The Norwood Finance Commission (FinCom) met last week with Facilities Director Paul Riccardi and Facilities Business Director Mary O'Brien to review the financial aspects of the department, its accomplishments and what it's looking to do in the future.

The short answer is it has saved the Town quite a bit of money during its three-year existence, at least according to Riccardi and Town Manager Tony Mazzucco, who pointed to several projects that have been completed by Facilities that the Town would have had to, in the past, put out to bid; for example the first floor men's bathroom at the Town Hall.

"I know it sounds strange to say, 'just go look at the men's room,' but if you look at the men's room on the first floor, it's an example of a project that if we put it out to bid, it probably would have been $50,000 or $60,000, if not more, for a contractor to complete," Mazzucco said. "The bathroom needed some work. It was, effectively, entirely done by Facilities within the operating budget, because it was mostly just labor and a couple of material items we needed. That would have been reflected on the capital plan at a significant amount."

Riccardi laid out the work orders of the past three years.

"We averaged about 5,000 work orders over the three years," he said. "And those were accomplished basically by seven guys. They're our trades guys, and they are constantly moving...

We also have, which we did not include in that number, our Capital Outlay projects."

Capital Outlay projects are capital improvement or construction projects for one-time purchases or building proposals. Riccardi said the department has at least oversight over most of the projects the Town approves during Town Meeting, and will also either help out or build outright depending on the circumstance.

Riccardi praised his seven trades people during the meeting for their dedication, both in the Townwide Facilities Department now and the School Facilities Department that preceded it.

"They do a phenomenal

Norwood presentation details stormwater problems

Katie Krom

As Earth continues to warm it is creating more humid conditions in the Northeast, and this in turn is increasing more rain events. According to a new Dartmouth study, these extreme precipitation events are expected to increase 52 percent in the Northeast by the end of the century.

On Wednesday, Jan. 17, Norwood residents discussed stormwater and flooding in their own neighborhoods at the Morrill Memorial Library.

Like many other local municipalities, Norwood has had a lot of flooding, some examples being the floods of 1998, June 2020, August 2023 and, very recently, in January 2024. These floods have submerged cars and caused basements to flood and the closure of Norwood Hospital among other problems. The need to call Norwood's utilities like the fire department and DPW for help has also increased.

The presentation on Wednesday was conducted by the Neponset River Watershed Association (NepRWA), which has been around since 1967 working to protect and restore the Neponset River. They have also been tasked, in part at least, to deal with

Dominos donates $25K to keep snow off the streets

With more snow predicted, Norwood's plowing crews may see a bit of help in the coming weeks with a donation of $25,000 from Domino's Pizza as part of the company's Plowing for Pizza Program.

The program is giving away $500,000 over this year and next to help plow the streets and make it easier for delivery drivers to transport in the colder climes. Norwood Domino's owner Andy Polvay at his 1023 Washington St. in South Norwood location said it's all because of the community that Norwood got this money. Domino's corporate office emailed Norwood's Town Employees to let them know the contest was happening and get them involved in nominating the Town for the promotion.

"In addition to that, we had a tablet that we left in the store that customers would use to do the same," he said. "We also put it on the Norwood Now Facebook page and talked to the high school. Every little bit helps."

Polvay said while he didn't have the exact numbers, Norwood was pretty high up on the nomination list compared to the other entrants.

"I believe the turnout was pretty high here," he said. "I think we were in the top three the issues of flooding in Norwood, including where to store stormwater and what residents should be doing to help protect their homes and neighborhood.

After the June 2020 flood, the organization conducted an update to the Meadowbrook Watershed study, originally written in the early 2000s. This update was funded by ARPA and MVP grants and helped both the NepRWA and the Town conclude what areas needed the most attention. The Meadowbrook area has had the most flooding so the plan is to start at Meadowbrook and work upstream.

"I have studied the flooding throughout the years and looked at the changes," NepRWA Green Infrastructure Specialist Anna Yie said. "What I noticed is that it is not the depth of the floods getting larger but the velocity, and this surprised me."

The Town has three main projects to retrofit public buildings. These include the Savage Center, which Norwood Assistant Town Planner Holly Jones said is a priority because the Savage Center is the number one spot for town emergencies when it comes to storms.

"We don't want the emergency center flooding," Jones said. "We will add pipes and storm drains all around this area."

For the Cleveland School, Jones said the Town wants to improve the Ellis pond, located right next to it. The plan is to remove pavement so there is less runoff and to add storm drains.

This project was supposed to be undertaken last year but got bumped. "We don't know when we can do it," she said. "We need more money."

She said the Town is also looking at other areas where there is a lot of flooding, including Dean and Pleasant streets; and considering plans for stormwater issues on main roads - including the addition of pipes and drains.

Along with retrofitting many buildings and the addition of more drains, the Town and NepRWA are also looking at what community members can do.

They explained implementing a stormwater fee to fund infrastructure projects is a good step. The fee would utilize an Equivalent Residential Unit (ERU) assessment on different types of properties based on the amount of impervious areas these properties have. Large parking lots, for example, have the biggest impact. An ERU determines the fee a property owner pays towards the stormwater utility and enterprise fund to help. Dedham already has enacted a stormwater fee.

Many community members were not happy with this idea.

"Taxpayers can't afford this $60 million project," said Selectman Michael Saad. "Homeowners are taking a huge beating in this proposal."

Residents in general feel the Town should look at other ways to solve the problem rather than having community members pay.

"What about the existing Watershed?" asked one Norwood resident. "Why can't we fix that rather than digging holes and spending so much money? Let's fix the river brush and the pipes that are broken. Let's fix what we have before spending money on something entirely new."

Another resident said that creating incentives for people to make their homes flood-safe seems a lot easier. "I made it so that my downspouts are watering my gardens," said one resident. "I don't think I should pay anything because I am already doing my part. I plant stuff to absorb water."

Board of Selectmen review latest MBTA Communities 3A proposal

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Norwood Board of Selectmen met on Jan. 23 with the Norwood Planning Board to go over the final proposed rezoning map and regulations for the MBTA Communities Act 3A rezoning initiative.

The proposal attempts to finalize years of work between the Planning Board and the 3A MBTA Communities Task Force to position the Town to be in compliance with this state law, originally proposed by former Gov. Charlie Baker.

The legislation requires municipalities with public transportation – a subway, commuter rail or bus hub – and those next to such communities to rezone about 50 acres to multi-family as-of-right. The hope behind the plan is to increase the housing stock in areas that could provide alternatives to car travel and, hopefully, reduce Massachusetts’ ever-increasing housing costs. The model is based on the concept of supply and demand in that by increasing the housing supply across the state demand for housing will go down and rents and home prices will level off or decrease.

The proposal put forth at Tuesday night’s meeting is planned to go before Town Meeting in March for a vote.

Town Planner Sarah Dixon said the proposal is in response to the current housing crisis in the state. She said the legislation doesn’t really target a town like Norwood.

“A lot of communities, unlike Norwood, have not historically had diverse patterns of housing development where you have more affordable options, rentals, multi-family housing complexes and different entry points on the market,” she said. “As a result of this decades of under-producing housing, many people can’t afford to live in the eastern part of the state. It’s started to threaten our economy, as young workers are leaving and pursuing lower cost of living areas, and the older folks who are looking to downsize have limited affordable housing options.”

Dixon said though Norwood has not been lacking in multi-family housing, that doesn’t mean it’s not affected. She said during the community outreach process, many Norwood residents said affordable housing is difficult to attain in the Town, and many younger residents have been finding it difficult or impossible to come back to the Town that everyone returns to, to paraphrase the Town’s official slogan.

“There was a lot of sadness, I think shared, that younger people can’t afford to return as adults to Norwood; that was a theme we heard,” she said.

Dixon said that residents were also concerned about the changing character of Norwood.

“There is a lot of concern about any development right?” she said. “People were worrying about that change. Change ‘to the Norwood I’ve always known and love right now,’ which is a wonderful thing.”

For that reason, she said the three proposed districts, one at Windsor Gardens, one hugging the Norwood Central MBTA Commuter Rail Station Corridor, and one at Norwood Depot and the Norwood Downtown, were in areas that were already heavily developed and not likely to see new development any time soon. Planning Board member Ernie Paciorkowski summed up this approach.

“I understand people are going to say, ‘no more apartments,’ or whatever, and the thing you’ve got to remember on this is, yes, there will be some action on this,” he said. “Developers will find some spots and develop, but this is not a mandate to build, this is a mandate to rezone.”

“We have multi-family housing,” Dixon said. “And we’ve strategically placed these districts in areas that have multi-family housing, and so the market incentive to tear down Avalon and rebuild isn’t there.”

Selectman Michael Saad said, in so many words, that he was very much against this state mandate for more housing in Town.

“Buckle up,” he said. “We have 55 percent apartments in Norwood. We have three MBTA stops, and we’re being severely punished. So my question is, is there any other Town fighting this or not doing the mandate?”

Dixon pointed out that this is a state law and would open any non-complying municipality to legal action if they do not rezone. Saad brought up the examples of Milton and Holden trying to fight the law, but Town Manager Tony Mazzucco and Dixon said the Massachusetts State Attorney General Andrea Campbell has been very clear that this is extremely unlikely to work.

“The Attorney General has stated in no unclear terms that they must comply,” Mazzucco said. “There’s no grey areas where they can’t comply.”

Saad said the Town has a lot of apartments already and so why doesn’t that make the Town complaint without the rezoning. Dixon pointed out it’s not about existing housing stock, it’s about the zoning, and added that if

Norwood's 3A approach is sound

It's true, though the state of MA is sticking it to communities in general with this draconian approach to dealing with a lack of affordable housing, Norwood is handling it the right way by mitigating the impacts as much as possible to residential neighborhoods. And it was apparently clear to anyone watching last Tuesday evening's Selectmen's meeting that Town Planner Sarah Dixon has her act together and, together with the Planning Board, has and will continue providing as many opportunities as possible for residents to hear and voice opinions as the final required vote at Town Meeting draws near.

That being written, there is little doubt in this writer's mind that the law is seriously flawed. What started out "as a tool" for communities to use as a "guideline" has now morphed into a bludgeoning instrument the state will use to wreak havoc financially to those communities that don't acquiesce, the Town of Milton being a good example. So, for those at this point wanting to stand tall and bear arms, it is a no-win battle. Better to fall back, strategize, and live to fight another day, which is exactly what Dixon et al are suggesting the Town do.

Is there a housing shortage in Norwood? No. Look around, read the classifieds, apartments here are plentiful and not all occupied. Selectman Mike Saad correctly pointed out that Norwood is already hovering around 55 percent of rentals to home ownership. When is enough enough? Norwood's mistakes regarding apartments are legendary; the latest being the incredulous vote cast by TM to rezone around Morse Street allowing yet another 150 apartment units to be built at the Space Center. And now, in the ultimate display of chutzpah, said developer is looking for permission to build fewer "affordable" units because "the market has changed." Talk about rubbing it the face of this Town. And you know what? He will probably receive approval. These are the kinds of mistakes that have exacerbated the Town's density.

Asking if there are affordable places for people to live in Norwood, particularly for younger and older folks, well that is a topic worthy of debate. However, Selectman Amanda Grow's assertion that "...this used to be the place where they love to come, but all these high tech workers can't afford to live here with six-figure salaries, which is bonkers to me. So we've got to do something, we can't do nothing" is ridiculous. According to Money.com, Boston falls at number 7 nationally at 32.8% of rent to income ratio of gross income. That means even in the City of Boston someone making a $100k should expect to pay around $2,734 per month in rent, which means a rent of $2,200 in Norwood is exactly what someone should expect to pay, so stop throwing out incorrect stats.

The new world order of $2,200 rent for a single-bedroom apartment is never going to go down regardless of how many new units are built. And should these developers have problems renting these new units, no problem. The state will step in and subsidize the rents so others who normally couldn't afford Norwood will be moving in, as is already happening. This newspaper has always espoused that folks who aspire to live in areas not all can afford are not morally corrupt. On the contrary, it is what built this great nation, the attitude that if you want something bad enough you work hard and make it happen. Norwood is within reach for those wanting it bad enough. For everyone else, there are plenty of other nice places to live.

job," he said. "It just amazes me because it never ends. It never ends because of the amount of people in the buildings and the age of the buildings. I can honestly tell you, in the 12 years I've been doing this, I've never gotten a complaint from anybody about the attitude, the cleanliness about people respecting their space. You know sometimes we don't finish when we should, but the interpersonal part of it is just amazing and it's a testament to those guys and how they're dedicated to doing their jobs.

"I mean they even put up with him," Riccardi added, pointing to Mazzucco.

"And that's saying something," Mazzucco replied with a grin.

For current and ongoing projects, Riccardi discussed the Townwide Roof Study, which started in 2023 and is now in its second phase.

"We're taking a look at the condition of our roofs and projecting out when they would need to be replaced and we're doing any needed repairs and cleaning," he said. "We're in the second phase of the cleaning, and right now, obviously the weather has stopped them in their tracks. But I can say during the last two rainstorms, we had very little leakage happening, which is tremendous when you think about the storms. Most of it was probably coming through the brick (the side of the building) from the wind."

Riccardi said the women's locker room at the Norwood Civic Center is nearing completion and should be done by the end of the month, and it's on budget.

"All of these jobs are either at budget or under budget," he said, adding that's generally true of all of Facilities' projects. "We haven't gone over."

Riccardi said they have also started the heating, ventilation and air conditioning (HVAC) renovation at the Norwood Public Safety Building last week, which has been an issue for a very long time.

"Hopefully we're going to be done by this summer with that system and, hopefully, the expectation is that puts it to bed, once and for all," he said. "That's our plan."

For future projects, he said they're hoping to start work on the Civic Center's facade, but that they are currently trying to source the limestone they need.

"It's a major issue," he said.

He said they are also bringing in a structural engineer to look at the cracks in the floor of the Fire Department garage, which is being funded by Capital Outlay funds. Riccardi said the thinking right now is that they are stress fractures from all the heavy equipment on the floor. The building's radiant heating system that runs under the floor has not been affected. They have to wait for the engineer to assess the site and figure out if anything needs to be done.

Regarding future concerns, Riccardi said the major one is the Town Hall, which Mazzucco has intimated in the past is in need of a major renovation. Riccardi said he's most concerned with the heating system.

"We are constantly fixing leaks in the pipes," he said. "It's just a big concern. Also, the Savage Center concerns me. That building is older than the building we're going to knock down in a year in South Norwood (the Coakley Middle School), and it's a very active building. There's a school in that building, for all intents and purposes."

Riccardi also said the roof study is a concern, as roof replacement costs are "astronomical."

"At some point in the next five years, we're going to have to come up with a plan to start replacing roofs," he said. "All the school roofs were basically done 20-something years ago and they're reaching that point."

He said the elementary schools will also need a lot of work in the plumbing, heating and lighting areas as well. He said that is going to be a big hit, which he said was not done after a study recommended it because of the work needed for the Coakley rebuild.

"And rightly so," he said.

Riccardi added he's hoping that nothing major happens at the old Coakley building right now that would require repairs.

"We're holding our breath on the Coakley," he said, "just another year-and-a-half."

"You'd hate to have to dump half a million dollars into a building just to use it for eight months or something," said Mazzucco.

Riccardi also went through some of the department's notable completed projects.

"Just for a quick look, at the Balch Elementary School boiler conversion from oil to gas, they're actually now dual fuel, the front stairs were done, the lintels were done, the gym floor was done this past summer. At the high school we did the gym floor and we converted all the lights to LEDs at the library. We had the parking lots at the Willett and the Oldham Schools – the never-ending parking lot jobs – they're done," he said, adding this was all work done this year.

Norwood was razed to the ground tomorrow – hypothetically – you could not rebuild most of what's here now as-of-right under the current zoning.

Selectman Bill Plasko said he had a lot of reservations about this legislation, as he has pointed out in the past. He said the current regulations, which he said are on their third iteration, is better than the first, but feels it's still very flawed and he doesn't believe it will bring about the desired result of more affordable housing throughout the state.

"This is going to do nothing to make Norwood affordable," he said. "If anything it's going to make Norwood less affordable."

Plasko added he felt the expansion of the districts, most notable Norwood Depot and Norwood Central, further than what's required by the state wasn't necessary, and that the inclusion of a couple of parcels on East Hoyle, right by the Norwood Central commuter rail, would be built out almost immediately and it would be better to have a special permit process or a zoning variance process rather than as-of-right housing there.

Selectman Amanda Grow said the issue has affected her coworkers and employees in her tech jobs, which she said is extremely concerning.

"The state is losing population, and when you talk about the cost of one-unit apartments, you try to get a unit here, it's $2,200 for a unit now," she said. "I can't get my data scientists, I can't my coders for my job in our Town, and this used to be the place where they love to come, but all these high tech workers can't afford to live here with six-figure salaries, which is bonkers to me. So we've got to do something, we can't do nothing."

Dixon said public comment is welcomed and changes to the proposal could be made, even at Town Meeting on March 21, but she said it would be better for residents to get such suggestions to the Planning Department before then. There will be an open house on 3A on Jan. 29 and Feb. 6 from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. at the Town Hall and on March 11 at 7 p.m. online. There will be a hybrid Planning Board public hearing – which she said is probably the best place for public comment – on Feb. 12 at 7 p.m. at the Senior Center. She said residents can also mail their comments directly to the Planning Board.

Airport trail still pending with FAA

Transient landing fees to be increased

Matt MacDonald
Staff Reporter

Last Wednesday, Jan. 17, the Norwood Airport Commission (NAC) met for the first time since November. Yet, despite the holiday break, the agenda was very light (no new business, one item of old business, no correspondence), the meeting was very brief (about 10 minutes, no executive session), and the gallery was empty of attendees.

When the NAC last met, the main appointment of the day had featured Trails Advisory Committee Chairman Joe Greeley advocating for a path that would connect a trailhead at Meadow Street to another one near the Skating Club of Boston on University Avenue.

This proposed trail would cross Airport land outside its perimeter fence, and would require the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) and the Massachusetts Department of Transportation (MassDOT) to be in favor of it in order for the NAC to approve it.

At the conclusion of Greeley's Nov. 8 appointment, the Commission voted unanimously to support the trail, contingent upon the approval of both the FAA and MassDOT.

Last Wednesday, NAC Chairman Mark Ryan provided an update, stating that Airport Manager Mark Raymond had reached out to the FAA regarding the matter, but that its regional office had a new compliance officer, "so we have to work with them to make sure they're comfortable with what we're proposing. Mark's still working on that."

In other business, the Commission unanimously voted to recommend a 20 percent increase in landing fees for transient aircraft. Raymond had compared Norwood's charges to other airports in the area, and also explained that he had recently done a Consumer or four."

Norwood joins the ranks of snow-covered northern cities in places like North Dakota and Minnesota. He said 17 communities have been selected for this year and 20 will be selected for next year.

Norwood Department of Public Works Director Mark Ryan said some of the funds will be used to purchase a new plow for the department's sidewalk machine that helps keep the sidewalks clear in South Norwood as well as going into the general Snow and Ice Budget.

"We are so grateful to Domino's for this program, as well as to Andy Polvay and the crew at the Domino's at 1023 Washington St. here in Norwood," said Ryan.

Polvay said he's proud to help out the Town like this, especially with this year's snow.

"It's an awesome thing to be able to contribute to the Town of Norwood and give something back," he said. "We know the budget's tight, and that any money is significant."

He said when they applied they weren't really expecting to win, especially because last year there was so little snow.

"You know we didn't know what to expect in early December when we were getting absolutely nothing (snow), but you just never know how the winter is going to go," he said. "And just a couple of storms can eat up that budget pretty quickly."

Polvay started with Domino's in the 1980s as a delivery driver and worked his way up. He said the company really helped him to establish himself and he's very thankful for that opportunity.

"It really gives people the opportunity within the brand to grow and make a business," he said.

Can Someone Work While Collecting Social Security Disability?

Dear Rusty: If a person is collecting Social Security disability benefits, can they, at any point, work at all? If they can, what is the maximum they can earn and still keep the disability benefit? I am asking because my husband is still young, but his injuries will not allow him to go back to the job he had prior to his injuries and surgeries. He does not just want to sit at home doing nothing!

Signed: Concerned Wife

Russell Gloor
 AMAC Certified Social Security Advisor

Dear Concerned: Actually, the Social Security Administration (SSA) encourages those collecting SSDI (Social Security Disability Insurance) benefits to attempt to go back to work and they provide considerable leeway for them to do so. The monthly earnings limit for those collecting SSDI benefits in 2024 is $1,550 and as long as your husband earns less than the limit while working, his SSDI benefits will not be in jeopardy. Your husband should contact Social Security's Ticket to Work program directly to protect his disability status and discuss returning to work while collecting SSDI benefits.

The Ticket to Work program assists those now receiving SSDI benefits who wish to test their ability to return to work without putting their SSDI benefits at risk. The program provides considerable assistance, including new career training opportunities and connection to potential employers, and it is voluntary and costs nothing. Here is a link to Social Security's information on the Ticket to Work program: <https://choosework.ssa.gov/>

It's not mandatory for your husband to enroll in the Ticket to Work program but, in addition to other available assistance, he can request a Trial Work Period (TWP) which would allow for 9 months, over a rolling five year period, during which he can earn any amount (even over the normal monthly limit mentioned above) without risking his SSDI benefits. Within the Trial Work Period, only those months he earns over the normal monthly SSDI limit would count as a Trial Work Month. So, for example, your husband could work part time regularly earning under the normal monthly limit and if, in some months (up to nine), he earned more it wouldn't affect his SSDI benefits.

So, your younger disabled husband can, indeed, work while on Social Security disability, for as long as he wishes while earning under the monthly SSDI limit (the SSDI earnings limit changes yearly). He may also wish to enroll in Social Security's Ticket to Work program for assistance with developing a new career. Plus, he can take advantage of using trial work months in the event his work earnings will, at times, exceed the monthly SSDI limit. If your husband earns over the SSDI limit for more than the 9 trial work months and his benefits are consequently stopped, he can - within the 5-year Trial Work Period - have his benefits reinstated (without again going through the full application process) if his disability, once more, renders him unable to work full time.

For starters, I suggest your husband contact Social Security's Ticket to Work program directly at 1.833-889-0108 to discuss returning to work part time. Social Security will guide him through the entire process.

Morrill Library hosting AI and hyper local weather issues

Jeff Sullivan
 Staff Reporter

The Norwood Morrill Memorial Library is hosting two events next week on Monday and Tuesday respectively.

The Tuesday, Jan. 30, event will feature National Weather Service's (NWS) Science and Operations Officer, and Norwood resident, Joseph Delli Carpini. Morrill Executive Director Clayton Cheever said the library heard about his talks and wanted to bring him home.

"So we actually heard about Joe from a neighboring library who had him present before, and he lives here, so there's another connection," Cheever said. "So we started talking to Joe and felt we should just do it here."

Cheever said it's an interesting topic as the weather is something that holds a unique dichotomy in most day-to-day interaction, in that it can be mundane one minute and extremely dangerous the next.

"Some people find the weather to be a topic of small talk and the easy thing to talk about, but it also affects all our lives," he said. "We're really excited to have Joe come."

Carpini will be discussing his duties at the service, which includes climate data, research and outreach, and he will also talk about how you can report weather to the NWS to help increase their accuracy in reporting. Carpini will also provide an update of the official National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's (NOAA) winter outlook for the Norwood area.

This will review what a "normal" winter will look like for Norwood, and discuss snowfall and temperature trends over the past few years as well as what are likely causing those trends, like weather systems such as El Niño. He will also give "his best guess" as to what the snowfall totals will look like this year.

Cheever asked that interested residents register for this event, since there is limited space. You can do so at <http://tinyurl.com/3phtp3dj>

The other event, scheduled for Monday, Jan. 29, is centered on explaining artificial intelligence and what we can expect from it in the future

Price Index (CPI) calculation for the past five years for one of the Airport's leaseholds, which he had calculated at just above 18 percent. "So, based on that, I would recommend that we increase the fees by 20 percent," he concluded. He also recommended that the actual approval of the fees be tabled until the next meeting to allow for public comment.

The increase, when approved, will be based on the maximum take-off weight of fixed-wing aircraft. The five fee categories will range from 5,001-8,000 lbs and top out in the +30,001 lbs zone, with the fee in the former increasing from $15 to $18, and that of the latter increasing from $80 to $96. Helicopter landing fees will increase from $20 to $24.

The only appointment of the day brought Mark Goodrich, of engineering consulting firm DuBois & King, before the Commission to present his monthly update on three FAA-financed Airport Improvement Plan (AIP) projects.

The Taxiway C relocation project - which included the excavation of the main parking lot for the installation of an underground filtration system - is complete, with its paperwork being completed. It came in under budget by approximately $70,000.

The contract for the reconstruction of Runway 10/28 has been awarded. "We're anticipating starting sometime this spring, as soon as the weather and the water allow," Goodrich said of the project's timetable, alluding to the wetlands that surround the site.

The two 300-foot-long paved safety areas for north and south ends of Runway 17/35 - officially considered a runway extension by the FAA - are currently under design, with conceptual preliminary plans scheduled to go out to the FAA sometime this month.

Finally, the three November and December visits of the U.S. Army's 10th Combat Aviation Brigade (Fort Drum, NY) and the 160th Special Operations Aviation Regiment (Fort Campbell, KY) were touched on. The visits were to conduct area recruiting events as well as to participate in flyovers at football games held at Gillette Stadium.

Vice Chairman Michael Sheehan cited a Dec. 7 letter to The Record by the commander of the 10th CAB praising Raymond, as well as Christopher Donovan Sr. and Jr. (Boston Executive Helicopters) for their efforts during the outfit's stay. "I want to recognize Mark. He always does a great job," Sheehan went on. "It's nice to be recognized for all the good that goes on here. I appreciate that, Mark. And too, the Donovan boys."

The Norwood Airport Commission typically meets at 4 p.m. on the middle Wednesday of the month in the NAC meeting room of the Welch Administration Building (111 Access Rd.). For more information, visit its webpage on the Town website.

Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in this necessity. Miracle Prayer

Dear Heart of Jesus, in the past I have asked You for many favours. This time, I ask you this very special one (mention favour). Take it, dear Heart of Jesus, and place it within Your own broken heart where Your Father sees it. Then, in His merciful eyes, it will become Your favour, not mine. Amen. Say for three days, promise publication and favour will be granted.

and how you can use it to perhaps simplify your life right now.

The current AI trend is called a Large Language Model, and Cheever said the idea behind it is to use statistical data to predict what the user is asking the computer to do.

Now that is admittedly a gross oversimplification, but it works as an introduction. Cheever said he wants to show people how they can use such models to make their lives a bit easier.

“I’ll share some examples of how I’ve used ChatGPT, for example, for my scripts at Norwood Community Media, and I’ve actually used it a little bit to help me brainstorm titles and ways to describe what I’m doing in the first place,” he said. “So I’ll talk about some of the ways people have used it and some of the concerns around the technology.”

He’ll explain how it was built and the uncertainty about how the software actually operates and why that is a concern, and what the future in the industry may hold.

“There has been a lot of coverage in the press; it seems you can’t turn around without seeing another story about AI,” he said. “A lot of people are like, ‘What does any of this even mean?’ And so I’ll try to help people comb through what people are talking about concerning AI and answer questions to help try to dispel some of the mystery behind it.”

Cheever said this event also has limited space, so if you are interested, register at <http://tinyurl.com/pc77kt3e>

Movie description: ONE VOTE is a small film about a big topic: American democracy. At a moment of unprecedented cynicism about the political process, ONE VOTE bears hopeful witness to the humanity and rich diversity of American voters, and to the unsung stories that comprise our exercise of democracy. It is an inspiring film that follows five diverse Americans on election day. At times funny, surprising and heart-wrenching, the film eschews partisan politics in favor of an honest portrayal of voters' Election Day experiences. It will move you to conquer their own obstacles and objections and to inspire one and all to participate in the democratic process. Run time: 1hr. 18 mins.
