Norwood Schools Building and Grounds Director Paul Riccardi and Food Service Director Jane McLucas, gave the Committee a preview of Capital Outlay Project requests for fiscal year 2016.

Riccardi said that three new trucks had been purchased with last year's money, including a dump truck with plow, a lunch truck for food service, and a utility truck for the electrician. The dump truck is expected to arrive on December 1, while the other two are expected during the second week of December.

"We're starting to replace the old fleet, which is anywhere between 12 and 14 years old," Riccardi said. He said the next vehicle to be re-

The holiday season is one of the busiest times of year at the Norwood Ecumenical Food Pantry, but that doesn't surprise Executive Director Ruth Teague.

"The Norwood community is the most generous community I can imagine anywhere on this earth," said Teague, who has run the Food Pantry for the past 24 and a half years.

Teague said that donations flow in almost constantly from schools, organizations, companies, and churches in time for Thanksgiving and the winter holiday season.

The Food Pantry serves between 300 and 350 families each year throughout the towns of Norwood and Westwood, with the largest family consisting of eight or nine people. Teague said that the Food Pantry refers to individuals as families too, and treats them as such. Many of these individuals are elderly, or are single folks who may have suffered an injury or a disabling condition that has brought on some hard times.

TOWN OF NORWOOD
PUBLIC HEARING — LOCAL TAX LEVY

The Board of Selectmen has scheduled a public hearing on Tuesday, December 9, 2014 at 7:15 p.m., in the Harry B. Butters Chambers, Room 34, Norwood Town Hall, 566 Washington Street, Norwood, concerning the percentages of the FY2015 local tax levy to be borne by each class of property in accordance with chapter 40, Section 56, as amended by Chapter 369 of the Acts of 1982, and Chapter 79 of the Acts of 1983.

BOARD OF SELECTMEN
Michael J. Lyons, Chairman

Norwood Record, 11/26/2014

TM OK's request for South Norwood beer and wine licenses

Sam Nickerson
Staff Reporter

Town Meeting members decided in an 82-45 vote to have the Board of Selectmen petition the state legislature for a special law to issue four beer and wine licenses in the South Norwood General Business District.

The article appeared to be the most hotly debated issue during the Special Town Meeting, as both sides went back and forth for nearly two hours.

District three member Paul Eysie spoke first on behalf of the article. Eysie, who has re-developed a number of properties in South Norwood, began by saying that his family has strong ties to the neighborhood, having resided there for many years.

He mentioned an empty storefront in a shopping plaza owned by the family, which they have been unable to fill for some time, despite interest. The primary reason, Eysie said, was that tenants felt they could not compete with uptown businesses unless they had the "same tools as the other merchants."

Eysie also referenced the November 18 Selectmen's meeting, in which a longtime South Norwood business owner appealed to move his beer and wine store out of the neighborhood. Eysie said that the business owner referred to South Norwood as a "ghost town" at night.

"We tonight, as town meeting members, can make difference in South Norwood," Eysie said. "You can help us fill those empty stores and promote growth and opportunity and try to stimulate the economy."

Eysie said that South Norwood still carries a reputation from the past, when there were many bars in the neighborhood, that should not have to affect the family businesses there today.

"South Norwood is stigmatized. There's backlash from the barrooms that were here forty and 50 years ago...We need to pull together as a community and go in the right direction," Eysie said.

Gustavo Da Silva, who helps run Minas Café, located in the Eysies' plaza, said that he would be interested in expanding into the vacant storefront and create more of a dinner atmosphere if they could serve beer and wine. He said that many of the people interested in Brazilian food now are traveling to other towns, where they can enjoy a beer with their dinner, instead of staying in South Norwood. Silva emphasized that Minas was not a bar, but a family restaurant.

Helen Eysie Pavlosky, who manages the plaza and created the petition to put the article on the Town Meeting warrant, said that the article was not for their one tenant, but was about "economic development and fairness."

"I want the South Norwood General Business District to get the same benefit that Norwood Central Business District derives from restaurants having beer and wine licenses," Pavlosky said.

Many, however, spoke out against the article, saying that South Norwood has different needs than uptown-and the licenses were not one of those needs-and that the issue was brought forth too quickly without much neighborhood input.

Selectman Helen Abdallah Donohue, of District Six, motioned for indefinite postponement of the issue in order to provide an opportunity for a committee to make sure that South Norwood would be complying with the law if the licenses were to issue. The motion did not carry in a voice vote.

Donohue said that when the uptown licenses were issued, there was a set of criteria and regulations that businesses needed to follow.

Olga Abdallah said that only 24 signatures on the petition to get the article on the warrant were residents of South Norwood and felt that the issue should first go back to committee for more resident input.

"I'm so sorry that there were not more people in our district that knew that this was coming about," Abdallah said. She also said that during a neighborhood study done in 2003, residents said that they wanted a bank, a grocery store and a drugstore, but did not feel wine and beer establishments were a priority.

Dale Day of District Six said she also felt that the issue was "put on the fast track without sufficient input from the South Norwood community."

South Norwood resident Michael Saad mentioned how South Norwood had struggled with problems stemming from bar patrons and liquor establishments over the years, with the Krayzee Horse Pub & Grill being the last straw.

"South Norwood has been through a lot of trouble. The Krayzee Horse turned the tide. We don't think we need any more licenses, beer and wine, in South Norwood," Saad said. "If they want to have a beer, go to Route One."

District Three member Judith Howard highlighted the differences between uptown and South Norwood, which she said has "congested, dead end streets with multi-family homes" and two schools that many children walk to.

"What is it about South Norwood that attracts every Tom, Dick, and Harry to impose their will and agenda without considering the safety of the 1100 children who go to school there?" Howard said.

The debate became tense at times, with members of each side feeling as though personal attacks were being made. Mod-

"We refer to them all as a family," Teague said.

This Thanksgiving, much like any other, the Food Pantry will be giving out certificates from grocery stores like Roche Brothers and others for the families to purchase turkeys, in addition to the regular baskets decorated by the Sunday School children and the dinners-in-a-box they give out each year. And because of the outpouring of donations, there is certainly no shortage of food this year.

"Every person that comes through our doors will be getting something," Teague said. "It's wonderful to be able to take care of as many people as we do."

A true testament to the generosity of the Norwood community, the Food Pantry is staffed entirely on a volunteer basis. Around 100 or so individuals regularly receive, stock, and distribute food for no pay.

During the holiday season, however, the Food Pantry has come to rely on a tremendous gesture each year from the Ledgeview Drive neighborhood.

Ledgeview Drive residents Marybeth and John McDonough, along with their family and neighbors, have been filling turkey dinner boxes for the food pantry since they first moved into the neighborhood 26 years ago.

"It's an incredibly generous town, whenever there is a need, people come forward tenfold," Marybeth said. "We're just regular people, we have the richest of rich and the poorest of the poor, it doesn't matter, even the people that don't have the time still give."

Each year leading up to the week of Thanksgiving, the McDonoughs collect donations and use the funds to buy non-perishable food in bulk. Then, just before Thanksgiving, volunteers from all over town come to fill the boxes, load them into trucks, and deliver them to the Food Pantry.

Last year, they received almost $5,000 in donations and with the help of nearly 120 people, filled enough boxes for 70 families.

This year, the McDonoughs were able to collect around two tons of food in their garage, which was dutifully packed into 60 boxes by dozens of families who came to help on November 23. And one of the boxes, Marybeth said, would be going to a family that donated in years past, but had found themselves in need this year.

"These boxes are going right to people in Norwood," Marybeth said. "When there's someone in need, there's always one of us who takes care of the other."

The entire production began just after 1 p.m., with the volunteers dividing into teams, each responsible for a row of boxes, which they filled assembly line-style, as food was loaded out of the garage and piled onto blankets. Children often did the bulk of the back-and-forth work, while the adults supervised their rows to make sure each box received all of the necessary ingredients.

Among the volunteers who came out to the McDonough's driveway on November 23 was the Heraghty family. Michael and his wife Kathy, have been bringing their children - Eamon, age nine, and Mairead, who is seven - to the event for close to five years.

"It gives them a sense of giving and what that means, so they understand what it means to pull together," Michael said.

In addition to filling the boxes, the children decorated cards to be placed into each box. Once all of the boxes were full, the volunteers loaded each one into a convoy of pickup trucks and SUVs, where they were delivered to the Food Pantry by around 3 p.m.

But it wasn't all work and no play, as there were plenty of smiles on the volunteers, and laughing heard throughout the crowd. And once the work was done, the volunteers were treated to cookies and ice cream sundaes.

Teague said that while the Food Pantry is not short-staffed this year by any means, there is always work to be done for anyone willing to work.

"We can put them to work. Heavy work for the men, a lot of lifting and stuff they have to be able to bend," Teague said.

Teague said that many local companies send their staffs to the Food Pantry to volunteer. They carry boxes to the clients' cars or fill food baskets while regular volunteers stock shelves and sort food. With all of the donations coming in for the holidays, Teague said there is always a need for people to come sort all of the incoming food.

Food donations remain the best way to help, Teague said, and this can be done on Thursday and Saturday mornings from 8:30 a.m. to 9:30 a.m. on Thursday and 11 a.m. on Saturday. Only nonperishable goods are accepted. There are also drop off points, such as the Norwood Public Library, if individuals cannot get to the Food Pantry at the designated times.

The Ecumenical Food Pantry is based at Grace Episcopal Church on Chapel Street in Norwood, where it has been serving the community since 1989, when it fed its first six clients.

Planning Board gives Regal Press time to acquire land rights

Sam Nickerson
Staff Reporter

The Regal Press 40R project may be able to move forward after all, now that new lease documents have been discovered.

The Planning Board voted to give Regal Press through the first quarter of 2015 to secure use of property currently owned by the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority (MBTA) for parking, during a meeting on November 24.

In the midst of a October 20 Planning Board meeting, it came to light that Regal Press owner, William Duffy, was unable to locate a lease or identify the use terms of a lease transfer demonstrating that Duffy could use the MBTA property for parking. The plan for the project had been approved by the Planning Board on the assumption that Regal Press could use the MBTA property to fulfill its parking requirements.

The Planning Board gave Regal Press until November 24 to continue searching for a document that would convey Regal Press' rights to use the property.

During the November 24 meeting, attorney Mark Bobrowski presented a 1977 assignment of lease-which included signed approval by the MBTA-subject to the original 1975 lease, which has not been found.

In preparation of the possibility that there is no 99-year lease, as Duffy believes there is, Bobrowski said, Regal Press has initiated steps with the MBTA to secure either a lease, easement, or deed so that "Mr. Duffy will just own it outright."

"One, the MBTA acknowledges that this is a valid lease and does not have any intention of terminating it or calling it into question...They recognize the lease and two, they will make every effort to move as fast as the MBTA's bureaucracy can move to make a solution permanent," Bobrowski said.

In addition, Bobrowski said, the situation is helped along by the upcoming work the MBTA plans to do on the Guild Street Bridge. Since the bridge must be assembled at a staging area and then lifted into place, Bobrowski indicated that Duffy is willing to allow the MBTA to use the Regal Press lot for this purpose.

"We're not going to apply for any building permit until the situation is resolved," he said.

Board member Joe Sheehan said that he would like to see the project move forward and was "patient enough" to see what comes of this new development. Board member Ernie Paciorkowski said he still liked the project and was also willing to give Regal Press time to work out a deal with the MBTA.

After the Board voted to that effect, resident Kevin Pentowski presented his concerns, namely that the parking spaces were too small and that the project posed public safety hazards. If the spaces were made the appropriate size, he said, Regal Press would still be short of the required amount and would have to reduce the number of units. Above all, he said, the property, under Activity and Use limitations, could not be used for the residential purposes.

Pentowski said that the Town no longer needed the project as proposed to meet its 1.5 percent affordable housing goals. Calling 40R laws "insidious," Pentowski said "this unit is going to attract the very worst elements...the transients and all the lowlifes we don't want this town."

Resident Tonie Eosco raised concerns about population density and neighborhood integrity, asking whether the parking situation sets a precedent for future 40R developers in town.

Town Planner Paul Halkiotis said that parking space regulations have trended smaller and that the tenants would not likely be families with large cars. Proximity to the MBTA would mean some might not even have cars. Halkiotis also said that the plan was submitted to various Town Department heads and public safety officials with no trouble.

Paciorkowski said that he was in favor of affordable housing and did not share Pentowski's concern regarding the tenants.

School Committee

placed would be a 2002 Ford dump truck.

Riccardi said last year's money was also used for the floor tile work at the Prescott School this past summer, and anticipates that the project will be finished this summer. Riccardi said they would be requesting money to continue replacing floor tiles at the elementary schools, with the Oldham school next on the list. He anticipated having all of the elementary schools done within the next five to nine years.

Riccardi mentioned that the boilers at the Callahan School had been on the capital plan for the past eight or nine years. On November 20, Town Meeting approved appropriating $485,809-which will be borrowed-to replace the two boilers. Because of a partnership with the Massachusetts School Building Authority (MSBA) Accelerated Repair Program, 50.58 percent of the project cost, or an estimated $210,578, will be reimbursed to the town.

Riccardi said that the schools should consider purchasing a trailer at the Willett Center that is currently being rented for the second year. He said that the facility is being used as a library and "it doesn't look like we are going to be able to live without that." Riccardi said that purchasing the trailer would cost $30,000.

Another project on the horizon, though not included in the fiscal year 2016 capital outlay projects, is the HVAC at the Coakley Middle School, which along with the floor tiling there, would be a $7 million project.

McLucas then said that much of the equipment used in the kitchens at the elementary schools was from 1974 or 1985, especially at the Balch central kitchen, where all the meals for elementary schools are made and shipped to the other schools. She said that the useful life span of the large equipment was around 25 years.

"My fear is that we're going to end up with all of this (breaking down) at the same time," McLucas said.

As of now, Riccardi said, all nine kitchen sites passed their Board of Health inspections without a single deficit, which he said was unheard of by the Board of Health.

The School Committee also heard an update on the District's Four A's - Academics, Activities, Arts, and Athletics - from five School Committee student representatives on November 19.

Norwood High junior Aloonee Adhikari presented on the academics portion of the four A's, mentioning the PSATS given to juniors and the Ready Step test for Freshman, which provides an understanding of strengths and improvement areas in advance of more high stakes tests in later years.

Senior Saloonee Adhikari spoke about arts at the school. On November 1 and 2, Adhikari said, AP and fourth level art students exhibited their art theses at the F. Holland Day House on Day Street. Adhikari also mentioned that art student volunteers were decorating windows at 659 Washington Street and at stores in town for the holidays.

Adhikari said that the Norwood High School band took silver at the Massachusetts Instrumental & Choral Conductors Association festival and platinum at the new England Scholastic Band Association finals.

Senior Hannah Doherty, speaking on athletics, mentioned the number of fall sports teams that competed in sectional tournaments, as well as the field hockey team, which posted a 16-2-2 record with the help of senior Kacie Smith, who was named MVP of the Herget Division and an All-Scholastic player by the Boston Globe.

Senior Viktorija Barone spoke about activities, including the 30 students from Malaga, Spain, who stayed with 23 Norwood families in September. Barone also said that during Advisory period, students were learning the school song and were going to be competing by class to determine which year performs it best. Sophomore Elizabeth Wagner said that freshman orientation and the Junior/Senior Semiformal on November 10 were successful.

Superintendent of Schools James Hayden gave the student representatives an award to present to the High School from the College Board for the school's excellence on the AP exams. For the second year in a row, Norwood High School had more students taking advanced placement courses and doing well on the tests than other schools around the country.

"It's one thing to take the test and not pass it, but many of you are taking the test and getting a three or better ... this is some evidence that you are working very hard, we're very proud of you and you have some great teachers," Hayden said.

Firefighter injured in Norwest Drive blaze

Sam Nickerson
Staff Reporter

One firefighter was injured as the Norwood Fire Department battled a two-alarm fire at the Norwest Woods apartment complex on November 21.

The fire, which is still under investigation, began on the second floor of the 802 Norwest Drive around 3 p.m., officials said.

One firefighter, who was working ventilation on the roof, slid from the roof and fell over 20 feet. He was flown via medflight to Brigham and Women's hospital in Boston, where he was treated for a broken right foot. The firefighter's family joined him at the hospital.

Chief Anthony Greeley said the injured firefighter, who is also a paramedic, was released from the hospital and is at home recuperating. Greeley did say that the firefighter, a five-year member of the Department whose name has not been released, will need to have surgery in the near future, but is expected to recover.

"We expect him to fully recover, it's just a matter of time," Greeley said. "He will have the department's full support all the way through."

No other injuries were reported and many of the building's residents were not home when the fire began.

"It could have been a lot worse. We got the best news given the firefighter's injuries, the building, and the property damage," Greeley said. Officials have yet to determine a cost estimate for the damage from the fire.

Crews from the Canton, Westwood, Sharon and Walpole fire departments were also called in to battle the blaze, which displaced several families. Firefighters said that nine of the families have been relocated to a hotel.

"We had immediate help on second alarm (from those departments), what we call mutual aid. We couldn't be more grateful for their help," Greeley said.

Firefighters from the surrounding towns who were called into help also took to Twitter to express their solidarity.

"Always happy to help. Relieved your member is ok," the Walpole Firefighters said in a tweet to the Norwood

Rock show benefits Norwood music

Sam Nickerson
Staff Reporter

Norwood's local rock and rollers turned out in force to the Workmen's Hall on Wilson Street on November 15 for a benefit concert to raise money for youth music programs at Norwood schools.

The brainchild of local musician and music teacher, Joe Hart, of the Joe Hart Band, the concert was more of a continuous jam session, with ensembles mixing and joining each other to play different songs.

Most of the songs played were rock covers, though some original compositions were also played.

"Most of the night we just played rock and roll standards that everyone knows so that people could easily jump in and so that everyone in the audience could sing along," Hart said.

Whether there for the sing-alongs or for the cause, the audience packed the hall that evening.

Hart, whose child is a trumpeter in the music program at the Coakley Middle School, said they were able to make a donation of $500 to the Norwood Parents Music Association, which supports Norwood music students with uniforms, concerts, and competition attendance logistics.

Among the performers were some of Hart's music students, as he teaches both at the Band Gig School of Music on Central Street and through the Norwood Recreation Department. Student Jordan Katz sang a few numbers, including "Come Together" by the Beatles, with Hart and his band. Guitarists Charlie Cunha and Desi Devaul, also students of Hart, performed with their band Freak out the Establishment.

Other performers included Nick Vecchio, who runs the Band Gig School of Music, the Tom Levesque Band, and Hart's own band, which served as the house band, and included Nancy MacCallum on vocals and Hans Waldmann on bass. They often had two drummers playing at the same time.

Hart said it had been a hectic evening preparing for the show, but he had plenty of help along the way.

"Everything went great. It was a lot of work pulling so many people together, but everyone was incredibly accommodating. Workmen's Hall is a great place to play, and everyone really pitched in to make the night go smoothly," Hart said.

In addition to the performers and the venue, Hart said he wanted to especially thank his good friend and "roadie" for the night Todd Edel, who helped with sound and loading in gear, as well as local mothers Kristen Serratore and Kathryn Hand, who worked the door during the show.

And though there are no concrete plans at the moment, Hart also said he would be interested in doing the event again, as he has plenty of experience with benefit work.

"These kinds of events are important to Norwood because not only are we able to raise some money for a great cause, it brings people together and shows everyone how fun music can be," Hart said.

Firefighters on November 22.

"We always have your back," Westwood Firefighters tweeted on November 22.

Chief Greeley referred to the fire as a room and contents fire, though the department's investigative team is still working to determine the cause of the fire, along with the state Fire Marshal's office.

"The guys did make a fantastic stop ... they really got on it quickly, the fire was extinguished really quickly after all the crews arrived," Greeley said. "They deployed tremendous tactics and strategies, and were congruent on getting job done as quickly as they could, with only the one sad moment of the injured firefighter."

The Department said that the fire was contained and eliminated by 4:30 p.m. on Friday.

It was a dangerous week for Massachusetts firefighters, as firefighters in Saugus and Springfield also sustained injuries while battling fires just days apart from the Norwest Drive fire.

Norwood Fire Department has been busy throughout the month of November, responding to motor vehicle accidents and fires, including another two-alarm fire on November 10 at a residential location on 717 Pleasant Street.

STOP HORSEING AROUND

The term "charley horse" is used to describe a muscle cramp in the calf caused by too much or too little activity. This painful cramping periodically afflicts nearly three out of four individuals over age 50, usually at night. When a charley horse occurs during exercise, it is usually the result of dehydration, muscle fatigue, or mineral imbalances involving either sodium or potassium. Medications such as diuretics can also cause cramping due to a decrease of potassium in the blood stream. In addition, a charley horse may be triggered by abruptly pointing the toes downward or even lying on the stomach with the toes pointed down. Prevention of charley horses involves drinking fluids and avoiding poses with toes pointed downward.

If you're dealing with persistently painful muscles, in your calf or elsewhere, it's likely that a good physical therapist can help. Our experienced therapists offer the hands-on manual therapy that you need to live with less pain. We will create a regimen by working with you and your doctor so that you can get back on your feet quickly and safely. Please call if you have any questions or would like to make an appointment at one of our three convenient locations. All major insurances accepted. Treatment of all types of patients and cases... Immediate appointments available.

P.S. To ease charley horse pain, carefully stretch the calf by gently flexing the foot and massaging the calf. Persistent pain despite these efforts should prompt a visit to the doctor to rule out phlebitis (inflammation of a vein).

Recycler of the Month goes to a local engineer

Sam Nickerson
Staff Reporter

Town officials presented the latest recipient of the Norwood Recycler of the Month Award with his prize on November 13.

Town Manager John Carroll, Recycling Coordinator Doris Burtman and a representative from Waste Management, accompanied by Norwood Public Access Television, met Chris Karavoulias at his home on Shaw Street to give him the award.

"I want to thank you for your contributions to Norwood for making it cleaner greener and more beautiful," said Heather Leger of Waste Management.

Karavoulias, an engineer and six-year resident of Norwood, was nominated by his girlfriend for his recycling efforts. Karavoulias said he was very surprised when he received notification that he had won and had no idea that he'd been nominated.

"It's easy to recycle and it doesn't take a lot of effort. You just have to have everything set up so you can do it every day," Karavoulias said. "It helps reduce waste ... I do like energy saving too, that helps. It saves money for us, for the world, it's just better for the environment."

Karavoulias said that he used to live in an apartment complex that had a messy trash area and it was difficult to recycle there, but having the curbside bins has made the process much easier.

In addition to his curbside recycling bins, Karavoulias—who said his girlfriend sent him an email that morning that began with "Good morning, Mr. Recycler of the Month" - safely disposes of batteries at the lab where he works, takes advantage of the Winter Street Composting facility and its hazardous waste disposal days, and keeps a storage device in his kitchen that allows him to reuse plastic shopping bags.

Karavoulias did concede that he sometimes has to check his neighbors' driveways for bins to see if it is indeed recycling day.

Karavoulias also said that when he lived in New York, there were special clear recycling bags, so that waste management could properly separate recyclables from trash. He thought this could be a good idea for Norwood to consider as well.

In addition to his official Recycler of the Month certificate, Lynch presented Karavoulias with a number of gift certificates to local restaurants and businesses, including to Conrads, Lewis', the Old Colonial Café, and Spot!.

Karavoulias was particularly excited about the Spot! card, saying that they have "the best bagels," that were better than the ones in New York. Karavoulias, who said he enjoyed trying the local businesses in Norwood, separated the gift cards according to which establishments he had already been to and those he had yet to try.

Karavoulias' journey to Norwood was anything but ordinary. Born in New York and of Greek descent, Karavoulias moved abroad, living in Greece and England before returning to the United States. In all, he's spent 21 years abroad and 15 years in the United States.

Karavoulias holds mechanical and electrical engineering degrees from both Greece and the United States. He currently works for an insurance company, where he studies risk management and safety equipment. He has been back in the United States for seven years.

Overall, Karavoulias was particularly vocal about the town he calls home.

"(Norwood) is the best town I've found so far," he said, noting all the great restaurants and the downtown as major reasons why he calls Norwood home.

Norwood Football gears up for Thanksgiving showdown

The surging Mustang football team is eager to take on the Dedham Marauders during their annual Thanksgiving Day clash.

Jake Levin
Staff Reporter

The tale of the tape is an even match for the latest Thanksgiving Day affair between the Norwood Mustangs and Dedham Marauders.

The Mustangs (3-7) vs. Marauders (2-8) matchup returns to Norwood this year after a 20-18 victory for Dedham a season ago on the Marauders' home turf. It was the end of a trying 1-10 campaign for the Mustangs in 2013.

While there have certainly been some growing pains, the 2014 rendition of the Mustangs is not to be confused with the 2013 team. These Mustangs are averaging nearly double their points per game (ppg) from a season ago, up to 13.1 ppg after 7.7 last season. The defense is also slightly improved, down to giving up 23.1 ppg vs. 27.9 in '13.

Dedham, for what it's worth, is averaging 15.5 ppg on offense, but is giving up roughly a touchdown more per game than Norwood defensively (30.2 ppg).

To state the obvious, the 2014 win total of three is greater than that 2013 total of one. Moral victories certainly don't show up in the standings, but there's definitely been a few more of those variety for the Mustangs this season, too. A 14-12 loss to Wayland on Sept. 19 and a 10-7 loss to Milton two weeks ago are losses all the same, but they're also the type of competitive games Norwood wasn't playing in last season.

Norwood comes into the game as winners of three out of four, while Dedham is riding a two-game winning streak. The Marauders dismantled Wareham 34-0 on Nov. 7, and downed Coyle & Cassidy 14-6 their last time out on Nov. 14. The theme of the game, clearly, is two teams that started slow but haven shown significant improvement over the last month.

It will be the first taste of the rivalry for Mustangs' head coach Jim Tighe.

"I know it's a big game and it's been going on for a long time," Tighe said. "The kids from Dedham are always tough.

"I haven't seen a lot of them, but I've seen some film, and they've shown some pretty good football. It's an important game."

Most importantly, Tighe also emphasized that it's the last high school game ever for the seniors.

"I tried to tell them, the only

When tradition trumps logic

Jake Levin
Staff Reporter

Familiarity, in most cases, is a good thing. It's good having things you can count on.

Each Thanksgiving, you can count on overdosing on tryptophan, you can count on it being a Thursday, and you can count on the Detroit Lions and Dallas Cowboys being on your TV set. Thanks to Roger Goodell's greed, you can now count on a third NFL game that night, but I digress.

If you're from any number of states across the country, including right here in Massachusetts, you can count on high school football games. And lots of them.

Many of these games, generally considered rivalries, date back to the 1800s. Medford vs. Malden, Winchester vs. Woburn, Durfee (Fall River) vs. New Bedford, just to name a few. The English High School of Boston vs. Boston Latin is such a big game that it's played annually at Harvard Stadium. Right here in the Bay State Conference, in fact, is the oldest public high school football rivalry in the country, Needham vs. Wellesley.

Here in Norwood, you can count on the Mustangs facing off against the Dedham Marauders on Thanksgiving. Hailing from Hingham, I can count on the Harbormen doing battle with the Scituate Sailors each Turkey Day.

These rivalries vary in intensity from town to town, based on a variety of factors. Lots of it is dependent on the success of the teams during a given season. In some cases, it doesn't even matter if one team is undefeated and one team is winless.

Let's say it's the Norwood vs. Dedham game, and the Mustangs are 10-0 but the Marauders are 0-10. Neither team has those records this season, but bear with me. If the Marauders win the game, their season could still be considered a success because they beat those darned Mustangs. For Norwood, their season would be ruined at the hands of those pesky Marauders.

Unless, of course, the Thanksgiving game was meaningless to Norwood. But wait, how could that be? How exactly could a rivalry game be meaningless? On Thanksgiving, no less. Does this mean the Patriots and Jets could play a meaningless game?

In an alternate universe where the Patriots don't have Tom Brady at quarterback, sure, technically it could be a meaningless game. But the game will still count the same in the standings. Because in the NFL, you play 16 regular season games, and if you're one of the top six teams in your conference, you advance to the post-season.

That isn't exactly the case in Massachusetts high school football anymore.

It may not affect the Mustangs this season, but pretend for a second that they went 7-0 in the regular season, won three playoff games, and were bound for the Division III Super Bowl at Gillette Stadium on Dec. 6. You realize that they'd still have to play on Thanksgiving Day, right?

Norwood could lose the game to Dedham 100-0 and it wouldn't matter, they'd still be bound for Gillette. Thanks to the new playoff system implemented by the MIAA prior to the 2013 season, there are teams in Massachusetts that will play their regular season, go to the playoffs, essentially play another regular season game, and then go to the Super Bowl.

How does this make any sense? It would be like the Patriots playing the Jets after they beat Denver in the AFC Championship Game this January, prior to heading out to Arizona for Super Bowl XLIX.

It's nice to count on your team playing Thanksgiving Day, but if one team is Super Bowl-bound, wouldn't it make perfect sense to shuffle your rivalry for just one year?

The issue of fair competition comes into play next. Football is a violent enough game as it is. Even one extra game can take its toll. And with all due respect to these rivalries, if the game doesn't matter in the context of that season, why play it? The teams that have earned the right to play in the Super Bowl have also earned the right to have Thanksgiving Day off.

It's why you see so few star players play meaningful minutes in the NFL pre-season. It's why the Pro Bowl is arguably the biggest laughing stock going in all of professional sports. Injuries are a reality in football, and if they're avoidable, why risk them after (or is it before, and then after) the playoffs?

Was that last thought confusing? It was meant to be. I'm all for counting on traditions on the fourth Thursday of November, but if Norwood was in the Division III Super Bowl, I wouldn't want them playing on Thanksgiving. And if it were Dedham, I think Norwood could find another dance partner for just one year. Logically, wouldn't it be the team from the other Division III game affected by the Super Bowl?

Over the last several years, many college rivalries have gone extinct thanks to realignment (read: money). These rivalries of Massachusetts high school football wouldn't go extinct; there would merely be a one-year hiatus, or however many years while one team was playing for the Super Bowl, for the sake of common sense. And isn't it nice to be able to count on common sense prevailing?

one you remember is the last one. You can think about it all, but the one you remember the most is the last one you play. So hopefully, that'll resonate," he said. Norwood and Dedham kickoff at 10 a.m. on Thursday, Thanksgiving morning.

Swim season officially comes to a close after State Championships

Jake Levin
Staff Reporter

Norwood swimming & diving officially wrapped up its season with the Division II state championships at Harvard University on Sunday.

Just one swimmer, Charlotte Rivard, and two divers, Emerson Kerns and Marissa Gillis, qualified for the Mustangs.

Rivard, the senior captain, competed in the 100 free and 200 IM. She placed 14th out of 22 in the 100 free with a time of 57.85 seconds, roughly half a second slower than her qualifying time of 57.38. Rivard came in 15th out of 18 in the 200 IM, clocking in at 2:25.62, her second best time of the season. She had swam the event in 2:23.41 at the south sectionals.

Kerns was the lone male diver to compete, while Gillis placed 15th out of 16 girls divers.

Overall, Norwood placed 21st out of 24 teams that competed in the event, beating out Mount Alvernia, Dracut and Notre Dame of Tyngsboro. The Mustangs compiled a 3-7 record during the regular season, winning meets over Weymouth, Braintree and Dedham in Jennifer Rodger's first year as head coach. Rodger was a member of the Norwood swimming & diving team during her high school years from 2004 through her graduation in 2008.

erator David Hern reminded members that no disparaging remarks against individuals were allowed and he would ask offenders to leave if necessary.

Selectman Michael Lyons of District Eight described the process by which the Downtown Steering Committee successfully petitioned for more beer and wine licenses, which he said took a good deal of time, but he said the results have been positive in the Uptown Business District. Lyons said that his issue was that this article came forward rather quickly in comparison.

Lyons also said that the Selectmen would set the criteria for the beer and wine licenses and ultimately had the power to decide whether to issue them.

While the initial article requested a maximum of four licenses, Selectmen Bill Plasko of District One felt that the wording was too vague to pass in the legislature and successfully motioned to change the wording to request a total of four licenses. This wording was accepted when the article was passed by Town Meeting in a counted vote.
