Board considered removing the Wine Vault's liquor license earlier this year following an absence from the location.

The Wine Vault has appeared closed since January, and a show cause hearing regarding the business' license was held in March and continued in May.

The Board asked Wine Vault owner Jeff Groper about the vacancy and expressed concerns about the use of a pocket license, a liquor permit that has been issued but is not being used.

Groper told the Board he anticipated a new store manager would be in place by the end of April. The Selectmen took no action at that time.

Norwood Police Detective Richard Giacompo noted he had been investigating the Wine Vault, located at 1275 Boston Providence Highway, since the May 10 hearing continuation.

"I have stopped in on a dozen occasions...and it has not been open," Giacompo said.

Groper told the Board he had a manager in place for roughly two weeks. But the manager failed to hold his position with the Wine Vault.

"He just disappeared," Groper said.

Groper said the Wine Vault has been available for purchase,

Boch Memorial grant awards postponed and he has been negotiating a sale since mid-May. But the current Wine Vault owner noted the buyer has yet to review and sign a purchase and sale agreement.

"We have not had a meeting of the minds on a purchase and sale," Groper said.

Groper told the Selectmen he expects the buyer to sign a purchase and sale agreement within the next two weeks. He asked the Board to extend the current liquor license for 45 days.

"I am asking you people to give us some consideration," Groper said.

Selectman Allan Howard noted the Board has seen this situation in the past with the Wine Vault.

"We've been to the well a few times on this and have come up empty," Howard said.

Selectman Paul Bishop noted the business has broken the law on three occasions: twice failing to maintain an operating business and also bouncing a food establishment fee check from May 11 for $125.00.

"You have failed to fulfill your obligations under the law and your license," Bishop said. "I am not happy."

Groper said he was unaware of the returned check. Bishop noted the returned check was mailed to Groper's Newton home by certified mail.

Groper told the Board the potential buyer would operate the Wine Vault as a turnkey operation.

Selectman William Plasko questioned why Groper would fail to maintain the business while attempting to sell it.

"If I owned the plaza and this business and was trying to sell it as a turnkey [business], I would not put it in jeopardy like this," Plasko said.

Groper apologized to the Board for his prior errors, and asked the group to consider a 30-day liquor license extension following his earlier request for 45 days.

Groper indicated he had nothing in writing to confirm a potential sale was close, but continued to emphasize a new owner could be in place within the next few weeks.

"It would've been helpful to get something from [the buyer]," Chairman Michael Lyons said. "It would have been nice."

Lyons noted revoking the license could hurt a potential sale of the Wine Vault, and asked the Board to consider extending the license for 30 days.

"It doesn't necessarily affect the town to not have it open for 30 to 45 days," Lyons said.

Bishop asked the Board to consider its past hearings when making its decision.

"This is the third time we've been in this situation...shame on us if we don't step up to the plate," Bishop said.

Bishop said he would remove the license.

"If I had it my way, I'd like to go with revocation of all licenses," Bishop told the Board.

Groper said he would request a license transfer from the Board once the purchase and sale agreement was completed. He told the Selectmen an employee would be hired to manage the store until the transfer was approved.

Lyons noted the success of the store could help the town.

"I'd like to see [the Wine Vault] be successful," Lyons said. "I'd like to see that sale happen."

The Board extended the license for 30 days, and will continue its show cause hearing on Sept. 20.

"At the end of that, all bets are off," Lyons said.

The Board considered the possibility of using geothermal units to heat and cool the new Norwood Theatre.

Tribeca Builders' E.J. Lanni asked the Board to approve a measure to close the alleyway near Central Street while four 1,500-foot deep geothermal wells are installed.

Lanni noted the use of geothermal units could save $230,000 in utility costs over the course of 10 years.

"It's a great product that can provide savings on utilities," Lanni said.

Lanni told the Board that Tribeca has met with abutters regarding potential concerns with the project, including noise and location questions. Several abutters present at the meeting said they were happy because Tribeca addressed their concerns.

"Decibels mean nothing to me," Adj Signs Engraving Screen President Ralph Pace said. "They're willing to do a noise test."

Plasko noted the project would be a temporary inconvenience, but would be completed in four to six weeks.

"I don't see why we wouldn't want to cooperate," Plasko said. "I think we all have to be reasonable that there is going to be some noise, but they are going to do what needs to be done to offset it."

The Board passed the motion unanimously.

The Selectmen have tabled discussion of the Boch Memorial Fund grant awards until their Sept. 6 meeting. Selectman Helen Abdallah Donohue noted the group received 40 applicants for the funds.

Traffic, mice the focus of HS meeting

Daniel Kobialka
 Staff Reporter

Agostini Project Manager Kathleen Labouliere said the demolition of the current high school continues to progress at Friday's weekly high school meeting.

"Everything's coming together and should be all set for school starting," Labouliere said.

Labouliere said the school's asbestos abatement has been completed, while concrete has been poured on the sidewalks surrounding the school. The demolition of the school's main building began Tuesday.

The new Norwood High School will host 1,100 students starting Sept. 6, but how traffic and parking will be handled remains a question at the new institution.

Compass Project Management's Bryan Jarvis announced a traffic plan is being developed for parents, and will be presented at the Aug. 26 meeting.

But local residents have expressed other concerns as the start of the new school year approaches.

Norwood Historical Commission Chairwoman Judith Howard asked meeting attendees to consider saving the top two tiers of the high school's cupola, a dome-like structure atop its clock tower.

But Labouliere said preserving the cupola was not an option at this point.

"Right now, per contract, it's not to be saved," Labouliere said.

Labouliere noted a proposal was submitted to salvage the cupola, but the recovery project would cost $86,000 to complete.

"That's a no-go," Town Manager John Carroll said.

Howard said she appreciated the motion to preserve the cupola.

"I thank you for making a proposal for that," Howard said of Labouliere's work.

Carroll noted local abutters have sent emails recently indicating they are seeing mice in the area.

"We are getting complaints about mice from neighbors," Carroll said. "People are seeing more mice."

Jarvis indicated a pest management program has been in place at the school, while a pest management specialist has visited the site weekly to prevent any issues.

"Throughout the summer, we have not seen an increase in activity with pests," Jarvis said, noting four pest traps out of thirty had seen some activity since mid June.

Jarvis said the pest activity could be purely coincidental.

Nichols Street resident Stephanie Wyman noted she had not experienced any trouble with mice until recently.

"We had never had problems with this before but over the last week we have been seeing mouse droppings at various places in our house," Wyman said in an email.

Abutter Anne Haley said she had heard about the problem, but not attributed to the high school project.

Even Santa Claus received praise for his role in the creation of the new Norwood High School.

"This principal believes in Santa Claus...I called Santa's phone line and told him we need a new high school," Norwood High School Principal George Usevich said referring to Massachusetts Inspector General Gregory Sullivan, who plays Kris Kringle in the annual holiday parade.

More than 100 people gathered outside the front doors of the new Norwood High School (NHS) to celebrate its opening at a ribbon cutting ceremony Tuesday afternoon. The event featured speeches and remarks from those involved in the creation of the new institution.

Usevich, the ceremony's emcee, recalled a time when the creation of a new high school was merely a vision, but noted the local community made it a reality.

"You have made the dream come true," Usevich said.

The new NHS construction project began in May 2009 with an estimated budget exceeding $100 million. The institution was scheduled to be completed before the start of the 2011-12 academic year.

The school's development surpassed the expectations of many as the project finished on schedule with a total cost of $68.6 million.

"In our lifetime, we have not seen a project with so much dedication and commitment done under budget and on time," Norwood School Committee Chair William Plasko Jr. said.

Seniors get first look at new Norwood High School

Daniel Kobialka
Staff Reporter

Norwood High School (NHS) seniors ignored senioritis on a bright, sunny August morning as they visited the New School on the Hill for the first time Tuesday.

Seniors and their parents took their initial trip to the new high school as the institution hosted its first orientation.

The event allowed students and parents to get acquainted with their new surroundings. At least 150 people attended the orientation at the school's auditorium.

The NHS Class of '12 will spend its final year at the New School on the Hill. NHS Principal George Usevich stressed the important role seniors play as he addressed the senior class.

"In Norwood High School history, you are going to be very special," Usevich said, "because you are going to be the first class to graduate from this school on June 3, 2012."

The new high school's modern amenities include a library featuring more than 30 computer stations, a 1,842-seat stadium and a gymnasium offering two full-sized basketball courts.

Usevich, who is entering his 48th year with Norwood Public Schools (NPS), noted the senior class will face additional responsibilities such as showing respect for the professional institution and setting a positive example for underclassmen.

Usevich noted the school environment offers students a collegiate atmosphere at the high school level. The NHS principal said students will be impressed with a professional atmosphere the campus offers.

"You're going to be in awe," Usevich told the senior class.

NPS' Superintendent James Hayden acknowledged the new institution provides students and parents with a great opportunity.

"With this wonderful building, we want to see you excel," Hayden said. "We want to see you soar."

Usevich told students and parents about the new high school facility. He said the new high school features state-of-the-art technology in all of its classrooms, and even includes customizable class bells to indicate the change in periods.

"We can even program those bells to have music if we so desire," Usevich said.

NHS senior class president Peter Kelly acknowledged he liked what he has seen from the school thus far.

"It's unbelievable with all of the technology and everything that went into it," Kelly said.

Kelly, a NHS boys' hockey and baseball player, noted the school's gym stood out as well.

"It's very shiny," Kelly said.

Students visited their new third-floor homerooms following Usevich's address, but parents remained in the auditorium for a discussion with the principal.

Usevich noted the building is brand new, but the keys to success will remain the same for students and parents. The NHS principal emphasized both groups can help students in different areas of their high school careers.

"We'll take care of this end," Usevich told parents. "You support them at home."

The NHS principal said open communication helps students succeed.

But Usevich noted the senior class can remain successful because it leads by example.

"When you first came to this school as freshmen, I could tell you were going to be a special group... Three years later, I can tell you are a special group," Usevich said.

said.

The MSBA will cover more than $40 million worth the cost to build the new NHS as part of the program.

The New School on the Hill replaces a 187,500 square-foot institution featuring four buildings built between 1925 and 1962. Sullivan indicated the town featured innovators who became leaders in the Bay State for their work with the new institution.

"Norwood was the pioneer who stepped up to build the best high school in Massachusetts at two-thirds of the cost," Sullivan said.

Usevich said the town could not have succeeded without Sullivan's assistance.

"Thank you, Santa," Usevich said.

Dedication continued from page 6

Usevich noted Board of Selectmen Chairman Michael Lyons impacted the school's development when he offered the suggestion to build a new institution as a member of the Committee of 21.

"It was an amazing time," Lyons said. "I'm very proud of the work I did on that committee."

The high school includes modern technology in every classroom along with a college-style library and performing arts facilities. Permanent Building Construction Committee Chairman Ted Callahan said the institution can provide a new era of excellence to Norwood students.

"We must ensure that, above all, this door is to remain open to all who wish to use it," Callahan said.

The new NHS became the first school to open after being built under the Commonwealth's "Model School" program, a Massachusetts School Building Authority (MSBA) service that incorporates successful design elements from existing schools into the development of new facilities.

"By participating in the MSBA Model School program, the town of Norwood and the MSBA saved taxpayers $35 million in design and construction costs, while demonstrating to other communities across the Commonwealth how to build a high-quality facility in a fiscally-responsible manner that benefits taxpayers, administrators, teachers and students for years to come," MSBA Executive Director Katherine Craven
