Craft Brew 5K for Friends of Norwood Center

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

Sunday's morning saw the first ever Craft Brew 5K at the Norwood Space Center to benefit the Friends of the Norwood Center.

More than 200 runners came out to support the event, with Norwood resident Peter Bowring coming in first place, followed by Tulsa Oklahoma resident Jack Morrow and Norwood resident Eric Kewriga. Canton resident Andrea Widberg came in first on the women's side, followed by Lauren D'Angelo and Allary Braitsch.

Percival Brewing Company and the Charles River Running Club hosted the race. Percival owner Phil Oliveira said the race was just a good way to give back to Norwood and show the potential for the Norwood Space Center as an economic booster and a community builder.

"Percival Brewing is relatively new, we've been here operating for about nine months now, and this is part of a coordinated effort, just to continue promoting community events and social gatherings," he said. "We just want people to come out of their house and see the community as it is."

Charlotte Walsh and Jim Henry ran the organizing from the Charles River Running Club, and Walsh said the event was a breeze. Walsh said she was particularly glad to help out the Friends of the Norwood Center, which is a 501c3 non-profit dedicated to the local business community.

"We wanted to put a race together to benefit the Friends of Norwood Center, I sit on the board of that, and it's an organiza-

Town Hall renovation talks still drawing fire

The Permanent Building Construction Committee (PBCC) met Thursday, Aug. 23 to discuss two major Town renovation projects: the Chapel of St. Gabriel the Archangel at Highland Cemetery and the Norwood Town Hall. While the chapel discussion sailed through without debate, the Town Hall project spurred a sparring contest over how to proceed between Francis "Gerry" Hopcroft and Theodore "Ted" Callahan.

The Town Hall was constructed in 1928, and its power is generated by steam. The entire building's systems need to be overhauled, including the HVAC system, electricity, plumbing and air circulation, according to a report that Callahan showed.

"I read the report three times," Callahan said, noting that he is an architect who has worked on "thousands of projects" throughout the course of his career. "We need to bring this building into the 21st century. The electrical load alone is 33 percent undersized from what we need. There are 800 panels, and we need 1,200.

"We are still running on the same system, with some updates that we have been using since 1928," he said.

Although no one doubted that the building needed a massive overhaul, the crux of the problem was the way the planning was funded. The original funding approved at Town Meeting was for the Court Street design proposal, at ap-

Two arrested in drug sting

Jeff Sullivan

Last Thursday, the Norwood Police Department (NPD) reported arresting two juveniles at the Five Star Wireless Cell Phone Store on Washington Street.

The two juveniles, one 17-year-old and one 16-year old, are both being charged in this incident. The NPD charged the 17-year-old with seven counts of drug distribution and the 16-year-old with possession of heroin with intent to distribute.

"We've had an investigation up now for the last couple of months where our detectives coordinating with the (Norfolk County Police Anti-Crime) NORPAC Task Force and the State Police assigned to the Norfolk District Attorney have been looking at the people in this store," said Chief William Brooks. "You know, we have not seen any business going from the store at all. It's been our theory all along these guys have been living in the basement, and they're not supposed to be."

Brooks said NPD Detective Tony Lopes led the investigation, and found evidence that the two individuals, who are brothers, were liv-

Trails Subcommittee wants you to hit the dirt

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Norwood Trails Subcommittee formed early this year as a way to help promote and build up the trails system in the Town of Norwood.

At the group's meeting last week, members went over how they feel they can best represent to the Town what can be done with the trails Norwood already has and how more could be developed.

"We want people to know that there are such things as trails in the Town," said subcommittee member Lee Leach.

"To do this, we kind of want to start with the best of our trails."

So the idea now is to use the foot traffic of Norwood Day to gauge where residents want to see more trails. Right now, the Town has two complete and usable trails, but the subcommittee is looking at improving several more to make them accessible and sustainable.

The committee agreed that Endean Park and Hennessey Field are the two parks that are set to go for trail walking. There's also the Ellis Pond Trail, Shattuck Park and the Bade Canoe Launch. The group stated they want use Norwood Day to learn how the Town can improve those areas to create more recreational opportunities. Lands also include the University Ave. conservation land, the LaSalle conservation land, Hawes Brook and Pool, the Pezwick Park conservation land, the Father McAlee Playground, the Purgatory Brook conservation land parcel, the Willet School Winter Street Path, Everett Street conservation land and the Traphole ing in the rear of the building.

"We've done a series of about seven undercover buys," he said. "We purchased both cocaine and heroin from the targets that are here."

According to the NPD, surveillance showed no actual cell phone business occurring in the store.

The two juveniles were arranged in district court the Friday following their arrest.

The Norfolk County Police Anti-Crime (NORPAC) Task Force serves the Norfolk County towns of Canton, Dedham, Foxborough, Medfield, Millis, Needham, Norfolk, Norwood, Plainville, Sharon, Stoughton, Walpole, Westwood, Wellesley and Wrentham. It has been in existence since 1987. Detectives were assisted at the scene of the search by two K-9 units from the office of Norfolk County Sheriff Michal Bellotti.

"NARROWWOOD" A SAD STATE OF AFFAIRS

To the Editor:

I would like to thank this paper for setting the record straight with concerns of the recent Plimpton Ave paving job. The drivable road space has indeed been narrowed over four feet at central point in the street. Where you could once have two cars parked and still get through, you no longer can since the work on 8/3/18.

The BOS has recognized this, although they did not recognize me on my written request to come in and speak with them on this matter. They did not even list my request in their public agenda. They also did not list Mark Ryan's scheduled road work discussions with the BOS on the official agenda. This is exactly why we need to have Public Input Sessions at our BOS Meetings.

I have again asked to speak with the BOS to have this needless and dangerous narrowing of a street corrected. It should be corrected with our current year road budget. Our town should not move along to another street and leave this liability as is. Our BOS was given pictures showing this narrowing on 8/3/18 by me and allowed the contractor to come and backfill with dirt and plant grass seed the following week. By the way- that is not "green space". Our Chairman of the Board also came by on 8/3/18 on my request, and was a witness to the first accident caused by this narrowing as the tar was still warm!

I have invited our BOS to come over and have a site visit along with any Town official, and I will park two of my own vehicles and prove that my tape measure does not lie with a third vehicle unable to pass. Not to worry, I have plenty of cars if we need more. If the BOS will not correct this, I will take corrective measures with an Article to do so at the next Town Meeting. "Narrowwood" is a very sad state of affairs.

Fabiola R. Decius – playwrights and actors behind her – addresses the audience at the Teens WRITE 10 Minute Play Festival held last month at the Riverside Theatre Works.

Norwood High's Aliya Jackson's work showcased in Boston

Matthew MacDonald
Staff Reporter

Last month, the inaugural Teens WRITE (Writing, Reading, and Investigating Theater Everywhere) festival of 10 minute plays was presented at the Riverside Theatre Works in the Hyde Park neighborhood of Boston. It showcased the work of half a dozen budding playwrights ranging in age from 13-17 years old and coming from the greater Boston area.

One of the participating playwrights was 15 year old Aliya Jackson. The Norwood High School student – fresh off of acting in its production of “High School Non-Musical” and with aspirations to direct – built on that experience by applying for Teens WRITE.

“I need to understand, from a writer’s point of view, what they want their work to look like, and what they have in their minds.”

The result of this was her three-person play, “I Am Who I Am” which – in one brief scene – focuses on a boy acting on his interest in makeup with his sister’s help, and the immediate consequences of their father finding out.

Jackson spoke of her inspiration for the play during the post-festival discussion, citing her strong belief in equality between men and women, as well as her philosophy that people should be able to do as they wish provided their actions don’t have a negative impact.

A little later, at the festival after party, she elaborated on the challenge of effectively bringing this philosophy – as she had written it – to life in performance. “It was hard being a writer and a director because, as a writer I needed to show what I wanted to say, but as a director I also needed to portray what other people would understand.”

Understanding and embracing the complexities and challenges of putting on a play was one of the goals of Teens WRITE as it was envisioned and planned out by its creator, local playwright Fabiola R. Decius.

Over the course of the program, she brought in theater professionals – including a playwright, actor, director, and a number of other theater world specialists – to provide a comprehensive overview of the production process, as well as insight and support to the six playwright/directors as curtain time drew ever closer.

“Essentially, everything they learned they are now putting into practice,” Decius explained immediately after the final weekend session before the festival. “So they are the playwrights. They are, in essence, the dramaturges, as well. They’re directing their plays. Actors are coming in. There are song transitions, so they’re essentially helping with composing music and choosing what the mood of the play will be.”

Jackson – in the festively energized post-show environment of the small, crowded function room – shared her thoughts on the greatest benefit of the program for her:

“I think it was being able to connect with other people my age who are interested in the same thing as me... Among the people that I talk to regularly, they’re not all good writers or readers, so it’s nice to be around people that share the same interests as me within the writing perspective.”

Describing “I Am Who I Am” as unfinished after having just seen it performed for the first time under the lights (“I definitely want to revise it, but I don’t know which parts I want to revise yet.”), Jackson described writing and directing as “a good first experience to know what it would be like, but I proximately $900k. Some members, including Hopcroft, thought money should be used before the upcoming Town Meeting in November to assess what needs to be prioritized, because the original Court Street plan was found lacking.

Hopcroft said he discussed this before the Board of Selectmen on Tuesday, August 21 and received their approval on this line of thinking.

"It was a very productive meeting," Hopcroft said. "I was able to convey, along with the Town Manager, that we needed to proceed with the work now, and then decide what to implement later. I told him what we need to expedite and that there may be some delay."

"I don't agree with that," countered Callahan. "I can't, with this project in its present context. The more I thought about it, the more I thought it should go to Town Meeting first."

Hopcroft asked if Town Meeting had a recommendation as to how to proceed, noting that, at least if the work was started, they could learn the best course of action.

"We still have the plan," Callahan said.

"That's freaking nonsense," Hopcroft replied.

"They gave us three or four ways we could proceed," noted Bill O'Connor. "Then we can go back to them and say this is what we tried, but it didn't work."

Bill Kinsman, who chaired the meeting, stressed that Town Meeting approved the money based on the Court Street study.

"They deserve to know what happened," he said.

"The Court Street report was based on space usage," Hopcroft said. "We have not changed the fundamental concept of the plan, whether it is the Court Street plan or an updated plan. The objective was to upgrade Town Hall. I object to stopping the project and screwing around."

"If you combine these two rooms," Callahan said, motioning to the Walter Ryan Room where the meeting was held and the adjacent room, "you are going to have 30 people in just this room. That's $12,000 to $15,000 just for that. You have to change the air flow. There is a load bearing wall. You have to go back to Town Meeting and bring them up to date."

"If we are going to talk about it and yell about it, we should go ahead so we can decide a course of action, to let them know what is appropriate. That makes perfect sense," Kinsman said.

He concluded that the "bones of the building" needed to be studied, rather than just take a "paper and paint" approach.

"Finish the report," Hopcroft said. "I am a veteran of Town Meeting. It's better to do it. We can spend $51,000 to find out that the Court Street thing wasn't going to work. Then we can turn the rest of the money to Town Meeting to see how they want to proceed."

"I would suggest going to the level of $70,000," said Callahan. "Then we can give back $600,000 so they can understand what needs to be done. Town Meeting can be pretty astute."

Cathy Carney noted that the Board of Selectmen already sponsored the motion to go outside of the plans when Town Meeting originally approved the funding.

"If anything is sponsored outside of the plan, we should go to the Board of Selectmen, say, 'here are our dilemmas,' and have them make a motion at Town Meeting," said Carney.

"That ties it all up in a nice little bow," Bill O'Connor said. "Believe it or not, we are all on the same page."

On a less cantankerous issue, the St. Gabriel Chapel restoration project is running along smoothly, according to John Racine, the associate principal at RGB Architects, a Providence-based architecture, project management and interior design firm.

The invoice presented by Hopcroft for the architect for July was $7,648.78.

"The contract needs to be signed by September 1," said Kinsman. "We should sign it on August 30."

Racine said that all of the windows have been removed. The stained glass will cost $41,456 from the glass company.

According to Hopcroft, there is $39,115 remaining to be paid in the contract for the building restoration.

"If the masonry is done by mid-November, we will be able to install the windows then," Racine said. "If not, we may be able to make a deal with the glass company to store the windows in the shop over the winter, since it is not their busy season."

The vote to approve the funding was unanimous.

Pictures given to the board members in packets showed that the glass was textured and that the curvature was aligned with the structure of the windows.

"He's a genius," said Bill O'Connor of the man who designed the glass and its alignment and soldering.

The lantern will be replaced, according to Racine, which will be "an easier (project) to do and much smaller."

Callahan asked if a crane would be used.

"If somebody got it up there, they did it somehow," said Hopcroft. "Gravity can beat it up to get it down."

Carney noted that the Norwood Airport would have to be notified of the height of the crane because of FAA regulations. Racine said he thought the crane would be "in the 40- to 50-foot range."

"Usually 75 feet is the cutoff, but we will check," Racine said.

"You will have to notify them well in advance, at least 30 days" Carney said. "I wouldn't want to see you get up there and have to stop."

Trails continued from page 3

Brook conservation land.

Committee member Sue Bartlett said they want to show a huge map of Norwood with the trails super imposed on it in a color coded fashion, so that residents can see what is in good condition, what they are working on and what is not used, but has potential.

“We just want to have a visual so people could have an idea of just how many trails we have in Town,” she said.

Leach said they want to start by promoting the best they have now, which are Ellis, Endean and Hennessy.

For Norwood Day, subcommittee member Joe Greeley said he wants to have a map of Endean Park as well.

“We could make up a post of Endean in the front and the back (of their Norwood Day booth) as well as the Hennessy as a draft form,” he said. “A lot of what we’re presenting to people is in the short-term, but we also want to show the longer range view of things. We want to introduce people to these trails.”

Greeley said taking residents’ feedback is also a must.

“We could take people’s contact information or have people fill out index cards with suggestions,” he said. “We want people to give feedback. And you want to try to do something with it as soon as possible afterwards.”

Leach said he agreed.

“I think we’ll get a good sense as to where we need to put our energies to if a lot of people are concerned about certain areas.”

The subcommittee will also be hosting walks through current trails later this fall. Greeley said they are working with Progress Norwood to host a walk on Oct. 21 at the Endean Park.

“Before our joint event or afterwards they (Progress Norwood) are going to have a barbeque, probably by the Hawes Pool,” he said.

The subcommittee also discussed a planned walk at the Cleveland School by Ellis Pond for September, but they will be hosting it with the school and they have not worked out a date just yet.

ART ASSOCIATION DEMO FEATRES FRANCO

For the month of September, The NORWOOD ART ASSOCIATION will hold their monthly ARTIST DEMONSTRATION on a special evening, MONDAY, September 10th at 6:30 p.m. in the Simoni Room of the Norwood Morrill Memorial Library, located at 33 Walpole Street in Norwood. This is a change from their 3rd Thursday of the month meeting, for this month only. These demonstrations are FREE and the public are welcome and encouraged to attend! Light refreshments are served and there is a raffle of a piece of art donated by the attending artist.

On MONDAY, September 10th, the NAA's featured demo artist will be Rob Franco. Mr. Franco lives in Natick and his passion for art began at an early age when he would visit a neighborhood artist in Newport, Rhode Island, which led to his training as an illustrator in the US Air Force and continued in his life as a graphic artist in the Boston Area.

Mr. Franco's fascination with the ocean and other bodies of water continues to inspire his work as he searches for subjects to paint in New England and Eastern Shore Coastlines, such as the Wild Assateague Ponies, birds and sea creatures. Riders wanted for second annual Canton PMC Kids Ride

The Canton PMC Kids Ride is looking for riders for their second annual ride on Saturday September 29th to raise money for life-saving cancer research and treatment at the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute through the Jimmy Fund.

The Pan-Mass Challenge is an annual bike-a-thon that raises more money for charity than any single athletic fundraising event in the country. The PMC has given more than $599 million since its inception in 1980. The PMC Kids Ride now includes more than 35 towns and has raised more than $7.2 million. The event donates 100 percent of every rider-raised dollar directly to Dana-Farber.

After a successful first year where 50 riders raised over $11,000 for the Jimmy Fund, the Canton Kids Ride is moving to their new location at the Irish Cultural Centre of New England. Kids can ride safely on this closed course loop that will go through the ICC's campus and ride past the new Treetop Adventures site.

It's a great way for kids to have a fun time riding their bike while helping other kids who are undergoing treatment for cancer. The PMC channels 100% of every rider-raised dollar directly to Dana-Farber's most pressing research and patient care initiatives. Every dollar raised makes a difference because resources are directed when and where they make the most impact.

Check-in begins at 8 a.m. and there are two courses - a short loop designed for children 5 and under, and those on tricycles, balance bikes, and big wheels, and a one mile loop designed for all other riders. Volunteers, riders and families are also invited to attend a celebration after the ride which will include food, face-painting, music, crafts, bike decorating, raffles and more. Ride sponsors and supporters Bank of Canton, Marathon Physical Therapy and Sports Medicine, and Kiddie Academy of Stoughton will be there as well.

Registration is $20 and riders are also asked to raise a minimum of $30 by October 15. For more information or to register, visit: www.kids.pmc.org/canton.aspx or <https://www.facebook.com/CantonPMCKidsRide/>.

tion to promote Norwood and Norwood business," she said. "We wanted to collaborate with Percival and the Norwood Space Center because it's a great resource for this Town that not many people know about. However, if you hold a road race you get a lot of people to come in, look at the space, and enjoy the beer. Phil was awesome to work with and he's opened his brewery on a Sunday for us, so it's been great."

Walsh said they will definitely be hosting a second race next year, as 200 runners for an event's first race is a pretty large indicator that there is a lot of interest for races in Norwood. Oliveira said he agreed.

"It's doing phenomenally well. Charlotte and Jim have done a fantastic job as far as logistics and setting up the whole course," he said. "We even have a timed start and finish line which is great because it gives the sense of a mini Boston Marathon. We have a decent crowd in terms of registered runners, which gives us a strong idea of what the interest and desire is going to be for next year, so we're certainly going to prepare for that."

He added that the Norwood Space Center gets a bad rap, and he's happy to be a part of its comeback into the Norwood zeitgeist.

"I think the great thing is that people thought this entire complex is inactive, it's been dilapidated for 50-plus years," he said. "We're sort of trying to resurrect this complex with artists, musicians, small-scale manufacturing to showcase this idea of consumers looking more towards the community instead of going to malls and stuff like that."

Oliveira said he was happy to see folks out and about on a Sunday and participating in the community.

"We're trying to get folks out of the house for physical activity rather than just sitting at home drinking beer and eating food," he said. "It's just better to get folks to do physical stuff and helps people to socialize a bit better with fellow runners and spectators."

Bowring said he came out just to have a little fun and maybe a little beer.

"I wanted to support the Friends group," he said. "I think maybe I thought I had a shot to win, but you never know."

Residents Melissa Evangelost, Brian Morriceow and John Evalboro said they came out for the 5K. Evalboro said he loves the brewery in Norwood and got his friends from out of town to come by and see what Norwood has to offer.

"They did a great job, especially for it being the first one," he said. "It was very well organized. I keep telling people, we've got this, Castle Island, Trillium, we've got a lot of good things going on down here and the more these breweries do events like this it will bring more people to the area."

Resident Nancy Walsh said she wanted to come out from Westwood to cheer on her daughter and her friend. She said she's not been to a road race in Norwood before, and was happy to discover how great the Norwood Space Center is.

"It's great, I love this place, it's my first time being here and it's just awesome," she said.

definitely want more experience with different people, different ways of acting, different ages, different genders. Everything."

As another school year begins and another round of productions follow close behind, Jackson will have the opportunity to continue her theatrical pursuits, saying, "I just want to be more involved, and I'm just going to take any opportunity that comes my way."

As for the Teens WRITE program, Decius hopes to continue with it now that she has navigated the unknowns of its first season. "I'm just
