New curbside recycling starts Monday

Trash day in Norwood is about to change. Starting this Monday, Oct. 6, the town's new trash contract goes into effect, and local residents can begin wheeling their new recycling and rubbish bins to the curb.

The new single stream recycling and rubbish removal system has been in the works since the contract was approved by Town Meeting in May. Some residents, however, have been resistant to the new program.

Town Manager John Carroll and Assistant Town Manager Bernie Cooper have made widespread attempts to help win over those who were still resistant to the idea. Members of the Board of Selectmen have also been debating the new system, and said at last Tuesday night's meeting that they were hearing many concerns from people in their own neighborhoods.

"We've had an extraordinary number of complaints and comments for a program that hasn't even started yet," Selectmen Jerry Kelleher said.

Board member Tom McQuaid has brought multiple concerns to the board's attention, last week grilling Carroll about the proposed $200 charge for additional barrels.

"The next step after that is a trash fee, and I am definitely opposed to that," he said.

This week, McQuaid asked how local families could dispose of large pieces of furniture that wouldn't fit inside the 64 gallon trash bins.

Carroll said that such details are still being worked out.

In the meantime, people would be encouraged to contact the Norwood DPW, who will pick up the item in question for a nominal fee.

For those who are wondering how to dispose of their old trash barrels and recycling bins, Cooper said the town

MCAS test results called 'disappointing'

Moretti and School Committee not satisfied with latest scores

Krystal Grow
Staff Reporter

After reviewing the annual Massachusetts Comprehensive Assessment Systems test scores, Interim Superintendent John Moretti told the Norwood School Committee that they should not be happy with the results.

Calling the scores, "disappointing," Moretti also acknowledged that they were not a reflection on the quality of the teaching staff in Norwood, but did reflect some institutional problems in the district that needed to be addressed immediately if the scores were ever going to change.

"With the amount of money we put in and the staff package we offer, our improvement should be greater," Moretti said. "This is not a teaching or pedagogy issue, it's institutional."

He added that practices that have gone on for years, such as removing a student from general education classrooms so they could attend private music lessons or special education classes, were directly affecting students' performance on the state mandated exam.

"That has to change," he said. "Students should not be removed from their general classrooms under any circumstances."

Moretti also said that teachers' professional development time needed to be seriously reevaluated, and that communication between teachers needed to improve and be more focused on what their student's strengths and weaknesses are.

Member Mark Joseph said the committee needed to "reinvent the wheel" in teacher professional development time to make sure they were getting the

Parents can now move students to other schools with better results

Krystal Grow
Staff Reporter

Norwood's dismal MCAS scores have not only given the school committee a jolt, but could potentially shake up every elementary school in town.

Since three out of five Norwood elementary schools have fallen in the "needs improvement" category for the second year in a row, parents now have the option of pulling their children out of their school and placing them into another school with a better state track record on MCAS scores.

"If you want to see chaos in a school system, that's chaos," Interim Superintendent John Moretti said, adding that he believed this particular policy was internally flawed.

But flawed or not, it is a federal policy, and the school system has no choice but to notify parents of their new options, though school committee members urged local families to leave their students where they are.

The Coakley Middle School did not meet federal standards for the third straight year, but parents do not have the option to send them elsewhere since it is the only middle school in town.

Members of the committee expressed serious concern for the Coakley, advocating immediate and dramatic change.

"Throwing money at it won't fix it," member Bill Plasko said, "but we need monumental changes to the middle school."

Board member Mark Joseph agreed.

"The middle school scares me," he said. "We really need to put our money

State approves larger high school

Joseph Mont
Chief Reporter

From the start of its participation in the state's "Model School" program, proponents of building a new Norwood High School wrestled with how to ensure that the new school in their town wasn't a mere cookie-cutter version of another district's facility.

At a meeting of the Norwood High School Working Group and the Committee of 21 on Monday night, some good news was shared that could help the new school carve out a unique visual identity.

At the meeting, it was announced that the Massachusetts School Building Authority, in a letter received by the town on Monday, has agreed to a 227,500 square foot design for the new high school. The new footprint, 23,000 square feet larger than originally considered, will allow for an expanded gym and auditorium, as well as additional space for the school's arts, music and drama programs. The extra space, along with exterior design changes, will help differentiate the new Norwood High School from the Whitman-Hanson Regional High School design it will be based upon as part of the Model School program.

Project manager Tim Bonfatti described the added space as desirable for "below the line additions" such as the larger gym and auditorium. "This is a big win. We are getting a bigger school with more space and more reimbursement for less money."

The state's cooperation, he said, makes it important to stick to an "aggressive timeline" to ensure that "the state is with us every step of the way," he said.

Scott Dunlap, an architect with the firm Ai3, added more detail to design plans, showing sketches of what the new building's façade could look like. The addition of a clock tower to the front of the building, and preserving some of the previous structure's architectural details, will help give it a unique character.

"We want to make sure that when the building is completed it looks like it belongs there and not like it was just dropped from the sky and landed on the site," he said. "Our goal is to make the building look like it has always been there."

"We were very impressed with some of the architectural details and the design of the [existing high school]," added Jim Jordan, also an architect with Ai3. "We wanted to incorporate a lot of the old architectural styles into the new façade."

He added that, even with new construction materials, it is possible to "really capture the essence of the old building."

Dunlap also clarified plans to build the new high school, while the old one remains open. This will be accomplished by building the new structure behind the existing building, leaving only enough space between the two buildings to accommodate emergency vehicles. Future meetings will address how to best retain athletic fields during the project.

"We certainly wanted to maintain the existing football field and stadium," Dunlap said.

Talbot Farms safety concerns and potential lawsuits worry members

Krystal Grow
Staff Reporter

Members of the Norwood Planning Board hoped to gain some clarity on the lack of lighting in the Talbot Farms neighborhood on Monday, but instead discovered a number of potential liabilities and legal issues they may incur at the hands of developer Lou Petrozzi.

Petrozzi has been arguing with the board and with the Norwood Municipal Light Department over his obligation to install and pay for streetlights in his development, which consists of 16 lots. Six homes are currently occupied, and members of the Planning Board are concerned that the lack of street lighting may be a threat to local residents' safety.

"The safety factor bothers me about this," said member William Bamber. "If someone gets hurt or attacked, who's liable?"

Member Thomas Wynne said the fact that the town hasn't officially accepted the street might further complicate the already difficult issue.

Director of Planning and Economic Development Steve Costello recommended that the board deny granting Petrozzi an extension on the completion of the development, which he requested in July, but members worried that if they did not allow Petrozzi more time to finish the development, he might walk away from the project en-

Bonfatti said that public meetings on the project will be held at least once a month to keep the timeline intact, while soliciting needed community input. To better inform the community, a new Web site will be launched in the coming weeks to offer a virtual tour of Whitman-Hanson Regional High School, display renderings and provide an interactive feature to acquire public comments.

The current timeline calls for cost estimates to be finalized by November and a bid to be put out by January. If funding is approved by Town Meeting in March, construction of the two-year project will begin in April of 2009.

SELLING HOMES IN THE ERA OF EXPENSIVE GAS. If you are about to put your home on the market, it pays to think like the people whom you want to attract to your property. These days, it's not very difficult to see that high gasoline prices are very much on the minds of many consumers. The fact is that the harsh reality of increased commuting costs has led many workers to consider purchasing homes closer to public transportation. With this in mind, sellers with homes near train stations and bus routes should make the fact well known to potential buyers. This has led savvy real estate agents to market their clients' homes by trumpeting the fact that proximity to public transportation can lower their commuting expenses.

When marketing property, highlighting the 'positives' is critical. Features such as being close to town, or public transportation can be key factors for buyers in their decision making process. ### It's a lot to ask

The results are in and Norwood Public Schools did not fare well in the latest round of MCAS testing. Three out of five elementary schools, and the Coakley Middle School are not performing up to the state's standards. The school committee is asking you, the parents of children in the non-performing schools to sit tight and not overreact by requesting a change of schools for your kids. It's a lot to ask.

Federal laws recently enacted allow for parents of children attending under-performing schools to move them within a town's school system. The Norwood Public Schools are required by law to inform parents of this opportunity, but are imploring parents to leave students where they are until the problems are fixed at the under-performing schools.

"If you want to see chaos in a school system, that's chaos," Interim Superintendent John Moretti said, adding that he believed that particular policy was internally flawed.

Whether the policy is flawed or not, what school committee members appeared more concerned with if kids start transferring are the logistical nightmares of internally dealing with it, not the impact of education on the kids. Quite frankly, the last thing parents of Norwood school students should be concerned about are the added work and stress on the administration should kids start transferring. The test scores indicate quite clearly that perhaps the administration is not working hard enough now.

As Moretti was quick to point out, due to many circumstances test scores do not paint a completely accurate picture of each school's performance. It is true that certain populations of students including low income, minority and special education kids in some of these schools will bring the scores of the school as a whole down, but it is the responsibility of the schools to deal with these cases in such a way as to mitigate these circumstances as much as possible. Obviously, this is not being done now in a satisfactory manner. In other words, demographics are not a good enough excuse for the most recent scores.

Asking parents to stay the course sounds a lot like financial planners explaining the logic of the ups and downs of mutual funds. However, unlike fluctuating financial markets, parents don't have the luxury of time. A child is only in first grade once, second grade once, etc...you can't make up the losses incurred if the education is substandard. Expecting all parents to simply accept the promise of administration that they will fix the problems in time to make up for the losses students at certain schools have already incurred is expecting too much.

Should every child in each of the under-performing schools request a transfer? Of course they shouldn't. Each parent should take the responsibility of evaluating their kids to determine if their current school is a good fit. It makes sense that if a child scored well individually on the test, than he or she is overcoming the deficiencies of their current school and is better off staying. However, if a child scored poorly, than a parent should determine if a move, based on many factors including individual consultations with teachers and administrators and potential social, environmental and logistical impacts is in the best interests of the child. No one can make that determination better than a parent.

Will these evaluations by parents be taxing on the administration? You bet it will, but so what. That is what they are being paid for. And, should a parent feel that their requests for information pertaining to their child are not adequately and professionally addressed, than that parent should assume that this is the same kind of personal attention their child is currently receiving and a change is definitely in order.

tirely, leaving the town no other option than to pull the remaining bond money and finishing the development themselves. "By not issuing an extension, he could throw his hands up and blame it on us," said member Ernie Paciorkowski. "He could turn around and be done with it, so I think we need some clarification on this."

Petrozzi was scheduled to meet with the board on Monday to present them with a lighting plan, but did not attend. Costello said Petrozzi did not have a plan ready, and saw no reason to attend the meeting.

But the board was still left with a messy situation, which has caused them to review their own bylaws, which Petrozzi has claimed are unclear, and do not explicitly state that it is the developer's responsibility to pay for underground lighting systems.

Costello said it may be possible for the board to pull the part of the performance bond that directly relates to lighting the development, but members were wary of that approach, and said that may lead to more legal troubles.

"How can we deny an extension without pulling the bond," Chairman Marco Brancato asked. "If he walks away, then we own it, and we don't want that."

"He could still sue if we don't grant an extension or if we don't grant occupancy permits," Bamber said, adding that the safety liabilities were just as important as the bonds and permits. "The town has a heck of a liability problem here," he said.

Costello agreed to seek advice from the town's legal advisers to find out if the board can pull a portion of the performance bond, and if Petrozzi is still responsible for completing the development if they do not grant an extension. They will also seek advice as to the town's potential liability.

"We could argue either way," said Wynne, "but I think the thing to do is to get a letter from town counsel. We haven't been up against anything like this before."

Letters to the Editor

VOCATIONAL EDUCATION IS AVAILABLE

To the Editor:

I read Ms. Grow's recent article, "A Working Model," in the September 25, 2008 issue of the Norwood Record. Is Mr. Moretti aware that the Town of Norwood is a member of the Blue Hills Regional Technical School District, where all the programs he cites, CAD, health, technology, engineering, are already offered to the students of Norwood? Providing these programs at the new Norwood High School would simply be a duplication of effort and dollars spent. It's wonderful to see, however, that the Chairman of the School Committee, Paul Samargedlis, and committee member, Mark Joseph, have embraced vocational education as an "accepted" form of education for our students. For so long, vocational education has been perceived as a place to put the problem students, those who aren't college-bound. Vocational education has been the best kept secret. For 100 years it has been preparing its students with the latest state-of-the-art equipment and providing them with "real time technology training" in the growing and demanding trade and technological areas.

Vocational school graduates have the best of both worlds. Nearly 60 percent go on to attend college, while having the skills to earn dollars in meaningful jobs to offset their tuition, thus saving their parents much of the cost of their education.

Sincerely,
Judith K. Savoie

A WONDERFUL GESTURE

Dear Sir/Madam:

I am writing on behalf of the Norwood Circle of Hope Foundation. I have had the privilege of being President of this non-profit organization since it's founding ten years ago. Over that time we have provided upwards of $100,000 in assistance to needy Norwood families who have faced catastrophic illness. All monies raised for our foundation are given back to people "right here" in our own backyard.

Recently, we received a donation from a young, soon to be married Norwood couple who wish to remain anonymous, however, we wanted to share their generous gesture. They are both lifelong residents and were going to be married here in town. Instead of the traditional favors at the reception, they decided to make a donation to our foundation. It was a wonderful gesture from a very special couple. It gives us great pleasure to know that we have people like this in our wonderful town.

Sincerely,

Board wants your opinion

Online survey will contribute to new open space and recreation plan

Krystal Grow
Staff Reporter

Would you like to see a dog park in Norwood? What about a skate park or an indoor pool? The Norwood Planning Board wants to know.

The board has been considering a revamp of the town's Open Space and Recreation Master Plan since April, and with a favorable vote from Town Meeting, received $10,000 to create a new plan.

Not only will the new plan help clarify and identify the town's open spaces and introduce new recreational programs, it will also help the town acquire more state grants to implement new activities and preserve more open space, which is becoming a valuable commodity in Norwood.

Director of Planning and Economic Development Steve Costello has been promoting an updated plan for month, and has recently taken the process a step further by posting a town wide online survey to help the board figure out exactly what Norwood residents want from their open space and recreation areas.

"We're hoping for a few hundred or even a thousand people to take the survey and give us an idea of what people are thinking," he said.

Members of the Planning Board devised the questions that appear on the survey, which cover all areas of recreation, from how often residents use the current recreation spaces like baseball fields and public outdoor pools, to whether they'd consider a walking trail, tot lots or an indoor ice skating rink.

Costello said he and the board were trying to tap into the pulse of the community, and to find out how active local residents are in Babe Ruth leagues and other community sports activities to see if new programs would really benefit the town, and whether or not they would be willing to pay for it.

Section three of the survey asks how much residents are willing to pay per year to support open space and recreation improvements, with a range from $20 to $100 per year. The board also wants to know if locals would consider a small, yearly property tax surcharge under the Community Preservation Act as a means of funding open space, conservation and recreation land and facilities.

After the results are tallied, Costello said he and the Planning Board would put together a five year plan that they would then present to the Zoning Board of Appeals, who could vote to adopt or amend the plan. But before that can happen, the Planning Board needs Norwood's input. The survey can be found online at www.tinyurl.com/norwoodopenspacesurvey. There is a link to the survey available on the town website most out of it, and in turn giving the most pertinent and valuable information to their students.

"On the professional development level, I think we're missing the boat on this. Changes need to happen, and they need to happen with this data in mind," he said. "We need to better understand what this data means, and we need to be action based."

Moretti recommended that teachers from one grade level to the next need to have detailed discussions about their students and their curriculum. He said, for example, that fourth grade teachers should tell fifth grade teachers where their class is struggling, so that the curriculum and lessons can be tailored to that upcoming class.

"I believe we're tapping into strengths we have internally," Moretti said, "but we're interested in feedback, and the teachers need to be having these conversations."

He also suggested that special education teachers be included in all professional development activities and seminars to better gage the lesson plans being used.

Member Courtney Rau agreed that was essential for special education teachers to provide their students with the best course.

"That's critical," she said. "It's difficult to modify and deliver a curriculum you don't fully understand."

Board member Bill Plasko was clearly upset by the results, and supported immediate action to remedy the problems he saw in the scores.

"I am very disappointed by what we're seeing here," he said. "Year after year I question our successes and failures based on these scores, and I am very frustrated by this. These scores scream for us to change our policies. It's time for the school committee to change from a reactive to a proactive committee. If we want the public's support, we cannot continue to present scores like these. These are shameful."

Part of the danger in consistently low test scores, Moretti said, is that if the Norwood scores do not improve for two consecutive years, the state can come in and take over until they are satisfied with the results.

"I'm confident that there will be a dramatic change," he said.

Moretti told the committee that he would have a detailed action plan to address the MCAS scores and to potentially revitalize the quality of instruction and education in Norwood schools.

"I fully support the restructuring of the service we deliver to students," Plasko said. "It's long overdue."

where our mouths are on this one."

Moretti presented the committee with an initial plan he said would help boost test scores and generally improve student performance.

The school's Adequate Yearly Progress, as determined by MCAS scores, takes a number of factors into consideration when evaluating students and school systems, including the number of minority and special education students, and students from low income families.

These subgroups make up a substantial portion of the assessment, but if a particular school does not have enough students to make up a subgroup, they are not included in the evaluation, which Moretti said could be misleading.

"The question is what really makes a subgroup," Moretti said, adding that 40 students technically comprised a subgroup.

He said that the performance of some of the subgroups did not meet progress requirements, while the student body as a whole did make some improvements.

"Where's the equity in that," Moretti asked.

But through the turmoil the new scores have prompted, Moretti stressed system wide changes to prevent the scores from getting any worse, and to promote better internal practices.

"We need to refine what we're doing," he said. "There has to be a systematic agenda for all Norwood kids."

Member Mitch Pentowski urged parents not to make a knee-jerk reaction to the scores and start pulling their children from the Balch, Cleveland or Oldham schools and enroll them into the Prescott or Callahan.

"Parents should know they are better off leaving their kids where they are," he said. "It doesn't make sense to start moving them around now. Let's just solve the problem."

Moretti said that since the school system is designed to maintain small class size, any move en masse to and from elementary schools would be disastrous.

Member Bill Plasko said the results, and the potential shifting of elementary school students, should serve as a call to action for teachers and administrators.

"Our schools are judged, unfortunately, by these scores," he said. "This is a challenge for our principals to bring back to their buildings."

Prepping for DOE visit

Program review starts next week

Krystal Grow
Staff Reporter

Norwood school staff and administration are cleaning house this week in preparation for a visit from the Massachusetts Department of Education.

In their first visit in over 5 years, the DOE will spend three days touring Norwood schools, interviewing parents and teachers and pouring over documents to make sure the school system is meeting all state and federal regulations, and are properly addressing the issues they found during their last visit.

"We just happen to be in the cycle this year," Interim Superintendent John Moretti said, "they're not responding to any complaints."

Moretti said the DOE would be specifically focusing on special education, civil rights and Norwood schools' compliance with the Americans with Disabilities act.

A team from the DOE will arrive in Norwood on Oct. 6, and according to Moretti, will create a detailed assessment of their target programs and rate them on a scale from "commendable" to "not implemented." If they are not satisfied with a particular program or how it is being implemented in the Norwood school system, the staff and administration must submit a corrective action plan to the DOE with details on how to properly address and improve upon them.

"It's a very comprehensive assessment," Moretti said. "We have to demonstrate evidence and written documentation on all of our programs and prove we're meeting their standards."

Norwood can also appeal any of the DOE's recommendations if they can provide the proper documentation that a particular program is being practiced and taught to DOE standards.

Moretti said that while the Coordinated Program Review is a checkup to make sure Norwood is meeting all state and federal educational mandates, it is also a valuable self-study in how the schools stack up to federal standards.

"It's like an outside agency coming in and making observations and we have the opportunity to respond or appeal. It's a healthy review," he said.

Moretti also said that the principals of all Norwood schools have been given a list of documents they need to provide for the DOE so they can make a system wide approach to the study.

"It has to be systematic," Moretti said. "It's a tremendous amount of work, and it's very labor intensive, but it's worth it."

During their last visit in 2003, the DOE cited many instances where Norwood had not properly implemented various factions of the special education program, including IEP development and content, participation in state and district wide assessment programs and the content and composition of progress reports.

"The DOE wants to make sure that those issues have been addressed while making sure the district is up to date on educational mandates," Moretti said.

A detailed report will be made and distributed to Moretti and the school committee following the visit, and they will determine the best methods to address those issues and devise a detailed plan that will be submitted back to the DOE.

at www.norwoodma.gov. Costello said that paper copies of the survey will be available at the Norwood Senior Center, Morrill Memorial Library, and in the town treasurer's office, but will not be mass distributed.

"It's really meant to be an online survey," he said, "but we want as many people to have access to it as possible, because this will help us make the town better for everyone."

landfill would begin taking in the old containers, starting this Saturday.

Some Norwood seniors have opposed the plan over concerns that the barrel — one 96 gallon bin for recyclables and one 64 gallon bin for regular garbage — will be too heavy and cumbersome to drag to the curb.

Tuesday night, Carroll said that those concerned with the size of the larger barrel can trade down for a smaller, more manageable model.

The new containers were delivered en masse to Norwood homes last Monday, but Carroll stressed that they should stick to their regular routine until Oct. 6.

"We've heard that some residents are putting their new barrels out already, but collection won't officially start until the 6th," Carroll said. "We don't want people putting out the new carts yet, because Waste Management might not be able to lift the barrels themselves. They will, where they can, but it is important for people to stay with their regular pickup dates until Monday."

The new trash system and single stream recycling method are expected to significantly increase the town's lower-than-average recycling rate of 14 percent.

Selectmen approve site for schoolhouse

Krystal Grow
Staff Reporter

Months of hard work paid off for the Norwood Historical Commission Tuesday night, as the Board of Selectmen finally approved a site for the little red brick schoolhouse.

Commission Chair Judith Howard had asked the board to accept the structure, currently located on Pleasant Street, as a donation, or to approve relocating it to various locations.

Howard approached the board last week with a proposal, but was swiftly dismissed from the meeting.

But, on Tuesday night, the committee voted to approve a plan to move the one room brick building to a spot on the Morse House site.

Member Tom McQuaid, who, along with fellow board member Bill Plasko, has been opposed to the project, voted in favor.

"If it doesn't make it there in one piece, maybe we could use some of the old bricks in the new high school," he suggested. "It would be another way to connect the past and the future."

Plasko still held out, casting the only vote against the proposal.

"This project has a total lack of thoroughness and cohesiveness," he said. "It still has not manifested itself into a clear plan."

Football throttles Milton, goes to 3-1

Norwood star tailback Jhorgy Antoine rushed for 129 yards, including three touchdowns, to lead the Mustangs (3-1) to a 27-10 win over host Milton last Friday.

Mike Stoller
Staff Reporter

The Norwood football team continued to work the recipe that has allowed it to cook up a storm in the Bay State Conference Herget Division. Throw in some strong special teams play and Friday's convincing 27-10 win over host Milton had a little extra flavor.

"We ran the ball fairly successfully [and] our defense again played outstanding," said Norwood head coach Buzzy Curran. "I was particularly pleased with the play of our special teams, Steve Mahon with his accurate kickoffs and accurate punts to allow us to control field position. [And] Basically, our offensive line, Jesse Shaughnessy in particular and Matt Davenport at center really played well...There were some holes that you could drive a truck through."

Curran covered a lot of ground there, and so did his squad, especially junior star tailback Jhorgy Antoine, who rushed for 129 yards including three touchdowns - scores of 10, 47, and 28 yards - to lead the Mustangs (3-1) to their third win on the rain-soaked field.

"Jhorgy played well. Considering the elements, he had a very good first half," said Curran. "The first three yards [on the run play] can be credited to the offensive line and opening up the hole, but the rest, that's Jhorgy, with his shiftiness, he really excels with his quick moves. Jhorgy is something special and of one of the elite runners in the league if not New England. He's averaging about two touchdowns, 120 yards per game. I'm very happy for him."

Antoine's 10-yard jaunt put Norwood on top 7-0, in the first quarter. The 5-foot-10, 170 pound back added the 47 and 28-yard scampers during the second frame, as the Mustangs bolted for the locker room with a 21-0 advantage.

Norwood's other featured back, senior Chris Colantonio, scored on an eight-yard run in the final stanza.

"It was 27-0 with about four minutes to go, so I'm happy with that effort," said the coach.

Mahon, meanwhile, gave the Mustangs a boost in their kicking game.

"Those were big kicks in that weather," lauded Curran of the senior. "We have improved dramatically [in that aspect of the game]."

Milton scored on a safety and a touchdown toss from quarterback Jack Brown to Doug Graham, but Norwood's lead was well in hand, as the Mustangs continued their run as one of the frontrunners in the BSC.

Norwood's junior varsity and freshmen football teams also won, 22-14 and 32-0, respectively, last weekend.

"So it was a good weekend for Norwood football," said Curran.

Field hockey rallies to tie Dedham

Mike Stoller
Staff Reporter

When the Norwood field hockey team goes back to the film, it can put this one among its classics. Trailing twice by a pair of goals, the visiting Mustangs recovered both times to earn a stunning 4-4 tie with rival Dedham in a huge Bay State Conference Herget Division battle last week.

The effort was a long time coming after Norwood (4-3-1) had struggled to break the point barrier against the Marauders in recent years.

"Although we would have liked to get a 'W' against Dedham, this was the first time in about four years where we were able to earn a point from Dedham," said Norwood head coach Allison Parks.

Gina Mancini's strike with just 1:04 left in the game knotted the score for good. It was Mancini's team leading sixth goal and 13th point of the campaign.

"We were able to hold Dedham off for the last minute and secure the tie, but most importantly the point," said Parks. "Our team has not had much success in coming back when down by two goals, but they had already done it once today, and I was hoping they could do it again."

Mancini made sure of it, after senior co-captain Kim Clougher got Norwood within one with her second tally of the game at the 1:34 mark, with an assist going to senior Kristen Walsh, her third of the fall.

After Clougher's goal - her

Beat goes on for girls' soccer

Mike Stoller
Staff Reporter

It has become apparent that when opponents play the Norwood girls' soccer team, they are far from secure even when they take a quick lead. And that was the case again last week when host Dedham scored just two minutes into the game on a goal by freshman standout Jenna Savi, who registered the opening strike on a nifty corner kick. The Mustangs (7-0-1), who played their "best game of the year" to date, according to head coach Jay Dupuis, went on to score four unanswered goals, two by their senior star captain Sam Vilaboa, who also had two assists to figure in every Norwood tally during the 4-1 Bay State Conference win.

"Sam helped account for all four goals, [and] showed why she was the Herget Division MVP [last season] with her outstanding play," said Dupuis, whose squad remained undefeated.

The record books still need to be searched as to whether it was Norwood's first ever victory over the Marauders, but, at the very least, it was its first win in 12 years against its archrival with respected mentor Don Savi at the Dedham helm, according to Dupuis.

The Norwood coach added, "After not playing great [in a 1-1 tie] against Wellesley, it was great to come out and play our best game of the year. We moved the ball very well today. We used our team speed to our advantage. When we lost the ball, we challenged hard to get it back. [It was] as great team win."

Eighteen minutes after Savi's goal - a beauty in which "she took the corner [kick] herself and scored by putting a nice spin on the ball, bending into the back of the net," said Dupuis - the Mustangs took hold of the game.

Vilaboa made a perfect pass to junior Megan Folan, who registered her first goal of the year to put the Mustangs on the board. Then, in the 30th minute, Folan returned the favor, and Vilaboa buried it for a 2-1 advantage.

The game remained that way until the 23rd minute of the second half when Vilaboa fed sophomore sensation Cory Ryan, who scored her BSC leading ninth goal of the campaign.

Vilaboa was right behind with eight goals after she struck with just two minutes left in the contest on a feed from fellow senior captain Kelsey Roberson.

Once again, Norwood received an outstanding effort by its defensive unit. Dupuis lauded the play of juniors Susan Orlando and Megan Underhill and sophomores fifth of the season along with two assists — the Mustangs huddled up to talk strategy with short time to work.

Norwood co-captain Kim Clougher registered two goals as the Mustangs earned a hard-fought 4-4 tie with Dedham last week.

“We called a timeout and discussed the importance of stopping Dedham’s hit after the goal and moving the ball up the field to get a shot on goal,” said Parks. “We were able to stop the hit and brought the ball into the circle where Gina was able to direct a ball past the Dedham keeper.”

The Marauders jumped out to an early lead about six minutes into the game and then struck again at 16:03 of the first half.

“At this point in the game, we had some chances on offense, but I thought our defense was struggling,” said Parks. “There seemed to be a lot of confusion in the defensive circle, and the first two goals scored by Dedham seemed to be straight on shots that were partially screened.”

Norwood finally got on the board when Walsh finished a pass from junior left mid Maeve Finneran at 11:34 for her second goal of the season. The Mustangs trailed, 2-1, at the half.

The visitors started strong in the second stanza, and it paid off when, at 16:14, Clougher converted a feed from junior forward Jillian Walsh to tie it at 2-2. For Walsh it was her second assist of the season to along with four goals.

The teams went back-and-forth until, at 7:48, the Marauders scored the go-ahead goal. A minute and 21 seconds later, Dedham added an insurance goal to go up 4-2.

However, Norwood packed a lot of punch as time dwindled down, and rallied to knot the score again.

“I thought Kim Clougher had a great game, as well as Gina Mancini and the Walsh sisters,” summed up Parks. “[Senior co-captain] Liz Greeley played very well [at midfield] and was good at transitioning our team from defense to offense, [and] Katherine Millin had her best game of the season at left back.”

Norwood will visit Milton tomorrow.

“They helped limit Dedham’s scoring opportunities,” said the coach. “The defense was outstanding.”

After loss to Wellesley, girls' swim continues winning ways

Mike Stoller
Staff Reporter

The Norwood girls' swim team (3-1) rebounded from a tough four-point loss to Wellesley with an impressive 101-69 win over visiting non-conference foe Marshfield last Friday.

Following their 92-88 setback to the Raiders in a Bay State Conference Herget Division meet, the Mustangs wasted little time in establishing dominance against Marshfield.

Norwood looked particularly sharp in the 100 fly taking the top three slots courtesy of Natalie Metta, Mary Pat Norton, and Brooke Kilgallon. Natalie Metta, Emily Metta, and senior captain Juliana Cirillo each won two events in demonstrating their versatility.

Norwood also pulled off a pair of sweeps in the 100 free and 500 free. In the 100, Meghan Shilo and Kayla Ring finished first and second, respectively, and in the 500, Cirillo and Bailey Lambert did the honors.

A much improved Nicolette Tenaglia placed first in the diving competition.

A number of Mustangs posted personal bests, including scoring crucial points for the team, among them Shilo, Kilgallon, Colleen Carroll, Kathleen Lee, and Andria Connell.

Emily Metta also won the 100 breaststroke in a new meet record of 1:09:48 at the Coaches Invitational Meet at Wheaton College on Sunday.

The BSC schedule doesn't get any easier for the Mustangs.

"[We] have a very tough schedule over the next two weeks," said head coach Kim Goodwin. "We will swim against powerhouse Needham, Brookline High, and New North, so we will need to continue to work hard in the pool and weight room."

Norwood will travel to Babson College to take on Needham tomorrow night.

The Norwood High Athletics Hall of Fame Committee recently honored a new class of four individuals, one special couple, and one team at the Norwood Elks.

The 2008 inductees are Joe Conti, Sr. '46, Ton Grinavac '59, Charlie Donahue, Jr., '61, Larry Brown '75, Danielle Chaisson '94, Joe '48 and Betty Curran '50, and the 1977 Super Bowl champion football team.

The event included a delicious buffet-style dinner and presentation of the Hall of Fame Induction Class of 2008.

Former Norwood football mentor John "Duffy" Doherty, who coached the Mustangs from 1971-81, leading the team to two state Super Bowl wins, was also acknowledged for his forthcoming honor, in which the press box at the high school will be dedicated in his name by the school committee. As of this writing, the plan was to have the ceremony at halftime on either Oct. 18 vs. Walpole or Thanksgiving against Dedham.

Norwood legendary coach John "Duffy" Doherty will soon be honored with the dedication of the NHS press box in his name.

The 2008 Class will join last year's class of John Poca '49,

Phil DeRose '61, Richie Hebner '66, Peter Brown '72, Tom Mahan '74, Mike Wall '87, Ed Rios '88, Alison Dixon '97, the 1982 wrestling team, and the 1984 field hockey team.

Hall of Fame inductees honored

Norwood's Melisa and Antonio Varitimos recently competed at the Pepsi Punt, Pass, and Kick competition held at Wayland High School. Both finished second in their respective age groups. Melisa, also known as Chef Melisa from Oven Luv'n - the cooking show on Norwood Public Access TV for the past four years - came in second in the 14-15 year old girls' competition, while Antonio, who was ranked ninth in New England after competing two years ago for the 8-9 year olds, came in second among the 10-11 year old boys. Say, don't the Patriots need a quarterback?
