Updated downtown plan in works

Brad Cole
Staff Reporter

The Downtown Steering Committee is working with The Cecil Group to create the first Downtown Master Plan since 1998.

"A number of items have been implemented downtown since then, but obviously it needs to be updated," Ted Brovitz of The Cecil Group said, adding that they aim to create a new, useful tool to help guide the town to improve the Norwood center area.

In order to do this, Brovitz and Steve Cecil have begun their work by going through numerous old records, everything from assessor's records for the downtown area to the town's recently updated zoning bylaws. The purpose of this is to help them get up to speed as to where Norwood is currently, what the Town's socioeconomic state is and where it is heading.

One thing they plan on doing is hosting workshops. They want to get input from merchants, building owners and members of the public as they put together this plan, as this will help them craft the best possible plan for Norwood.

"We're trying to see how people see and use the place, so we can go out and try to solve the right problems," Cecil said, adding, "The downtown... the cen-

The Finance Commission approved over $182,000 in transfers at their July 14 meeting. Approximately $53,000 of this was in the form of a reserve fund transfer, the rest as Municipal Relief Act transfers.

The largest reserve fund transfer was $48,363 to the Town Counsel Litigation Services account. This transfer was initially discussed at the June 30 FinCom meeting, though no action was taken then.

"Towns are a target, we all know that," Assistant General Manager Bernie Cooper said at the June 30 meeting. "There are a number of expensive cases," citing the Norfolk Asphalt Plant case as a specific example.

"The bills are remarkably low per hour, but there are just a number of cases," Cooper said, adding that Murphy, Hesse, Toomey & Lehane LLP's charges are reasonable, but due to the sheer number of cases, it adds up, as there have been cases against the Zoning Board of Appeals, the Planning Board, the Norwood Airport Commission and others.

There were several smaller reserve fund transfers as well. The Selectmen Collective Bargaining Account received a $3,405 boost, while the General

Downing tackles the Pan-Massachusetts Challenge again

Brad Cole
Staff Reporter

Norwood resident Pete Downing is participating in his second Pan-Massachusetts Challenge (PMC) this year, and he's not alone. Downing is joined by three others on The Average Joe's, a team who will be biking in support of and to raise funds for The Jimmy Fund.

"Average Joe's is riding to support a great cause, to raise money for life-saving cancer research and treatment at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute," Downing said. "We ride because we can and knowing that it will help a great organization."

The other members of the Average Joe's are Tammi Kent, Lynne Olbrych and Aaron Olbrych. Together, they aim to raise $16,800 and as of July 19, have raised $3,539, approximately 20 percent of their goal. Downing has three specific goals for the Average Joe's- to have fun, enjoy and take in the whole experience and work as a team to inspire others to join the PMC. To donate to The Average Joe's, visit <http://www.pmc.org/profile/TA0062/>.

This is Downing's second year participating in the PMC. After his experience at last year's PMC, he wanted to return and bike again, with two goals in mind: creating a PMC team of his own and taking part in the Pedal Partner program. The Pedal Partner Program is a way for PMC riders to connect with pediatric oncology patients of the Jimmy Fund Clinic.

"Seeing the kids with signs saying 'I am a survivor' made me realize that I want to impact someone's life by riding for this cause and what better way than this," Downing said. This year, the Average Joe's are pedal partners with the 13-year-old Curtis Grace.

"Curtis is a courageous 13 year old who was diagnosed with a rare form of Leukemia back in January," Downing said, adding they wish Grace well in his recovery.

Grace is currently undergoing treatment and recovering from a recent bone marrow transplant. Due to his condition, Downing and the other members of the Average Joe's have yet to meet Grace, though they communicate with his mother via email and Curtis via Facebook.

ter of Town is really the heart of the community, and I'm interested in seeing if people feel they have a stake in it."

A survey would be one way to gather public input. The last downtown-specific survey was done in 1988, when 12,000 surveys were sent to Norwood residents. Approximately 30 percent of these surveys were responded to. Brovitz said that while surveys could be a valuable tool, he would rather meet with members of the public and speak with them about the downtown area. This would allow them to ask follow-up questions and talk about numerous facets of Norwood center.

Members of the Downtown Steering Committee agreed public input was important, and suggested that Brovitz and Cecil could attend popular events held in Norwood center and interview people on the street. The Concerts on the Common and Norwood Day were suggested as possible times they could conduct these interviews.

"That would actually be very interesting," Cecil said of having a booth at Norwood Day. "I think we'd really learn a lot."

Downtown Steering Committee member Jean Taylor said she would be able to get them a booth at Norwood Day, and they could interview some people then. Since more than 10,000 people have attended the event in years past, they certainly could find some members of the public to talk to about the state of the downtown during that event.

The plan for the next few months is to complete the market analysis and interview merchants and members of the public regarding the downtown area. The goal is to get ideas and recommendations for things the Town should do downtown in the next five to ten years.

One desire is to find the proper mix of stores. Currently, Norwood center's main attraction is the wide variety of restaurants, Cecil said.

Downtown Steering Committee member Thomas Wynne noted one problem with the number of restaurants, saying, "Restaurants drive activity in the afternoon and evening, but the rest of the downtown is shut down."

In order for the center of Town to be a success, the Town needs this variety of restaurant choices and a good series of specialty shops. There are several open storefronts in Norwood, and Cecil said the Town would have to be an aggressive marketer if they want to attract a specialty store like a bookstore to the center of Town.

Even though there are vacancies, Cecil said the center seemed to be doing well, and at this point, they need to look for things that will really make a difference downtown.

Asian water chestnuts have invaded Ellis Pond, so the Conservation Commission has organized a cleanup, this Saturday at 9 a.m. Those interested in helping can stop by the Ellis Pond Dam on Walpole Street.

Conservation calls on residents to help with cleanup

Brad Cole
Staff Reporter

The Conservation Commission is calling Norwood residents to step forward and help them clean up Ellis Pond. An invasive species, the Asian water chestnut, has taken up residence there, and is threatening wildlife in the area.

This year's cleanup is on Saturday, July 24, at 9 a.m. The cleanup crew will meet at the Ellis Pond Dam on Walpole Street, across from Hannaford Plaza. Anyone can join the cause, and if possible, can bring a five-gallon pail or non-motorized boat to assist in the effort.

The goal is to remove as many Asian water chestnuts from the pond as possible. Despite its name, the Asian water chestnut is not a nut. It is an aquatic vegetable, often featured in Chinese food dishes like Moo Goo Gai Pan, chicken stir-fry and egg rolls. It is unknown how the Asian water chestnut made its way into Ellis Pond, though there are several possibilities, Conservation

The riders have a chance to meet their Pedal Partners at the annual Pedal Partner Picnic waterstop on the ride, where many of the Pedal Partners cheer on the riders and meet participants riding in their honor.

To learn more about Grace and his story, visit <http://www.curtisvscancer.com/>.

Downing already has plans for next year's event, saying, "I wanted to form a team that would help people who have always said they wanted to ride the Pan-Mass but are intimidated. My goal is to double the size of the team- four people strong this year- eight next year. A lot of the riding clubs out there can be intimidating and this will hopefully offer a chance for those beginner riders to consider the Pan-

Mass."

The PMC is the nation's oldest original bike-a-thon fundraiser in the country, and generates nearly 50 percent of The Jimmy Fund's annual revenue. The 31st annual PMC takes place on Aug. 7 and 8, and over 5,000 cyclists from 36 states and eight countries are expected to participate this year. More than 300 of these riders will be cancer survivors or current patients. The overall goal is to raise $31 million, and the Average Joe's will contribute a bit to that amount.

Ten routes are available for bikers to choose from, and the Average Joe's will bike the two-day, 163-mile Wellesley to Bourne to Provincetown route. Depending on the route the biker takes, they are expected to raise a minimum of $500 to $4,200, though the average participant raises $6,000.

A WEIGHTY ISSUE

School nurses in roughly 80 Massachusetts school districts have taken the step to send home reports of students' body mass index (BMI) and an assessment of whether these kids are too fat. By 2011, the state will require all schools to test students in grades 1, 4, 7 and 10 and report the results to both parents and public health officials.

Of course, "fat," probably isn't exactly how they phrase it. Proponents of such measures refer to an ongoing war against childhood obesity. It sounds nicer. More proactive, you know?

The issue came to a head this week when a story in the Milford Daily News gained national traction. A nine-year-old girl, 4-foot-10, who weighs 90 pounds and is active in school sports, was cited as being in danger of being overweight. A small, singular story, but one that has caught the public's attention and sparked debate.

On the surface, the BMI reports might sound like a good idea. Everywhere you look these days the majority of people you see are overweight. Many seem teetering on the edge of obesity and barely able to walk. And it is not just adults, kids, even at the youngest of ages, are so fleshy you can probably be assured that heart failure or diabetes are in their future.

Yes, overweight kids are a national point of shame and possibly a health crisis in the making. We, as a country, have put video games, soda and KFC Double Down's ahead of exercise and a healthy diet. But this BMI-based school initiative is not going to help.

Let's start with the obvious. Parents already know whether their kids are too heavy. Do they really need to be told by a school nurse?

Yes, many parents make too many excuses when it comes to childhood obesity. Their kids are "big boned" or ready for a growth spurt that will even out their frame. There is a state of denial among many, to be sure, but deep down inside they know. They have to. The problem is that they don't care and a note from Nurse Nancy isn't going to change things one iota.

Then there is the BMI measurement itself. It's all but useless. Body builders and growing kids are often assessed as overweight. But weighing more than the average member of your peer group does not mean you are unhealthy. Tests like this are one-size-fits-all and not everyone fits neatly into their metrics.

What really bothers us though is the continual emergence of state and local government as a de-facto nanny. Smoking is taxed exponentially and banned in many places. Ok, we can accept that. After all, second hand smoke does impact other people. But then the city banned trans fats. Other states are taxing any drink with the "wrong" kind of sugar. Boston officials are trying to get residents to sign an anti-soda pledge. I'd prefer to eat whatever I want, thank you. I don't need you setting the menu.

Now, even how you raise your children is no longer your choice. It is theirs.

Make no mistake, schools should always be on the lookout for abuse and neglect. But stuffing little Gustav's face is hardly abuse. In some parts of the world a big child is considered a healthy child. What right do outsiders have to say your cultural norm is wrong and their way is right?

If a kid has to be rolled through the hallway on a hospital bed, then, yes, there is a problem worthy of intervention. Otherwise, who cares.

The state really needs to stop worrying about my waist line or your cholesterol and focus on what really is important. The money spent on these ridiculous tests might be used far better to offset the costs of nutrition programs or, perhaps, breakfast offerings for kids who would otherwise start the day, and go to bed, hungry.

More importantly, rather than set kids up for ridicule, esteem issues and all the psychological baggage that will come with state-sponsored name-calling, how about we all just – you know, for the sake of argument – worry about math, English and science for a change.

Agent Al Goetz said.

Years ago, the Asian water chestnut was sold in pet stores as a decoration for fish tanks. It is possible someone grew tired of owning fish and dumped a tank- complete with an Asian water chestnut- into the pond. It's also possible that a bird brought the vegetable to Ellis Pond. As the Asian water chestnut grows, thorns form on it, and these thorns can get caught in the features of unsuspecting ducks and geese. It is possible one unknowingly transported a chestnut to Ellis Pond.

Regardless of how it arrived in the pond, something has to be done, Conservation Commission Chairman Peter Bamber said.

"We're trying to do our part and save Norwood's watershed by being responsible," Bamber said, describing the need to clean Ellis Pond as one of huge importance.

"These things are incredibly intrusive and just grow incessantly," Bamber said. "We need to get as much as we can under control now."

It is up to us, Goetz said, as the Asian water chestnut has no natural predators here.

"With all these invasive species, there is no natural control," Goetz said. "The ducks and geese don't seem to eat it," meaning without human intervention, the Asian water chestnut could take over the pond.

He compared it to the Asian Longhorn Beetles that were discovered recently in Jamaica Plain. They have no natural predators here, meaning human intervention was necessary. The discovery of the Asian Longhorn Beetle in six red maple trees at the Faulkner Hospital led to the removal of all infested trees.

While the Asian water chestnut won't destroy trees, "it creates a mat on the surface of the water that you can't paddle a canoe through," Goetz said. "It chokes out everything," and can potentially kill fish living in the pond.

This is the second annual Ellis Pond cleanup organized by the Conservation Commission. Last year, 15 people came out on a rainy Sunday to help remove the Asian water chestnuts, and Bamber hopes to see at least 20 people this year.

Prior to last year's event, the last organized cleanup of Ellis Pond was in 2002. Last year's cleanup was done in September, but was moved up a few months this year.

"It was determined that we needed to get this work done in July, because later in the season, it would be too late," Bamber said, as the Asian water chestnut could have matured and fallen to the bottom of Ellis Pond. Currently, the plant floats along the surface, meaning now is the time to act.

"If we can get them early enough, we can pull them out before they reproduce," Goetz said.

Bamber and Goetz said this cleanup will need to be a yearly event, as the Asian water chestnut can remain viable for eight to ten years.

"We have to try and maintain what is obviously a jewel for the town of Norwood," Bamber said.

Government Account saw a $1,196 transfer to cover some costs associated with Town Meeting. In addition, $240 was transferred into the Engineers Co-Op Student Salary account, and $16 was transferred into the Planning Board Salaries account.

These transfers brought the Fiscal Year 2010 Reserve Fund down from approximately $88,000 to $35,000.

In addition to the reserve fund transfer, the FinCom approved over $129,000 in Municipal Relief Act transfers. The Municipal Relief Act allows for money to be moved within department budgets during the last two months of the fiscal year, and several departments stepped forward to take advantage of this.

The largest Municipal Relief Act transfer was for $125,000, by Norwood Light/Broadband Department.

"We have to transfer some money to pay for programming," Superintendent of the Light Department Malcolm McDonald said, as an increase in the number of customers means added programming costs.

The $125,000 comes from seven accounts in the Broadband Department: $9,500 was taken from the Broadband Salaries- Customer Service account, $1,000 was taken from the Broadband Salaries- Manager account, $70,000 came from the Broadband Administration ISP Help Desk account, $9,000 came from the Broadband Operation Overhead Lines account, $4,000 was taken from the Broadband Operations Misc. Distribution account, $21,000 came from the Broadband Wages Control account and $10,500 came from the Broadband Overtime account.

While it was a large transfer, it was due to substantial increases in the number of subscribers, General Manager John Carroll said, noting they have seen increases in cable, Internet and phone subscribers.

"It's great news that it's making a comeback in the cable and Internet side," FinCom member Joseph Greeley said. "The telephone continues to increase, which is also great."

In addition, there were three smaller Municipal Relief Act transfers. The Council on Aging Utilities account saw a $2,500 boost, with the money coming from the Group Health Insurance account. An additional $1,300 was taken from the Group Health Insurance account for the Animal Control Salaries account. Finally, $649 was transferred from the Printing of the Town Report Account to the Veterans Service Relief account.

On July 12, the Great Places in Massachusetts Commission released a list of 1,000 great places to visit in the Commonwealth. One Norwood location, the F. Holland Day House & Norwood History Museum, was named as a great place.

“That kind of recognition helps put it on the map,” Norwood Historical Society President Kate Allendorf said. “We were just delighted to see we were on the list.”

The 12-member Great Places in Massachusetts Commission spent 18 months sorting through over 12,000 online nominations to come up with the list of 1,000, and they considered a wide variety of historic sites, cultural venues and natural landscapes as they crafted their list. However, due to duplicate entries, the list only has 996 great places.

The Day House, located at 93 Day St., is open for tours every Sunday from 1 to 4 p.m., from now until Labor Day. Admission is $5 for adults, free for children and members of the Norwood Historical Society. Those who visit will find themselves in an 18-room mansion designed by noted Norwood photographer Fred Holland Day.

The house was initially built in 1859, and renovated in the early 1890s, and is a beauty, former Norwood Historical Society President Patricia Fanning said. Fanning, author of “Through an Uncommon Lens: The Life and Photography of F. Holland Day,” a comprehensive biography of Day that features over 100 of photographs, described the house as unique, noting “[it] contains eight fireplaces, many uniquely designed multi-level rooms, and beautiful oak and mahogany paneling and woodwork.”

The exterior is also unique, as it is made of brick, stucco and exposed half timbers.

“It would be nice for people to come in and see how beautiful it is,” Allendorf said, saying they typically attract a handful of visitors each week, including a number of first-time visitors.

“We have so many people in Norwood who come by in December or during the summer and say they’ve never come in it before,” Allendorf said.

In order to remain great, the Day House needs the support of volunteers, and getting involved is easy. Those interested in supporting the Day House or joining the Norwood Historical Society can call 781-762-9197 or visit the Day House during a Sunday tour.

“Whatever people give in terms of volunteerism is appreciated,” Allendorf said, adding they are always looking for donations as well, as this helps them keep the house in its original appearance.

The summer tours aren’t the only time the Day House is open to the public. During the school year, several events held in conjunction with the Art Department take place in the Day House. In addition, the Day House was a stop on the Norwood Historical Society’s bus tour showcasing the town’s veteran memorials. Other stops included Memorial Hall, the Old Parish Cemetery, Aaron Guild Memorial Park and Highland Cemetery.

In addition to being one of 1,000 Great Places to Visit in the Commonwealth, the Day House is one the National Register of Historic Places. Additional information about the Day House can be found at <http://www.norwoodhistoricalsociety.org>.

Airport receives compliance and grant

Brad Cole
Staff Reporter

On July 19, the Norwood Memorial Airport received a $572,850 grant from the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) to cover costs associated with the runway 10-28 reconstruction project.

"The project is to reconstruct a portion of runway 10-28 measuring 450 feet by 75 feet," Airport Manager Russ Maguire said, adding they will also remark this portion of the runway.

This $572,850 FAA grant represents 95 percent of the project's $603,000 price tag. The remaining five percent will be split between the state and town, each paying 2.5 percent of the cost. Maguire said they are anticipating a $15,000 grant from the state to help fund the project.

This $603,000 number includes the $420,000 bid by the West Bridgewater-based IW Harding Construction, administration fees, engineering fees and other costs associated with the project. These fees date back to the May 2009 special Town Meeting, when TM members approved borrowing $65,000 to pay for the project engineer, DuBois and King.

"The $65,000 for engineering is reimbursed under this grant," Maguire said, adding that most of the costs associated with DuBois and King have already been paid.

Also approved at the May 2009 TM was the borrowing of $200,000 to pay for repairs done to the airport's parking lot. Maguire confirmed that the airport recently received a grant from the FAA to reimburse this cost.

"All the costs associated with the parking lot, at this time, have been covered," Maguire said.

The delay in receiving funding for the parking lot project tied into a complaint filed by airport tenant Boston Air Charter (BAC) in 2007 after Boston Municipal Airport, Inc. (BMA), another tenant, refused to allow them access to utility lines to install a self-fueling pump. The complaint led to FAA action, which declared Norwood Memorial Airport out of compliance in April 2008, freezing a pair of grants previously awarded to the airport.

As a result, the Norwood Airport Commission was tasked with giving BAC access to these utilities. TM members approved spending $15,000 on a utility easement across BMA's property. On Oct. 14, 2009, the Norwood Airport Commission approved and signed off on this easement, granting BAC access to the site.

The FAA declared Norwood Memorial Airport back in compliance earlier this year, once again making them grant eligible. They took advantage of the reinstatement and applied for this grant in March.

The grant was discussed at the Norwood Airport Commission's July 14 meeting, though at the time, it had not been awarded. Jeff Adler, Senior Project Manager of Dubois and King, said it was highly likely they would receive a grant, because the runway project is considered a high priority project in the eyes of the FAA.

Now that the airport has FAA funding for the runway project, construction can begin on the site. While construction on runway 10-28 hasn't begun yet, Adler and the Norwood Airport Commission are already preparing for their calendar year 2011 project. While he did not go into great detail, Adler revealed that work needs to be done on taxi lane bravo, and a meeting will be held in August to outline the scope of this project.

Busy Tuesday for Police Two Norwood residents arrested

Brad Cole
Staff Reporter

The Norwood Police Department had a busy Tuesday morning, arresting two Norwood residents for thefts along Nahatan Street: one for breaking and entering into motor vehicles, the other for shoplifting at CVS Pharmacy.

The first case was at 12:14 a.m., when police received a report of three people, one male and two females, going through a vehicle on the corner of Nahatan and Pleasant Street. Police investigated the scene, and returned to the station after arresting Anthony DeCosta, 23, of 120 Pleasant St. DeCosta was charged with breaking and entering of a motor vehicle.

"The police were actually able to find DeCosta leaning into the vehicle," Police Spokesman Kevin Grasso said, adding that when questioned, DeCosta could not identify why he was going through the car, though investigation leads them to believe he was attempting to steal the car's radio.

The police contacted the owner of the vehicle, who knew DeCosta. She said that he had no reason to be going through the car.

As the witness described, there were two females in the area, but officers were led to believe their appearance was unrelated to DeCosta or the breaking and entering case, Grasso said.

The second case occurred a little over three hours later, at 3:35 a.m., when police received a call from a CVS Pharmacy employee about a pair of individuals allegedly stuffing their pockets with merchandise. Police responded and questioned the duo while parked in the parking lot. When confronted about shoplifting, one had a receipt for the merchandise, but the other did not, leading to the arrest of Marcos Ortiz, 18, of 521 Norwest Drive, who was charged with shoplifting by concealing merchandise.

"While questioning Ortiz, they observed there were some baggies on the floor at his feet," Grasso said, and the contents of these baggies were a green, leafy substance that appeared to marijuana.

A warrant investigation followed, several baggies were found, and the substance was identified as marijuana. This led to a second charge against Ortiz, possession to distribute a Class D drug.

Preparing for an inspection

HS project moving along

Brad Cole
Staff Reporter

School might be out for the summer, but the Norwood High School remains a hub of activity due to all the construction work being done there. During the summer season, work on the outside of the building and around the construction site is in full swing, and work on the inside continues along.

This is best seen on the third floor, where the ceiling grid has been installed, as have drops for lights and sprinklers.

"We're shooting for an above ceiling inspection on July 26," Michael Moisé of Agostini Construction said. "This would allow placement of ceiling tiles."

Assistant Building Inspector Paul Starratt said that so far work on the site is going very well, indicating that if this continues the inspection will be a success.

"What's ready for the above ceiling inspection is very neatly done," Starratt said, adding that the rest of the building is coming along nicely as well.

The building is being done by floor, from top to bottom, meaning the third floor is closest to completion. Currently, ceiling grid work and painting is being done on the second floor, while plastering work is being finished on the first floor. Ceramic tiles are being placed on the second and third floor, and Moisé expects that vinyl tiles will be placed in mid-August.

In addition to the indoor activity, Moisé confirmed that work continues along the outside, with the construction crew working on the field, a parking lot, sidewalks and outdoor utilities.

"Another couple of weeks, and we should be wrapped up on the outside masonry of the building," Moisé said. "That's all taking shape."

The courtyard is also in the works, as they are grading the area and preparing it for sidewalks. The courtyard isn't the only area undergoing grading work, as the field and parking lot are also being worked on.

In addition, they are preparing for the installation of light poles around the site. The light pole bases are going in, and underground conduit is being installed to connect the poles to each other and back to the new Norwood High School.

Over the years, the Circle of Hope has provided over $150,000 in assistance to families in crisis. Every penny that is raised goes back out in aid. "The Town of Norwood is very fortunate to have an organization like the Circle of Hope to help people in their time of need" said Norwood Bank President Chris Dixon.

Town publishes money list

Brad Cole
Staff Reporter

Each year, for whatever reason, checks issued to town employees go uncashed, and this unclaimed money sits, waiting for its proper owner to step forward and claim it. This year is no exception, and $23,592.06 sits unclaimed. A total of 158 checks issued between Jan. 16, 2007 and Dec. 22, 2009, ranging from $11.46 to $4,464 are available.

People might be owed money by the Town of Norwood and not even know it, which is why the Treasurer-Collector's Office has compiled a list of to inform the public with the aim to distribute the money to its rightful owner.

This unclaimed money list will be posted on the town's website, <http://www.norwoodma.gov/>, on July 22. Prior to posting the list, the office sent out letters to everyone owed money, hoping that people would respond to a direct mailing.

"Anyone who has an uncashed check, we send them a letter," Town Treasurer Robert McGuire said. "We get a lot of return mail. People have moved and didn't update their address."

Without the proper address, it becomes harder to contact people about the money, so the office prepares an unclaimed money list, which is posted on the town's website and advertised in local papers. Once posted, the list remains on the site for one year.

"The unclaimed money is set aside in the town's books," McGuire said. "They have one [calendar] year to claim it after we advertise it. After one year, it goes back into the town coffers."

In order to claim the money, one has to fill out the Unclaimed Check Form, which is available on the town's website, located at http://www.norwoodma.gov/index.php?option=com\_docman&task=cat\_view&gid=228&Itemid=142. If a claim is for over $100, the claimant's signature must be notarized, though McGuire noted that in most cases, it is for small amounts of money. This year, 118, or 74.7 percent of unclaimed checks, are under $100.

McGuire described claiming funds as a fairly simple procedure, the harder part is getting in touch with those owed money. Most of the time, the issue is with a person's address. They moved, but didn't inform the town and the mailed paycheck didn't get properly forwarded.

McGuire warned that once the list is advertised and posted online, search firms tend to step forward and check the lists, and these search firms try to find the people owed money, charging a fee for 'finding' the owed money.

"We try to make every effort to keep it as inexpensive for people as we possibly can," McGuire said, as all a person has to do is fill out the claim form and send it to Town Hall with the proper documentation, which includes the person's social security or federal identification number. Fraud or misrepresentation using the form could lead to criminal prosecution.
