Norwood says no to Plimpton Press project

Joe DiFazio
Staff Reporter

In the culmination of what has been a long and divisive fight about whether the town should accept Plimpton Press and whether the town has enough affordable housing, Town Meeting finally voted on the matter Thursday night.

Though the majority of Town Meeting favored the overlay district for the project, the article failed, not receiving the 2/3 support necessary to pass. The final vote tally was 93 in favor and 70 against.

"I'm still smiling," said Town Meeting Member Kevin Pentowski, one of the main opponents of the project, after the vote.

The article asked Town Meeting whether they would accept an overlay district over Plimpton Press in order for the former industrial building to be converted to an apartment and condominium complex. The proposed project would have been a smart growth 40R project, meaning that the project would have counted towards state mandated affordable housing minimums, and Norwood would have received a payment from the state for building an affordable unit near public transit.

One of the main points of contention in arguments about the proposal concerned Norwood's 40B minimums. The state mandates 10 percent of housing units or 1.5 percent of developable land area in towns be dedicated to subsidized or affordable housing. The town's official study, highlighted by Town Assistant Engineer Andrew Murphy on the first night of the Special

The Norwood Firefighters are heroes to many residents, but Sunday they were helping somebody even closer to home.

The local firefighters union put together a pancake breakfast to help benefit a fellow firefighter's wife, who has developed Non-Hodgkins Lymphoma. The Fire Department wanted to help with the financial struggle involved with the illness.

"We threw it together pretty quickly ... we wanted to help out as a union with some of the co-pays and such, it got to be overwhelming," said Firefighter Paul Ronco, who is on the executive board of Plimpton Press Park was blocked with cement barriers and a sign that said "Save our town" over the weekend after Town Meeting denied the Plimpton Press Overlay District. The overlay would have allowed the old factory building to become a 40R apartment complex with 25 percent affordable housing. "The town had the opportunity to open the road. It's a private road," said Charlotte Maynard, whose family's company, Creative Development, owns and manages the property. The Fire Department asked that they be granted access on the Plimpton Avenue side of the building in case of emergency, and the property management complied by putting a chain there instead. A barrier still blocks the Lenox Street entrance. According to the Fire Department, the town does not have right of way through the property. "It's almost an allegory. We block Article 3 and they block the road," said Conor Kenney, a member of Norwood Citizens for Responsible Development, who staunchly opposed the project.

the International Association of Firefighters Local 1631 and helped plan the event.

Fire Chief Anthony Greeley said the union came up with the perfect event.

"That family has been impacted negatively and has been financially challenged, and we asked what we can do to help them. The union came up with the great idea of a pancake breakfast," said Greeley.

The event started at 8:30 in the morning and was geared towards kids. In addition to getting to see the firefighters cook pancakes and serve coffee, kids got to eat in and explore some of the firehouse. The firefighters even opened a few of their engines up for people to get a closer look.

"We created an atmosphere for kids with games, opening up the fire trucks, getting people in the Fire Station and just meeting the firemen. It went over very well. And at the end of the day we're going to be able to help one of our own with the money raised," said Greeley.

One event children seemed to enjoy the most was getting to use a fire hose, with a firefighter's help, to put out a fake fire. There were also several raffles with prizes that included getting to have a birthday party at the Fire Station and getting to ride in a fire truck during one of the parades.

500 or 600 people showed up in a steady stream throughout the morning. He said that he had sent out fliers with kids in school, but wasn't sure how many people would show up. It ended up going so well, said Ronco that they want to make it annual event.

"It gets the public in the building, it lets the citizens meet their local firefighters. It's a great environment for children and it's all positive. We love doing that. It's our job to protect this town. Why not meet the people we work for?" said Greeley.

Ronco also said that they have several events planned to benefit the firefighter's wife, whose name the union isn't stating publicly in order to respect the family's privacy. The next event will be a firefighter challenge at the Fire Station on June 7. Thankfully, the woman's health is responding.

"She is doing better. She is doing well," said Ronco.

Selectmen discuss recreation activities, gas lines

Joe DiFazio
Staff Reporter

The Board of Selectmen met Tuesday night at Town Hall to check in on a variety of issues around town.

The Selectmen began their meeting with a report from Superintendent of Recreation, Gerald Miller. He reported that the several Recreation Department activities that happened throughout the spring had gone very well. Miller said that the annual "Touch a Truck" event, where children can explore various vehicles used by the Police, Fire and other departments, yielded a good turnout despite rainy conditions. On the same Saturday in April, the Recreation Department, along with the South Norwood Committee, hosted the annual South Norwood Fishing Derby and Rubber Ducky Race.

"We had a great day," said Miller.

Miller also reported that the Recreation Department's School of Dance put on their annual recital with great success. He added that the Recreation Department is currently preparing the town's pools for the summer by painting and cleaning them.

Later, representatives from National Grid appeared before the Board to explain a project that needs to be undertaken on Willow Street, much to the chagrin of several of the neighbors who were at the meeting.

Mike Smith, a manager with National Grid, explained that there was a drop in gas system pressure due to what appears to be several blockages near the intersection of Willow Street and Lenox Street. To alleviate the problem, National Grid plans to install gas lines that will bypass the blockages. Department of Public Works Director and Town Engineer Mark Ryan wants to pave Willow Street this year, however. In order to accommodate paving, National Grid will try to have the work done by July 1. Ryan indicated that would be enough time for the road to be paved in September.

Finally, the Selectmen scheduled the town-wide meeting to discuss plans for fixing the downtown area. It will take place Tuesday, June 17 at the Old Colonial Cafe.

CORRECTIONS

In last week's Opinion column, this writer made two significant mistakes. The first concerned Selectmen Chairman Mike Lyons' business on Washington St., The Breadbasket Bakery and Cafe. I was not aware that the Lyons Family had spent months renovating the location at 485 Washington St., and is now open for business six days a week starting at 8 a.m. with a full menu including breakfast, lunch and fresh-baked items daily. I apologize for not checking the facts before incorrectly stating that his business was not open to the public or reliant on foot traffic as are other Washington St. businesses.

Also, I incorrectly identified Conservation Commission member Joe DiMaria as Chairman. Though Mr. DiMaria is a past chairman, the chairman of the commission now is Cheryl Rogers. I apologize to both of these members as well.

Steve Costello fought till the end

Joe DiFazio
Staff Reporter

A longtime Norwood fixture died Monday morning after a long battle with cancer.

Town Moderator David Hern announced the death of former Town Planner Stephen Costello to Town Meeting Monday night.

"He cared about the town ...he was courageous in the face of illness," said Hern.

Costello had just retired in March. Many around town have stories of the man they called caring and intelligent. Selectman Allan Howard said that Costello had called when his sister had cancer and tried to relay as much information and experience as he could to help the Howard family through their own difficult time.

"He was an amazing teacher and an amazing person to be around. I've always held him in very high esteem," said Chairman of the Board of Selectmen Mike Lyons, who began his relationship with Costello while on the Steering Committee

Costello leaves behind his loving wife Joan (Ellery) of Plymouth; two adoring sons, Erich Rose of Plymouth and Daniel Rose, his wife Elizabeth and their son Sammy of Alexandria, VA. He also leaves his mother Esther Costello of Walpole, and two brothers, Richard of Worcester and Thomas of Marietta, GA. Costello was a friend of Bill for 29 years, an avid golfer, and an Imerman Angel. Visiting hours are 4-8 p.m. on Thursday, May 22, with a service at 10 a.m. on Friday, May 23 at Crapo-Hathaway Funeral Home 350 Somerset Ave., Taunton, MA. Interment will be in St. Francis Cemetery, Taunton, MA. In lieu of flowers, please make donations in his name to The New England Shelter for Homeless Veterans in Boston or to www.targetcancer.info

Stephen Costello

"Steve was a true gentleman ... he was an inspiration to all of us," said Selectman Bill Plasko.

SETTLED SCIENCE

To The Editor:

Town Meeting on May 12th regarding the mega-Plimpton Press development is now settled. TM Member and ConCom official Joe DiMaria put to bed quite handily that we are way over the 1.5% of useable land required to stop all and any 40b and 40r projects. Dick Heaton used an incredibly conservative estimate of unbuildable land (the Fowl Meadow) down by the airport. He said at least 100 acres. Joe DiMaria put the icing on the cake when he noted that there are 2,100 acres in this area. In fact, there is so much so that if our officials were on the ball, the Campanelli project would be in jeopardy. I believe it is in doubt because they breached our Tax Incremental Financing contract. I tried to lead the Board of Selectmen on this, but apparently they had other matters.

Now, unbelievably, our officials are trying to foist a 240-unit densely-packed project at the Bindery (Plimpton). This makes zero sense to me. Both areas are commercially-zoned and our officials just roll over and let mega-projects in. What is going on? Norwood keeps its residential tax base low by making our commercial base hum. The last thing we need is more housing complexes and "a new school." Have you noticed your tax rate going up lately? Think the high school, 2.5% added automatically every year, and new residential construction draining the till.

Does anybody ever think of the widow who wants to stay in her house, but her real estate taxes are becoming a burden? We have 1,500 Section 8 vouchers floating through town plus the 40b's. Don't have liberal guilt. Norwood has done way more than its fair share.

Let's talk Campanelli. Enough!

REGARDING DOWNTOWN VACANCIES

To the Editor:

How about using some of them for co-working spaces?

The shift in the world of work is going from companies keeping people on staff (and in their offices) to consulting, freelancing, contingent, and contracting. Some reports are now that a third of all US workers fall into these categories ... hence, all those people you see at coffee shops, libraries, etc. on their laptops, working from wherever they choose.

But, as humans we don't like to be alone all that much (and working from home can be filled with distractions for many), so we've had the rise of co-working spaces around the world.

As you know, Norwood now has some of the fastest internet in the Commonwealth, thanks to Norwood Light.

This is great for residents and businesses, but I think there's an opportunity here for you to draw people to the downtown area by having a co-working space in one of the empty stores.

The trick is that for freelancers, you can't rent an office; they're too expensive and, in this current economy, the work can be unpredictable, but the idea of coming to a space that has fiber internet speeds where you can work without having to buy a coffee or a meal is very, very appealing.

I live in Jamaica Plain, but honestly with the arrival of Norwood Light Broadband I'm tempted to move here because given most of the work I do, I'm online all day long. A slow internet connection is utterly frustrating and you realize how much faster you could get your work done with fiber optic speeds.

There are co-working spaces all around Boston, Cambridge, and Somerville now, but I don't know of any in the Norwood area. It wouldn't take much to physically set it up: some tables and chairs is all you need (maybe Woodstuff could share some and get promotion from it!). People could also bring in their own if they like. Give the space a coat of paint and mellow lighting, and the fastest Norwood Light internet possible, and you're all set. Best part is that when the store gets rented by someone, you can move the co-working space to another vacant spot (or it may be profitable enough that they can stay).

Ideally, it would be a space where people could rent by the month. You can also have a price for drop-in visits. That is the model most of the co-working spaces have.

My suggestion would be to do a little research in Norwood and surrounding towns to find out how much demand there might be. I'm fairly sure you would draw from some distance around the co-working space. The co-working spaces in Boston/Cambridge/Somerville are all quite busy, but surely there are freelancers in Norwood, Dedham, Canton, Needham, Sharon, Newton, etc. who are also faced with this conundrum. I bet you would even draw people out from Boston who want/need the speed.

A brief online survey about such an idea would get around quickly ... people who are consulting, etc. tend to be pretty connected via social media, plus some outreach to local news outlets.

Bringing all these people into downtown Norwood means they'll want breakfast, lunch, dinner, and will do some shopping while they're here. The only difficulty might be parking, since a good percentage of them would want to park for the full work day, but perhaps there is a solution for that nearby.

Just wanted to offer up the idea ... happy to discuss further if you're interested!

STAR LIGHT, STAR BRIGHT

To the Editor:

On April 11th, in the Tiffany Ballroom of 4 Points by Sheraton Hotel, the stars were shining and the air was full of excitement. Six wonderful dancers were on hand to amaze their friends and neighbors who came to support them and the Circle of Hope. Valerie Bishop, Sue Bunker, Mindy Keyes, Brian McDonough, Chris Eysie and Frederick Wobrock gave performances that surprised, excited, and left the audience wishing for more. Their hard work and dedication to raising funds for others in Norwood resulted in this being the most money ever raised at any of our fundraisers. What a fantastic group!

Our thanks go out to our friends who made this night possible — The 4 Points by Sheraton Hotel, Fred Astaire Studios, Norwood Bank, Martignetti Liquors, Ed Hickey Flowers, Norwood Light Broadband, NPA TV, Shear Illusions, Olde Colonial Café, Lewis' Restaurant, Colonial House, Linda Reilly, Cheryl Murphy, Ellie & Mike Bergeron, Kathy Claffey, Judy Martin, Debbie Holmwood, George Usevich, Jack McCarthy, Renzo Aida, Missy Sansone, Mike Lyons, and all of the Norwood Businesses who supported our dancers with their fundraisers.

Last, but by no means least — a personal "Thank You" to "Shelley's Angels" — Tim McDonough, Dave Tuttle, Olga Abdallah, Donna Arthur, Carole Cappuccio, Robert Doucette, Marcia Gearty, Stephen Grenham, Carolyn Murphy, Jack Perry, Carolyn Riccardi, Rosemary Riley, Paul Ronco, Christiana Rose, Lauri Ryding, Kathy St. Cyr, Margaret Thorne, and Elizabeth Vincent. Without these wonderful people, and the great support from the residents and businesses in Norwood, we would not have been able to offer over $415,000 in financial aid to those families who are struggling with catastrophic illnesses.

Thank you all for helping me to keep Michelle's promise to do for others what was done for her.

The Airport Commission and Boston Executive Helicopter can't come to an agreement regarding establishing Boston Executive as a fuel provider.

Airport Commission meeting gets testy regarding BEH proposal

Joe DiFazio
 Staff Reporter

The Airport Commission meeting room got tense last Wednesday as Boston Executive Helicopter (BEH) asked to carve out more land for their operations.

Chris Donovan, president of BEH, and the company's counsel, Joshua Fox, appeared before the Commission about their ongoing construction of a fueling station and hangar as well as their interest in expanding their operation at the airport. BEH is interested in becoming a fuel provider at the airport, but say they need more space on the apron and airplane parking areas to do so.

The Commission has not yet made a determination on leasing the amount of land that BEH is requesting, and is looking for more financial information. The Commission had offered BEH a smaller additional lease of just over 6,000 square feet, but BEH declined the offer because they maintained that it was an inadequate amount of space to become a fuel provider.

The Board of Selectmen has also looked into the dispute between BEH and the airport, and added four more members to the Airport Commission in an attempt to help resolve the issue. The addition of Michael Sheehan, Hylie Hutchens, Paul Shaughnessy Jr. and Oulton Hues Jr. brings the Commission's membership total to nine.

Fox said that BEH would now accept the lease of just over 6,000 square feet on a portion of the airport called the west ramp that was previously offered to them. According to Donovan, the west ramp currently has 100,000 square feet available for lease.

Commissioner Kevin Shaughnessy said that because BEH had previously refused the offer, he wasn't sure that it was still available. Chairman Thomas Wynne said that the business proposal BEH submitted only came in last week and that he had not had a chance to read through it. Fox said that if at all possible, and preferably in executive session, he would still want to discuss their business proposal and a financial sheet he had prepared for the meeting. Fox wanted the Commission to keep the business's financial sheet confidential to the best of their abilities, hence asking that the discussion happen in executive session, which is closed to the public.

However, some Commissioners didn't like the business plan in the first place.

"I wouldn't even call this a business plan," said Sheehan. "It's not even worth the paper it's printed on."

Wynne stated that the board was not yet in a position to discuss a wider use of the west ramp. Kevin Shaughnessy said that if they were going to get a person to lease the west ramp from the airport, that perhaps the Commission should get a request for proposal, starting a formal bidding process.

Vice Chair of the Commission and Town Engineer Mark Ryan said that in an earlier plan for airport development, the west ramp was designated as underutilized, but wasn't sure what the next step for it should be.

"I think we need to step back and develop a master plan," said Ryan.

Donovan responded that he has expressed the desire to become the airport's second fixed base operator (FBO) since 2010. An FBO provides aeronautical services such as hangaring and fueling. Donovan said that he has made significant investments in the airport and thinks that he should be allowed to compete with the current and only FBO, Flight Level. Donovan said that he would be willing to lease the entire west ramp on a short-term lease, such as five years, and could pay the entire rent up front.

Kevin Shaughnessy said that the Commission still has not seen any financial statements from BEH regarding their proposed future operations. He said in addition to the balance sheet, he'd want to see an income statement and cash flow analysis. Sheehan added that for a proper business plan, BEH should provide what Kevin Shaughnessy was asking for, including bank statements for the last year, market analysis, analysis of competitors and personal financial statements from the principal owners. It would be in the best interest of the town to see financial statements from the principal, Sheehan said.

"The first step is the financials," said Wynne.

The Airport Commission has faced similar complaints regarding maintaining a second fuel base operator. In 2008 the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) found the Norwood Airport in violation of their guidelines. The airport had violated assurances of economic nondiscrimination and was cited for effectively granting exclusive right to one fueling station to Eastern Air Center on land that was partially federally funded.

Fox and BEH also added they are interested in receiving a tape recording of the Commission's last meeting made by secretary Deb Reddick. BEH filed a request for the tape via the Freedom of Information Act. Brandon Moss, town counsel, said that they would have to wait for a determination from the state regarding whether they would divulge the tape, because the recording was made on Reddick's personal recorder.

Fox responded that the Commission could voluntarily make the tape available in the interest of transparency. Sheehan moved to make the tape available, but Wynne held off until executive session.

Calls made by the Norwood Record to Moss regarding the tape have not been returned.

In a Special Town Meeting that featured discussions of medical marijuana and the Plimpton Press project, several other financial articles didn't warrant as much discussion Monday Night, but did raise a few eyebrows.

The meeting began with Town Meeting Member Conor Kenney withdrawing his article that asked the town to support an appeal that Town Meeting Member Brian Hardiman had filed to the Department of Developmental Services (DDS). The appeal was an attempt to get more information about DDS's properties that could be used in studying the 40B law that requires Norwood to dedicate 1.5 percent of its land area to affordable housing.

The article was withdrawn on the basis that DDS denied the appeal.

Town Meeting then approved several articles that granted Norwood the ability to move money around in different accounts that were over-funded to pay others that were under-funded. Two approved articles, however, took funds from the "free cash" account to pay out other accounts. The payment of $324,132 for snow and ice expenditures was taken from the free cash account and split between the Department of Public Works and the School Department. Another $30,000 was granted from free cash to help pay incidentals for direct relief and medical costs for veterans.

Several questions were raised when the articles for money appropriations to the school system came up. Town Meeting approved a transfer of $175,207 from prior year budgets to the School Department's fiscal year (FY) 2014 budget. Most of it, $162,223, comes from FY'13 and $12,984 comes from FY'09. Another transfer of $80,000 was approved to go to the School Department from savings the town received on interest payments because of an increase in Norwood's bond level rating. Finally, Town Meeting approved a $37,500 reduction in free cash to pay for a legal settlement for the School Department regarding a Special Education dispute.

The School Department had an article that could have asked for as much as $120,000 to cover their FY'14 budgets, which was withdrawn, because the projected shortfall appears as if it won't happen, according to Superintendent of the School System James Hayden.

Town Meeting Member Antoinette Eosco, who represents District Five, questioned why there was money left over from five years ago.

"If there's money sitting there that's pretty shocking," said Eosco.

Town Clerk and Accountant Robert Thornton responded that the money from 2009 was an anomaly. He added that the money came in this year as a result of an audit of a program Norwood had used and was over-charged for.

"Typically all accounts are closed out ... we're usually looking for every dime we can get," said Thornton.

Several other Town Meeting Members asked questions about the money moves for the school.

Thornton explained that the School Committee by statute could move money around in their own accounts, instead of coming to Town Meeting for each move. Funds moved into their account must be approved. The additional funds given to the School Department's budget, Thornton said, are to cover several special education expenses for FY'15 that were paid forward from FY'14. Thornton added that these moves were necessary because the School Department was having a difficult time balancing their budget for FY'15.

Finance Commission Member Joe Greeley said that hopefully many of the budget questions that Town Meeting was asking could be cleared up by a newly formed Committee of 21. The Committee, a subcommittee of the Budget Balancing Committee (BBC), was formed to study the School Department's finances. The new Committee will be made up of the BBC and several Town Meeting Members.

Though several questions were also raised about the legal settlement School Committee, Chairwoman Courtney Rau then explained that by law the School Department could not discuss the legal judgment.

Town Meeting then approved Norwood to borrow over $700,000 from the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority, interest free, for maintenance of sewer and water lines.

The last action Town Meeting took was to grant part of an easement that gave access to power lines to Norwood Gardens. While surveying for a project to replace high-tension electrical lines, it was found that part of Norwood Gardens impedes on the easement. The town will receive a legal right of way from Norwood Gardens to access the lines and just over $29,000. The Special Town Meeting was then dissolved so that the Annual Town Meeting could begin.

Thomas Maloney, Chairman of the Finance Commission, started the annual meeting with a presentation of how Norwood figures its budgets. He stated that this year the General Government's budget increased $700,000, largely to raise the budget for snow and ice. He added that the School Department's budget rose $2.3 million largely due to teacher salaries and special education costs, and that the shared costs for the town increased around $700,000 for a variety of reasons, including debt and pensions.

Norwood's Annual town Meeting will continue Thursday night.

Town Meeting, says Norwood has not reached its minimums. Many people contend that Plimpton Press would have helped the town reach its affordable housing floor, thus preventing the possibility of 40B projects. Developers, empowered by the state, can build 40B affordable housing projects in variance to local zoning in order to bring a town into compliance.

A private land area study commissioned by Town Meeting Member Brian Hardiman claims that the town is over the 1.5 percent threshold. Richard Heaton of H&H Associates, who Hardiman hired, presented their findings to Town Meeting last Monday. One of Heaton's main points was that the Neponset River Watershed, which he said is much larger than the conservative 100 acres he used in his report, puts the town well over the threshold because it can't be developed on. Joseph DiMaria, a member of the Conservation Committee, attested to counting out the 2,300-acre watershed because it was protected. Selectman Bill Plasko argued against that finding because he said the protections the state provides for the area do not prohibit development.

Despite Thursday being the second night of debate on the article, there was no shortage of opinions voiced, with over 20 registered speakers from all different backgrounds in Norwood weighing in.

"The fact that renters don't contribute to the community is kind of silly," said former Selectman Jerry Kelleher about how the ongoing discussions can become disparaging towards the town's apartment dwellers.

Kelleher added that the state put the smart growth 40R plans in place for a reason, and that they would directly help Norwood by developing the blighted and underutilized Plimpton Press. Town Meeting Member Michael Bergeron, who represents District One, agreed that there would be some positives, but that Heaton and DiMaria's presentations were compelling.

"My personal opinion is that the project is too large ... I don't live near Plimpton, [but] I regard every resident as my neighbor," said Bergeron.

Plasko said that there were a lot of comments made at Town Meeting that were misleading. He said that he, the town counsel, the engineer and many others have looked at the town study of the 1.5 percent issue, and that even after the exhaustive study, he feels the town has not yet reached the minimum. He said that several Department of Developmental Service group homes that the H&H study used were technically confidential and did not count. He also indicated that the wetland areas around the airport supported by DiMaria couldn't be counted out for the purposes of 40B law.

Several people were concerned that if Plimpton Press isn't allowed, what the alternatives might be.

"If we vote down the Plimpton Press Project and we haven't met the threshold, we'll have Forbes Hill," said Town Meeting Member Peter McFarland, who represents District Three, about a larger 40B project that has applied to be built in Norwood.

McFarland also worried about stimulating the ailing downtown area and attracting younger people to a Norwood that is growing older.

"For the future and the people that aren't in this room, we need to approve Plimpton Press," said McFarland.

Town Meeting Member John Hall, who represents District Six, was concerned about having to defend the 1.5 percent in court against 40B developers.

"It's not enough to convince ourselves," said Hall, who thinks that the proposed Plimpton project is the best practical use of the space available to the town.

Planning Board Member Ernie Paciorkowski said that he supported the project for similar reasons. He felt that the court would not be on the town's side. He said the development would help revive the downtown and that it will bring housing values in the area up much more than the current blighted building would.

Hardiman contended that the town's own studies had previously stated that Norwood had met the 1.5 percent, referencing several e-mails he received via a Freedom of Information Act request as evidence. He also said the study he commissioned was the only independent study done.

"Do you think I wanted to spend almost $15,000 of my own money?" said Hardiman about his commitment to stopping the project. "The town's land area [requirement] is met."

Finance Commission Member Judy Langone said the fact that the clock tower section of Plimpton Press will remain in place and zoned as limited manufacturing is one of her main reasons for voting no.

After the large amount of registered speakers, which was a mix of people for and against the article, the question was moved immediately. There was no open discussion as the meeting bumped against 10:30 p.m., when Town Meeting bylaws dictate that it end without approval for continuation.

School Committee supports 21 plan

In a short-handed meeting, the School Committee decided to officially support the new Committee of 21.

"We don't anticipate it getting less expensive to run the schools ... the idea is a good one. My preference would be to look at everyone's budgets," said Chairwoman Courtney Rau about the Committee's goal of looking at the School System's budgets and financing. She had mentioned in earlier discussions her preference to look at budgets town-wide.

The new committee will start with the Budget Balancing Committee (BBC) as its base. The BBC is made up of two members from the Board of Selectmen (BOS), two members from the Finance Commission (FinCom) and two members from the School Committee, with the Town Manager, Superintendent of Schools and Town Accountant. Each segment of the government, FinCom, BOS and School Committee makes up a third of the BBC. The new committee of 21 will add the Assistant Town Manager, School Business Manager, Town Treasurer and three Town Meeting Members for each segment of government.

"The concept was spurred by once again there [being] a shared level of frustration," said Town Clerk and Accountant Robert Thornton in a prior BBC meeting. "The thing that struck me ... it's not getting any easier [to balance the budget]."

The School Committee voted 3-0 to empower Rau with choosing the School Committee's three Town Meeting members. Committee members Paul Samargedlis and Vice-Chair John Badger were absent for the vote due to work reasons.

Rau said that she had eight or nine people interested in serving on the new committee from all different facets of town life such as a few members of the Committee of 21 formed to make decisions on the new high school, town board heads and parents. She said the key for a successful committee was finding people that could sell the merits of any proposal needed to Town Meeting.

Superintendent of Norwood Public Schools, James Hayden, said that the timing for the new committee was good because the state just finished a total review of the Norwood schools. According to Hayden, the review looked at many key areas that would be of interest to the new committee. The report hasn't yet been published.

At the beginning of the meeting, Principal of the Callahan School Robert Griffin appeared before the Committee to ask for permission to dedicate the library at the Callahan to former teacher Andrea Sullivan and place plaques commemorating her service.

"Her kids loved her. They would come back to the school to report their successes," said Griffin.

Sullivan, who died in October of last year, was a special education teacher at the school for 18 years. She also taught adult education classes. In her obituary, it was asked that people donate to the Callahan Parent Teacher Association (PTA) in lieu of sending flowers.

Griffin stated that the PTA had received almost $4,000 in donations after Sullivan's death. An additional $1,000 was raised with the help of Paula Pelaggi and Recreation Department Superintendent Gerald Miller at the Recreation Department Dance Recital. Flowers were sold during the recital with the proceeds going to the memory of Sullivan.

With the $5,000 Griffin said that the Callahan PTA wanted to establish a ten-year $500 scholarship. The Committee voted unanimously to allow Griffin and the PTA to dedicate the library and establish the scholarship.

ADHD COMMUNITY WORKSHOP

If you or your child is being treated for ADHD with Ritalin, Adderall, or ConConcerta, come to a special workshop at the Morrill Memorial Library on Thursday, June 12 at 7 p.m. led by guest speaker Dr. Marc C. Saulnier, D.C. This interactive workshop, sponsored by the National Wellness Foundation, will provide information as to whether these drugs are safe and necessary, if any alternatives exist, and what research on ADD and ADHD is currently being conducted. For the past seven years, Dr. Saulnier has been providing chiropractic care in his hometown of Norwood. "SYMPHONY OF THE SOIL" FILM

The Morrill Memorial Library is presenting an evening of film and discussion on Wednesday, June 11 at 6:30 p.m. with a screening of the award-winning documentary, "Symphony of the Soil." Did you know that it takes between 700 and 1,500 years to generate an inch of topsoil, and that 90% of U.S. cropland is now losing soil faster than its sustainable replacement rate? This important film addresses concerns such as how we can help conserve this vital resource, and what others are doing to preserve our precious soil. The film is sponsored by Together Yes, a nonprofit organization dedicated to sustainability and the community building necessary to accomplish this. A debt of gratitude is owed to the Jerry Hopcroft family who purchased the film on behalf of us all, having first seen it at the Boston Museum of Science. Sign up at the library Reference or Information Desk or call 781-769-0200, x110 or 222.

GARY HYLANDER LECTURES ON D-DAY

Popular historian Dr. Gary Hylander will return to the Morrill Memorial Library on Thursday, June 5 at 7 p.m. to talk about D-Day, as this year marks the 70th anniversary of Operation Overlord. The Allied invasion of Europe began on June 6, 1944. The greatest armada the world had ever seen began to assemble in the pre-dawn hours off the French coastline in preparation for the final assault upon Hitler's Germany. In his General Order for the day, Eisenhower called the attack a "great crusade" and assured the soldiers about to storm the Normandy beaches that the "hopes and prayers" of the free world "march with you." Sign up for this fascination presentation, funded by the Friends of the Library, at the library Reference or Information Desk or call 781-769-0200, x110 or 222.

Baseball keeps rolling, beats Natick 4-1

Sam Nickerson
Staff Reporter

It was ace vs. up-and-coming ace Monday night at Mahan Field as dominant pitching performances by Natick's Brady Furdon and Norwood's Sean Mellen stalemated the Bay State Conference Herget Division rivals at 1-1 into extra innings.

Both pitchers combined for 26 strikeouts, but Norwood bats came to life just as the rain began to fall in the top of the 11th, propelling the Mustangs to a 4-1 victory in dramatic fashion.

With the bases loaded and one out, a sacrifice fly from John Galvin brought home pinch runner Mike McDonough with the go-ahead run to make it 2-1 before Jack Sheehan scored on a passed ball and John Ryan belted an RBI triple to seal the win for Norwood.

But for 10 1/2 innings, pitching and heads up defense dictated the pace of the game.

"We knew Furdon was going to be on the mound. Runs weren't going to be a whole lot," Mustangs coach Kevin Igoe said. "And Mellen pitched great, fastball in the low 80s with a nice curve. He mixed it up pretty well."

The baseball team is rolling along this year by beating Natick 4-1 and improving to an 11-7 record heading into the final stages of the season.

FILE PHOTO

Mellen struck out 10 in seven innings of work and picked off two baserunners. The sophomore left-hander looked every bit in command—even with runners on base behind him—and showed why Igoe thinks he could develop into a star for the Mustangs.

Senior right-hander and captain Joe Rydzewski finished out the game with four strong innings of scoreless relief.

The Mustang's defense was in sync early, saving a run at the plate in the first inning on a relay that included center fielder Jack Sheehan, second baseman Connor Flynn, and catcher Kevin Hines. John Ryan and Dennis Drummey turned in strong performances in the outfield, both making long, running catches in left and right field during the final inning.

Norwood put up seven hits, yet struggled to find an answer for Furdon, who fanned 16 batters over 10 innings—striking out the side twice—and went 3-5 at the plate with a run.

But the Mustangs weren't without their chances. Natick catcher Derek Butler threw out two baserunners caught stealing during the eighth and ninth innings as Norwood threatened late.

"We work on keeping runners close and we know that coach Igoe does a good job of coaching his baserunners and is an aggressive coach who likes to run," Natick coach Jason Hoyer said. "That's stuff that you hope will rally you defensively so when we come around with the bats, it gets us going offensively, but we just couldn't get it done today."

For Igoe, the match up was good preparation for his young team as they look towards the postseason.

"We struggled with our running game, but that's the kind of pitching you're going to see in the tournament, so I'm glad they threw [Furdon] against us because it gets us more exposure to it," Igoe said.

The hard-fought win puts Norwood—who improve to 11-7 overall—in good form for the remainder of the season and the MIAA tournament.

"We played good defense and pitched well all year. So when we start hitting, we'll be dangerous," Igoe said.

Despite the win, the Herget division chase is now over for the Mustangs as Wellesley locked up the title with a victory over Milton.
