

State meets with select group about rink

Christopher Roberson
Staff Reporter

State and town officials recently met at the Coakley Middle School to discuss the possibility of an ice rink in South Norwood, but only certain residents were invited to attend.

Town Meeting Member Todd Gundlach was informed on Sept. 19 by William Buckley, senior legislative aide for State Rep. John Rogers, that the meeting had, in fact, taken place on Sept. 15.

Gundlach said he learned that Rogers, Selectman Thomas Maloney and Selectman William Plasko were also at the meeting.

“If this is such a positive thing, why wouldn’t they want to be transparent?” Gundlach asked.

Town Manager John Carroll said he did not attend meeting, therefore he declined to make any further comments about the matter.

Based on information from Buckley, Gundlach said Leo Roy, commissioner of the State Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR), personally invited those residents he wanted at the Sept. 15 meeting.

“The staff was emphatic that this was not a public meeting,” said Gundlach. “I was told that a ‘request was made by the Commonwealth for a meeting in South Norwood and invited select individuals.’”

Roy responded to Gundlach in an email on Sept. 24.

“The purpose of the meeting in

Household Hazardous Waste Day a hit

The September Household Hazardous Day in Norwood brought in more residents this time around than in many previous years, and Norwood Health Department Superintendent Sigalle Reiss said this is a good problem to have.

“We had 485 cars come out, and that’s over 100 more than we had in May,” she said. “We want to see people come in and dispose of their waste properly.”

Thousands of items were turned in during the day, including paint thinners, driveway sealants, waxes, polishes, waste oil, pesticides, pool chemicals, and virtually anything with a corrosive or acidic symbol on it.

“People can always call and ask us if they need to know if it’s a hazardous material or not,” Reiss said. “For instance, a lot of people think latex paint is hazardous. It’s not. Lead-based and oil-based paint is

School Committee concerned over charter school impacts

Jake Levin
Staff Reporter

The Norwood School Committee convened on Monday night for a special session at the Savage Education Center to discuss various topics concerning the district.

Key items on the agenda included Norwood’s partnership with Chartwells School Lunch, the ongoing debate over charter schools in the state, and the pending retirement of district superintendent James Hayden.

With Chairman James Gormley absent, board member Lisa Igoe served as acting chair.

Chartwells, which was represented by regional manager Erin Long, registered dietician Kelsey Massis and director of dining services Elijah Norris, prepared a power point to highlight several changes the company has installed in the school district since taking over the lunch program.

“We’re very excited to be here in Norwood,” Norris said, adding that he attended Norwood Day earlier this month to get a better feel for the community.

Norris said that fresh pizza made in cafeterias – rather than frozen pizzas – are now available to students, as are a variety of teriyaki dishes. A fruits and vegetable grant has been given to Balch Elementary School, where fresh fruits and vegetables will be available three days a week. He also said that the Cleveland School has begun a fruits and vegetables challenge to ensure that students are getting the healthier items they need over the course of the school day.

Massis presented Chartwells’ smartphone app, which details the nutritional facts of breakfast and lunch menus throughout Norwood schools.

All information is available at Norwood.nutrislice.com, and Massis said that parent feedback to the program has been very positive – especially for those parents whose children have food allergies; the app has filters which can eliminate foods that would be unfit for students with any number of allergies.

Norris said that among the accolades he’s received so far include a thank you note from a student in regards to Chartwell’s macaroni and cheese.

He also noted that staffing at school cafeterias is still “the same wonderful ladies that have been doing it.”

Next on the to-do list was a discussion of the Foxboro Regional Charter School, which includes 30 students from within the Norwood district.

Superintendent of Schools James Hayden worried that Foxboro’s request for an additional 400 seats would hurt Norwood further, saying that for each student who leaves Norwood, less aide is given to the district – which causes various programs to suffer, ranging from technologies to sports.

“We feel these additional 400 seats would be detrimental to Norwood Public Schools,” Hayden said.

Norwood was to brief state and locally elected officials on a South Shore rink Feasibility Study being conducted jointly by DCR and (the State Division of Capital Asset Management and Maintenance) DCAMM," he said. "I did not personally invite anyone to the meeting; outreach to the elected officials was done by my staff."

In addition, DCR Spokesman Mark Steffen said the meeting was held as a legislative briefing; therefore, advance notice was not required.

Roy also cited a miscommunication with Rogers' staff.

"There seems to be some confusion with the representative's office regarding the invitations to the meeting," he said. "As I understand it, it was the elected officials who invited a few citizens to join the meeting."

However, Roy said "a couple of public meetings" will be held in the coming months.

According to a 2012 letter from the Recreation In Norwood Committee (RINC), Rogers had secured $5.6 million to build the rink at Coakley Middle School.

However, Gundlach said those funds were not included in the state's budget.

Although he supports the idea of having an ice rink, Gundlach said he opposed the process.

"The location they chose wasn't fully vetted," he said. "There's been a lot of backroom dealing."

Gundlach also said the property transfer from the School Committee to the Recreation Department "wasn't really clean" and there could be conflicts with ownership.

"Are they [DCR officials] going to own this rink on Norwood property?" he asked.

Although the ice rink proposal passed during the 2013 Town Meeting, Gundlach said the vote was "not too far" from the two-thirds needed to vote it down.

"The vote needed 61 Town Meeting members to stop the transfer of land, we got 48," he said.

Gundlach also said the vote that year could have been influenced by Rogers.

"Ironically, it was the same year that Rogers was up for reelection; now he's up for reelection again," he said.

RINC Chairman William Naumann said he attended the Sept. 15 meeting and briefly explained why it was held.

"It was basically to carry out the will of Town Meeting," he said.

Maloney said Rogers invited him to attend the meeting.

"I was impressed, there were eight people from the state that came down," he said.

Maloney said the meeting's dialogue focused on telling state officials that there is still a desire to have an ice rink in town.

"We're trying to re-establish the lines of communications," he said. "The DCR does seem to be interested in citing two sheets of ice somewhere in this region."

Plasko said he also received an invite from Rogers, but maintained that no decisions were made during the meeting.

"We just received an explanation of the current process the state is following," he said.

Going forward, Gundlach said he remains unsure as to whether or not the Open Meeting Law was violated. He said that while RINC and the Board of Selectmen are required to post their meetings, the same may not be true for DCR and DCAMM.

"There's multiple agencies involved," he said, adding that it is also unclear as to who ran the meeting. "That's where it gets complicated."

Gundlach also said this would not be a first time offense, as the Attorney General's Office found that RINC had violated the Open Meeting Law two years ago by not providing advance notice of three meetings between March 7 and April 11, 2014.

Selectmen detail state's interest in pursuing rink options in area

Jake Levin
Staff Reporter

The Norwood Board of Selectmen met on Tuesday night, and it appears the long-proposed hockey rink in Town isn't completely dead yet.

Selectman Bill Plasko said he received a phone call from State Rep. John Rogers, saying that the Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR) remains interested in building a rink in the Norwood area – not necessarily within Norwood proper, although the South Norwood location next to Hawes Pool remains a possibility.

“Basically, I would say that the original prognosis of the project being dead as we knew it is probably 98, if not 99 percent true,” Plasko said. “But they [DCR] are doing a feasibility study of where to put a rink in this area, including Norwood.”

Selectman Tom Maloney said he'd also heard from the DCR in regards to doing a review on the rink project; a meeting had been held, with former Norwood High hockey player Matt Brown in attendance as an advocate. Brown, who graduated Stonehill College in the spring, was paralyzed in a game for the Mustangs in 2010.

Maloney said the DCR is interested in constructing two sheets of ice in the area, and acknowledged that the area next to the pool is only big enough for one. This means that the DCR could look into constructing two rinks with one sheet each; one perhaps at Hawes Pool, and the other perhaps at the site of the Metropolis Rink in Canton, which was damaged beyond repair during the winter of 2015.

In other business, the meeting also included an update from Mark Ryan of the Department of Public Works (DPW), who said that cleanup from Norwood Day on Sept. 10 went swimmingly.

Ryan also said that the department is in the process of installing trees at various athletic fields across the Town, courtesy of Norwood Bank. The trees are being planted to provide shade for both spectators and participants, Ryan said.

“One time I showed up to a lacrosse event at the Coakley, and all the viewers were against the building, trying to find shade,” he said.

Types of sugar maple trees are being planted, according to Ryan, with 10 already placed at the Coakley, six at the Oldham and two more at the Willett School.

A $2.7 million sewer lining project is nearing completion, Ryan said, and that another project of re-lining pipes across Town is also underway in what he called a “long-term” project.

Trash removal was also discussed, with Ryan stating that removal of bulk items – such as couches, bed frames, etc. – is available as a service for a $25 fee, but that you may also remove items yourself by taking them to the Norwood Landfill, which is open on Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Bids have come in for lights at the athletic fields at the Coakley School, although the bids all came in too high; the board is hoping for bids to come in closer to $650,000 or less.

The Norwood Light Department gave an update, with Superintendent James Collins present, as well as department member Dan Morrissey.

Collins said the department has recently had to replace three telephone poles, all thanks to distracted drivers.

“Distracted drivers are taking them down almost faster than you can up them up,” chairman of the board Allan Howard said, citing poles on Nahatan Street.

Collins and Morrissey discussed scammers posing as Light Department employees, and warned Norwood residents to be alert for several clues as to whether a person is truly a member of the department or not.

Collins said that beginning on Oct. 31, all employees will have Town of Norwood ID tags, in the form of a badge. He said not to give out any information to people unless you see the badge, and also warned about giving out information over the phone.

“We're not calling people, so please do not let people in your homes,” he said. “Do not give them any information.”

An article sent to the board of selectmen via the Norwood School Committee, requesting an extra $300,000 for an increased cost in out-of-district special education due to a rising population of students who qualify.

“This may or may not be needed, but at this time it looks like it's going to be needed,” Howard said.

Maloney added he has no doubts the School Committee will use the money as they say they will. The motion passed unanimously.

One-day liquor licenses were granted to the Norwood Elks Lodge No. 1124 for an event with veterans on Saturday, Oct. 8 from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m., and to the St. Catherine's School for an alumni event on Saturday, Oct. 15 from 4 to 7 p.m.

Selectman Paul Bishop wanted to wish all citizens of Norwood a happy Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish New Year, which begins at sundown on Oct. 2.

The public's right to know

The Town of Norwood deserves a hockey rink. Goodness knows they have worked hard enough for one, and there is no doubt both the general public and school athletic programs would benefit from one. That being written, it is no secret this newspaper has been staunchly against the location of a rink at the Coakley Middle School. We just don't believe the benefits to some should come at the expense of others. Norwood has always been a community first, municipality second.

In our opinion, the machinations of the rink proposal at the Coakley School is one of the few blights on an otherwise stellar Norwood history of neighbor supporting neighbor. We saw examples of bullying, dissemination of false and misleading information to the public and, above all, secrecy. Withholding information from the general public is perhaps one of the most egregious mistakes government officials can make while, perhaps with the best intentions, trying to get their agendas met. Now, of course there are instances when governmental bodies need to withhold information in the short term for issues like national security or sensitive negotiations. However, the public's right to know should ultimately prevail when the time is right.

No discussions of a rink being potentially located in Norwood should be withheld from public knowledge, yet even now we find out that a meeting was held recently which, by any reasonable account, should have been disclosed upfront and open to those interested in attending. And even if the meeting was too sudden or too important to delay for the purposes of public notice, at a minimum public officials should have disclosed the details of the meeting at the next available opportunity. Interestingly enough, there was enough time to notify some residents of the meeting, since a select few were personally invited.

At Tuesday night's meeting, during his selectmen's agenda, Selectman Bill Plasko disclosed that a meeting was held on the 15th of September and he forgot to mention it at the following selectmen's meeting, saying it "must have slipped his mind," which we found interesting since Selectman Tom Maloney attended the same meeting, so it must have slipped his mind too. Perhaps coincidentally, this newspaper found out about the meeting late last week and started making phone calls to those we discovered attended the meeting, including both Mr. Maloney and Plasko. Is it too unreasonable for us to hypothesize that perhaps Selectman Plasko decided he better admit to a meeting only after the proverbial cat was let out of the bag? We are also surprised that Selectman Bishop didn't attend the meeting since he has been so actively involved in the process. Then again, three selectmen attending any function would be considered a quorum and thereby establishing a public meeting. He probably just had a timing conflict.

Admittedly, a meeting such as this isn't worthy of a comparison to The Pentagon Papers. However, on a much, much smaller scale, the revelation in those papers that public officials, among other things, thought they were smarter and knew better than the general public thereby condoning secret and overt actions is relevant in all walks of government and the public's right to know. The fact that a rink meeting was held in the manner it was isn't nearly as big a deal as the fact that two selectmen, in our opinion, only disclosed it when they had no other choice. That's well worth noting.

Letters to the Editor

THANK YOU TO EVERYONE FOR AWESOME DAY

To the Editor:

On behalf of the members of Local 1631, your Norwood Firefighters, I would like to take this opportunity to publicly thank all the members of our community who made the Second Annual Red and Blue Cookout on Sept. 11 such an awesome event. The efforts of those involved did not go unnoticed or unappreciated by our membership.

Every morsel of food was perfect. The marinated chicken, fresh pressed assortment of burgers and the choices of corn on the cob were all phenomenal! The platters and dishes of homemade pasta and potato salads to the fresh baked desert items were the perfect way to finish the meal! We would like to thank everyone who made such a special day possible. To those who made donations, large or small, cash or gift cards, a favorite dish, the paper products or who simply donated your time, THANK YOU! To those local businesses who donated, THANK YOU! To those who worked tirelessly over the grill all day and then went back to work when our on duty crew arrived late, THANK YOU!

We'd like to specifically thank Bill and Karen Lloyd for the birth of this idea last year and to Tom and Kelly Benson, Bill Plasko, Jr. and Patty Bailey, who ran with the Lloyd's vision and helped them bring it to fruition. Thank you to Gretchen Stamphl and Workmen's Hall and Brian Fagan from the Norwood Elks too. You folks (and all those who supported you) exemplify what makes Norwood great and you are a credit to our community.

Finally, we'd like to extend our support to our Brothers in Blue, the members of the Norwood Police Department. Policing has taken a bad rap around our county over the last few years. Working alongside them every day we see countless acts of integrity, professionalism and kindness of which our community should be proud. We want them to know that we have their backs! With the thanks from the 61 members of Local 1631, noted that for each student who leaves, $12,000 is lost.

Dennis P. Mawn President, Local 1631 Norwood Firefighters

Hayden has prepared a letter for the state, which will be asking it to do its part in reimbursing Norwood for students lost to charters schools. A motion was made to accept Hayden's letter, and was passed unanimously.

Hayden, who is retiring at the end of his contract on June 30, 2017, said that he met with Gormley prior to the meeting to begin discussing his eventual replacement.

The next step in finding Hayden's replacement will be figuring out exactly how to go about it, using a search firm and/or consultants.

"Hiring a superintendent is one of the most important decisions we as a school committee will make," committee member Michelle Eysie Mullen said.

Hayden said that the Massachusetts Association of School Committees should be invited to the next meeting to get a better feel on how to go about the process. Member Patrick McDonough said he wasn't opposed to the idea of a search firm, but did say the financial aspect should be considered.

"I'm not saying we shouldn't do it, I just think we should make sure we have the money," he said.

Igoe broached the subject of perhaps hiring an interim superintendent, which could save the committee money and also buy the district more time to ensure they make the right decision.

Bodenhofer said it was an idea worth discussing, but that her preference would be to not have an interim superintendent.

"Interim administrators are perfect when something... has caused a surprising exit, but given that we do have 9-10 months, I would like to try to find somebody now," Bodenhofer said.

Hayden mentioned that several school districts in the area, including Sharon, Franklin and Dover-Sherborn, are also currently looking for superintendents.

Hayden also said he wants to put in "a few extra hours on the job to get this done right." A motion for a special one-item meeting in regards to this subject on Wednesday, Oct. 12 at 7 p.m. was presented and accepted unanimously.

Additionally, Norwood's long range building study updates will be carried out by Wayland-based construction firm Ai3, Bodenhofer announced.

"They put together a very nice proposal in advance for us," she said. "They had stellar recommendations."

Ai3 has recently conducted operations in nearby towns such as Quincy and Abington, and has also done work in Norwood in the past - namely at the high school.

"This particular group was very well put together," McDonough said. "We had very positive feedback from other members about this group. Personally speaking, I've seen what they've done with the high school, and it was excellent. I look forward to working with them in the future."

Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in this necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my mother. Oh Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech thee from the bottom of my heart to succor me in my necessity (make request). There are none that can withstand your power. If you see something, say something

To date in 2016, the Norwood Police Department (NPD) has received more than 300 calls reporting suspicious persons or vehicles in the Town.

The police don't think it's too many, and neither should you.

With all that's going on in the country right now, Norwood Deputy Chief Peter Kelly said that people shouldn't think twice about calling them.

"The Norwood Police Department doesn't think that a person is being paranoid when they call," he said. "We live in a society where we encourage people to say something if they see something. I've seen it go the other way where people are hesitant to say something for fear of whatever; and that's where we lose time and intelligence."

That's not to say Norwood doesn't have its share of frequent callers. In those 300-plus calls reporting suspicious activity (not a specific crime or infraction), many times the issues are completely benign. One person called the police because a black male was dancing down the street, another where a white male was looking for a cab. There was also a call about a woman walking down the street, who, police discovered, just needed a ride (which the NPD gave to her). There were 14 instances this year when neighbors called the police because they thought a utility worker, an Amazon driver, a cable guy, a Boch Estate security guard and a Norwood Tax Assessor were engaged in suspicious activity.

Kelly said that calling on a utility worker, or even a tax as-essor, isn't necessarily a bad idea. Kelly said that the amount of scams going on in the area warrant caution.

"We get a number of calls every year about different types of scams," he said. "People dressed up in worker's clothes to sell a paving job to a house and they end up breaking into it, for instance."

Kelly said Chief William Brooks has been a "breath of fresh air," in the scam reduction department. He said Brooks' usage of social media to alert the citizenry of new scams as they become apparent has been extremely helpful. He said the biggest instance of scamming he receives from residents concerns calls from others claiming to be from the Internal Revenue Service (IRS).

"What we put out there is that there's an IRS scam the public should be aware of and you should know to never give your banking information over the phone, because that's not how the IRS does business."

Even with the call regarding the Norwood Tax Assessor, Kelly said he understood someone's reluctance in believing the person would be on the level.

"You know, I'd open the door and wouldn't be expecting someone from the assessor's office. I would be a bit guarded too," he said.

This year, only eight arrests were made from those 300 calls, but Kelly said that's not the problem it may appear to be.

"Why would you want 300 arrests for 300 calls?" he said. "It's like a person who has chest pains and they're in denial and they hesitate to call for an ambulance. Then they call, and it turns out they didn't have a heart attack, just indigestion, but it could have been the real thing. Why take the chance?"

In Norwood, the majority of suspicious person calls describe a vehicle and a license plate, and not a person's race. When a person's race is mentioned, eight were described as black males, 18 described as white males and 20 were described as females.

Kelly said that when a suspicious activity call comes in, they get as much detail from the caller as possible as to why the activity is suspicious and send out two police cruisers to the area. They try to find the person or activity that was described and follow up with the caller later. Kelly said granting residents this peace of mind, even though it doesn't generally lead to an arrest, is very important. He said it's all about perception.

"It's dealing with the public's fear," he said. "It's the job of the police department to try and help them work through their fears and concerns."

Kelly added that giving peace of mind is as much a part of the job as keeping the peace.

Arrested twice in one night

Resident Thomas Dimarzo could not seem to stay out of trouble last weekend, so much so that he was taken into police custody twice in the span of only a few hours.

Police said the first incident occurred at 2:30 a.m. on Sept. 24 when officers received a call that a home had been broken into on Silver Street.

Westwood police were also monitoring the call and were able to locate Dimarzo's vehicle on Bay Colony Drive, which straddles the Norwood-Westwood town line.

Police said Dimarzo, 33, of 14 Hickory Rd., also appeared to be under the influence of drugs.

"He admitted to breaking into the house, but told officers he was sleepwalking," police said in a written statement.

THE GRAVESTONE GIRLS FOCUS ON NORWOOD'S CEMETERIES

Cemetery educators, The Gravestone Girls, whose mission is to "Keep Our Dead Alive," will be presenting a virtual tour called "Welcome to the Graveyard," centered on Norwood's local cemeteries, at the Morrill Memorial Library on Wednesday, Oct. 12, at 6:30 p.m. Their 90-minute presentation is built on photographs recently taken in these special and interesting burial places around Norwood, and charts the evolution of cemeteries and gravestones from the colonial era into the 21st century.

This popular program has been given for over 15 years across New England by The Gravestone Girls.

The group regularly works with libraries, historical societies, and genealogical groups, among others, to teach about "the art, symbolism and history of these living history museums located on everyone's main streets and backyards," says Ms. Sullivan, one in the group of three cemetery enthusiasts. She further added, "Almost everyone is interested in these peaceful and beautiful spaces, but may be hesitant to say so to others. Our presentation lets you know you're not the only one. Come see what we do, we fill the room every time!" To learn more about The Gravestone Girls and their work, please visit their website, www.GravestoneGirls.com.

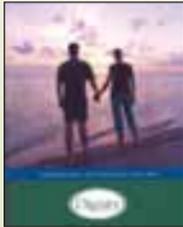

Registration is required. To sign up for this unique program, call 781-769-0200 x110, email norprograms@minlib.net, or visit the Reference or Information Desk. "Welcome to the Graveyard" will be partially funded by the Massachusetts Cultural Council.

Weighing the College Decision

By J. Keith Motley, PhD, UMass Boston Chancellor

This is the season when many high school seniors, and their parents, will make a most important decision—picking a college or university that is the right fit academically, financially, and socially. As chancellor of the University of Massachusetts Boston and a father of college students, I know that finding academic excellence, an inviting community, and an appropriate price point are critical elements in the decision-making process.

I'm proud that UMass Boston has established itself as a student-centered, urban public research university that welcomes and supports students of all backgrounds by providing them with an excellent education and modest tuition and fees. We take pride in fostering a community of diversity and inclusion, and continue to be the most diverse university in New England, even as we have grown from 1,227 students at our founding to 17,000 today.

As our student population has increased, so have the opportunities we provide, with approximately 200 academic programs to choose from in 11 schools and colleges. Our students pursue degrees in biology, psychology, management, exercise and health sciences, nursing, engineering, and many other fields. They keep our campus lively by participating in the dozens of clubs, NCAA sports, and intramural athletic teams available to UMass Boston students. And they inspire us with their determination to heighten their learning experience by studying abroad in Spain, Czech Republic, Germany, Greece, and elsewhere.

In an effort to help make the college application process less stressful, UMass Boston offers prospective students the opportunity to apply now and get an early decision. Students looking to complete the application process this fall can apply by November 1 for Early Action admission. Applicants who take advantage of this option will receive a decision by the end of the year, and have plenty of time to start planning for freshman year at UMass Boston. For those who need a little more time, the regular admissions deadline is March 1.

I encourage students to take advantage of our Early Action option, which also has among its benefits a first opportunity at more than $150 million in financial aid that UMass Boston awards each year.

We have also launched a pilot program in which high school students who have a grade point average of 3.5 or higher can be considered for admission without SAT scores.

To find out more about UMass Boston and the array of benefits of attending Boston's public research university, visit umb.edu/admissions or call 617.287.6000.

Police Dept. receives full accreditation, offers online police reports

Christopher Roberson
Staff Reporter

Following a two-and-a-half-year process, the Norwood Police Department recently earned its accreditation from the Massachusetts Police Accreditation Commission.

Chief William Brooks said that of the state's 351 municipalities, only 50 of them have accredited police departments.

Brooks also said the department's 80 policies and 300 standards were reviewed by the commission.

"It governs everything from property evidence to using force," he said.

Brooks also said he was surprised with how much detail went into the accreditation process.

"It was a lot more work than I thought it would be, almost to the point of being tedious," he said.

However, looking back, Brooks said he was pleased that the department successfully completed the process.

"I thought it was something that the department should achieve," he said.

Brooks said that although the department could have conducted the process internally, he wanted his officers to be measured against a standard.

"It's a signal to the public that we meet the highest standards and best practices, there's no stone left unturned."

The Norwood Police Department was accredited by the Massachusetts Police Accreditation Commission following a two-and-a-half-year process.

COURTESY PHOTO

Brooks said the department will need to have its accreditation renewed in 2019.

The department has also given residents the option of filing police reports online at www.norwoodpolice.com.

Brooks said the department began looking at the new tool "in earnest" last spring.

He said filing reports online allows officers to bypass the administrative work associated with minor incidents such as a hit and run, vandalism, a traffic complaint or lost property.

In addition, Brooks said incidents reported online cannot be emergencies, need to have occurred in Norwood, have no known suspects and cannot have occurred on a state highway.

He also said it saves residents time instead of having to wait for an officer to arrive.

"They click on it and it walks them through the process," he said, adding that the online reports go into the same system used for reports that are filed by hand. "Supervisors check it every shift."

Brooks said the greatest challenge at this point, is getting more residents to realize that the service is available.

He said older residents who may not be that computer-savvy still come into the station to file a report. However, younger residents who typically call are more apt to use the online filing system.

"Some people are taking advantage of it," said Brooks.

hazardous, but as long as (the latex paint) is dry it can go in the trash."

Reiss said it can be confusing trying to figure out what's hazardous and what's not. For instance, since the passage of the 1996 Battery Management Act, mercury was disallowed from being used in alkaline batteries, but many rechargeable batteries still have many hazardous chemicals in them (including mercury). Reiss said many residents may or may not be aware of it, but that's why they have found a company that locally recycles all types of batteries. So, if unsure, the Norwood Board of Health (working in conjunction with the Norwood Department of Public Works) can help out.

"It takes all the confusion out," she said.

Reiss said that although it has become more expensive over the years to do so, they are committed to using local companies for the recycling process. Many companies ship the materials overseas; where the recycling method is so toxic to the environment it negates any benefit. Reiss said the reason the Norwood Board of Health is involved in the hazardous waste day is to prevent those materials from going in the ground and possibly harming the water table and the drinking water supply (as well as the environment).

In many developing countries the products are just burned so that the valuable metal components can be easily removed. However, the hazardous materials just go right into the air or the water. Reiss said the Board works to make sure the companies the town works with are certified by E-Stewards, which certify a company's work.

"We do work vigilantly to make sure they're certified with the Steward organization, to make sure they do dispose of the materials responsibly," she said.

The responsible recycling methods have made the price go up, which is why Reiss thinks many of the smaller companies have folded in recent years.

"They just can't keep up anymore because of the cost," she said. "The big thing is TVs and monitors. Those cathode ray tubes have a lot of lead and now we actually have to charge a fee for that."

Norwood swimmers securing sectional bids, with eyes still on states

Jake Levin
Staff Reporter

Norwood continues to search for that elusive first win of the season, its latest loss a 96-82 setback vs. Needham last Friday night.

Once again, however, the meet was littered with smaller triumphs for the Mustangs, as more individuals and relays continue to qualify for sectionals in the postseason – with the ultimate goal of states still within reach for many.

Tori Mullen was dubbed “swimmer of the meet” by Norwood head coach Jennifer Rodger after qualifying for sectionals in the 200-yard individual medley (IM) with a time of 2:30.06, which earned her second place in her heat.

“This is huge that she qualified in the third meet [of the season],” Rodger said of Mullen. “She’s so close for so many other heats, I’m really excited to see where she’s at for the rest of the season and where her hard work is going to take her.”

The 200-yard freestyle sectional time remains within reach for Mullen, as she needs to trim less than a second from her current-best of 2:15.50; sectional time is 2:14.58.

She also has the fastest time on the team in the 100-yard freestyle thus far, as she

It's a relatively small group, but through just three meets over a third of the members of the Norwood swim team have qualified for sectionals in the postseason.

Thrice in a row, twice in a row for football

Jake Levin
Staff Reporter

Not all 3-0 starts are created equal, but Norwood finds itself with an identical record through three games this season as it did in 2015.

The latest triumph, a 12-6 triple-overtime road victory over the Dedham Marauders, marked the second week in a row the Mustangs have kept a team off the scoreboard in regulation.

The win also demonstrated Norwood’s ability to adapt to unique circumstances. For starters, it was the first night game in the history of the Norwood-Dedham rivalry, a string of games that spans over 90 contests. But the Mustangs also won without their head coach present – Jim Tighe was away at his son’s wedding – and the boss was left impressed with what he returned to.

“A win is a win is a win,” Tighe said on Monday after he returned to Norwood. Assistant coach Joe Curran filled in for Tighe in his absence. “Our kids, along with the Dedham kids, played really well. I looked at the film and there are some things we could improve on, certainly.”

A true war of attrition for 48 minutes, Dedham and Norwood each made just one trip inside the red zone prior to the overtime sessions.

The Mustangs came closest to punching it in during regulation, as they had a second-and-goal from the 1 with 2 seconds left in the first half, but fell victim to a goal line stand by the Marauders. It was Norwood’s lone trip inside the red zone, overtime excluded.

Dedham, too, had just one foray into the red zone; they turned the ball over on downs from the 13-yard line in the fourth quarter, which would be its final possession of regulation.

“They stood tall,” Tighe said of his defensive unit. “They showed their girth.”

Under MIAA overtime rules, each team had four plays from 10 yards out to reach the end zone. Each team missed field goals wide left in the first overtime period, but Richie Watson (21 carries, 121 yards) finally broke the scoreless tie on the Mustangs’ first play from scrimmage in overtime No. 2. Norwood failed on the two-point conversion attempt (by rule, each team must attempt the two-point conversion from the second overtime on).

Nijal Hill answered the bell for the Marauders to tie the game, plunging in from the 2 to make it a 6-6 game. But Dedham also failed its two-point conversion attempt, sending the game to a third extra session.

The Marauders had the fall first in OT No. 3 and lost 24 yards in the process, 15 on a personal foul and 11 more on a combined sack from Tony Ortega and Reuel Toney.

When the ball was returned to the Mustangs, George Mason (eight carries, 40 yards) finally sent the crowd on its way with a 10-

Rebels bump Mustangs, 3-1

Jake Levin
Staff Reporter

A fast start couldn't produce a strong finish, as Walpole rallied from a set down to beat Norwood at home last Thursday, 3-1.

The Mustangs (6-2) downed the Rebels in the first set, 25-18, before dropping the next three with scores of 25-15, 25-22 and 25-15 in favor of Walpole.

"I knew it was going to be a tough match because they've been on a little bit of a run," Norwood head coach Paul Nimblett said following the match, referring the Rebels' improved play of late. "They lost their first three, but now they've won four in a row. Every time Walpole and Norwood meet, it's a tough matchup."

After closing out the first set, the Mustangs sprinted to a 5-0 lead in the second. Krista Bradley, who had eight service points over the course of the match, had two of her four aces during the early run to bolster the lead.

But the Rebels clawed their way back, catching Norwood at 10-10 and taking their first lead at 13-12 as part of a 7-0 run, en route to the 25-15 second set victory.

"It wasn't like we gave it to them," Nimblett said. "They earned that win."

The Mustangs were again quick out of the gate in the third set, jumping out to a 4-0 lead which included an emphatic spike from Kiki Ryan (eight kills, eight service points, three aces).

Walpole eventually caught up again, but couldn't pull away from the Mustangs. Another spike from Norwood finally has a home meet on Friday afternoon, as they'll face the Weymouth Wildcats in a Bay State Conference battle at the Westwood High School swimming pool. Mustangs head coach Jennifer Rodger is hopeful that even more of her swimmers can qualify for sectionals in the meet, while ones that already have can take it a step further and make states cuts.

swam a 1:01.37 during her portion of the 400-yard free relay.

Brendan Hurley punched his ticket to sectionals in the 50-yard freestyle, while swimming a 26.14 as part of the boys 200-yard freestyle relay. Hurley was also part of a 200-yard IM relay that qualified for sectionals earlier in the season.

Julia Kiley has emerged as the Mustangs' distance specialist, swimming both the 200 and 500-yard freestyles for Norwood vs. the Rockets.

"She's quickly

transitioned into a distance swimmer," Rodger said of Kiley, a senior captain who spent her offseason training with US club teams. "We've talked strategies the last couple of meets – how to pace herself, how to take the 500 race by [intervals of] 100s, how to think about – I think this season, she's going to get stronger and stronger in that race. I'm hoping she's going to be able to cut the 34 seconds in that race to qualify."

Kiley dropped 12 seconds from her previous best time in the 500, an event in which it's not at all unusual for tremendous drops in time from race to race. She also nicked a second off her time in the 200.

Aidan Mulligan came up just short in qualifying for states in the 50-yard freestyle with a heat of 24.09 seconds; in order to achieve that next step, he needs to take off a mere nine-hundredths of a second between now and the end of the regular season.

"Aidan has been working extremely hard to cut time," Rodger said. "The 24.09 is a personal and season best; he's really focused on achieving that state cut."

Rodger praised Mulligan as one of the hardest workers on the team; she hopes that his work ethic is something that gradually rubs off on other Mustangs.

"His focus and determination during practice...he has a fire when he swims. He wants that time," Rodger said. "It's really nice to see that because I want all the athletes to have that. I want them to have fire in their swimming and strive to be better."

Rory Lake and Grace Gillis are among other swimmers who had strong showings vs. Needham; in the 100-yard backstroke, Lake clocked in at 1:12.53, while Gillis swam at 1:10.53. The qualifying time for sectionals is 1:09.28.

The Mustangs had a meet at Brookline on Tuesday, in an event held after the Record's deadline. At long last, they'll swim at home this season tomorrow, as they welcome the Weymouth Wildcats in for their home opener at 4 p.m. just up Nahatan Street at the Westwood High School pool.

Norwood Field Hockey rockets back to beat Milton

Jake Levin
Staff Reporter

The only thing worse than losing to your archrival by double digits is having to sit around five days to have a chance at righting the ship.

But patience paid off in a big way for Norwood, which successfully put the Walpole debacle in the rearview with a 2-0 blanking of the Milton Wildcats on Tuesday afternoon at Milton High School.

"This was a huge win," Mustangs head coach Allison Doliner said after the game, as the team improved to 5-3-1 on the season. "The girls looked like a completely different team [today]. We went with a slightly different set up today and it paid off. I'd say this was the first game we got a solid 60 minutes out of everyone; it was fun to watch."

Norwood needed a win badly after losing 12-2 to the Porkers; a loss would have brought its record down to the .500 mark at the season's halfway point.

But in a scoreless deadlock at the half, Coley Hayes lifted the Mustangs over the top with a pair of goals in the second, first off a corner from Cassidy Mahoney at 5:33 and her second on another corner from Bryn Garczynski at 16:31.

"Instead of playing a 3-3-3-1 set-up, we switched to a 1-2-1-2-1-2-1," Doliner explained, breaking down the X's and O's involved in taking down Milton. "It spreads us out a little more; we were having trouble supporting each other and the gaps in the field were way too big and there was a huge breakdown in between lines. Today we worked much better."

The win over the Wildcats was Norwood's fourth shutout victory of the season, with first-year goaltender Aly Naumann between the pipes for all of them; she had five saves vs. Milton.

Doliner said that Walpole, like almost every other season, has a phenomenal team.

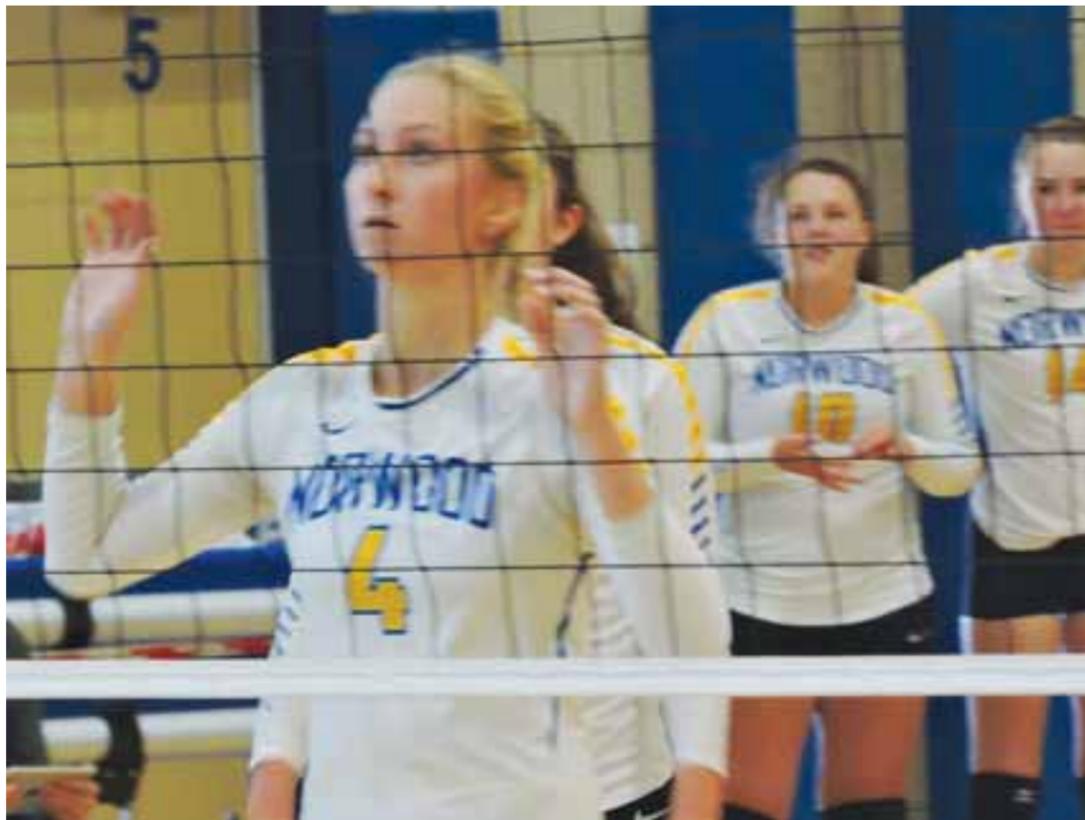

"Although a loss like that is never fun, it's a great learning opportunity," she said. "Especially having some younger players, it gives us a chance to take in where we are, and where we want to be."

Hayes and Katie Welch scored Norwood's lone goals vs. the Porkers.

Hayes and Garczynski are tied for the team lead in points, with identical stat lines of four goals and three assists for seven points at the season's halfway mark.

Next up for the Mustangs is a home date with the Framingham Flyers on Friday at 3:45 p.m. on the front lawn of Norwood High School. After that, they face another decent layoff, as they'll have to wait until next Wednesday (Oct. 5) to face the Dedham Marauders at home.

Kiki Ryan, wearing No. 4 above, recorded a double-double in Norwood's win over Weymouth last week with 15 kills and 12 service points.

Ryan gave Norwood an 18-17 lead, but that would be its final time on top in the set. The Rebels tactically went ahead, holding a 23-19 and 24-21 lead before ultimately closing the Mustangs out.

"Set 3 could have gone either way; it was back and forth and really, really tight," Nimblett said. "Set 4, we were just gassed. Give their defense credit; their defense played great. We were putting everything at them and they just dug everything."

Norwood fell behind quickly in the match's final set, down 9-1 and unable to recover.

"They caught us in a couple of tough rotations where we didn't have our strong hitters up front and they went on some runs," Nimblett said, diagnosing what went wrong for the Mustangs. "They had aggressive serves. They had two really good servers that caught us off guard. We just couldn't get out of those rotations and have enough momentum to push us through."

Danielle Currihan played a strong defensive game for Norwood, recording 15 digs.

"I'm proud of the way we played," Nimblett said. "It wasn't the result we wanted, but we still have a lot more season to go. It's just a bump in the road and we're going to pick ourselves back up."

The Mustangs had surpassed their win total from 2015 on Sept. 20, with a 3-1 victory on the road over the Weymouth Wildcats to get to six wins. Ryan had 15 kills, 12 service points and five aces in the match, while Kaylin Reen had 14 service points and six aces. Meghan Reen had four kills and eight service points, with Emma Flemming contributing nine kills. Erin Spaulding had 22 assists to lead the team.

Norwood faced Milton on the road on Tuesday night, in an event held after the Record's deadline. They travel to Framingham High School to take on the Flyers this afternoon at 4 p.m.

yard touchdown run on Norwood's first play from scrimmage, giving the Mustangs a 12-6 victory.

"They fought into the triple overtime," Tighe said. "The good news is we won the game, the bad news is there's plenty to work on."

The game was not prone to many turnovers; Norwood did not have any giveaways, while Dedham had just one (a Steve Khalil fumble recovery) on the Mustangs' first defensive set.

Norwood's 3-0 start differs from last year's in a couple of ways. While the opponents have all been the same (Framingham, Wayland and Dedham, in that order), the locations have been flipped. The Mustangs took care of the Flyers at home this season, while they took to the road to knock off the Warriors and Marauders.

Norwood's offense has scored 37 fewer points through three games than a year ago (79 last year, compared to 42), but the defense has virtually the same, giving up just seven points more in its three games this year (the Mustangs gave up 20 points during the 3-0 start last year, while right now the unit has allowed 27).

While Norwood did ride last season's hot start to the postseason, it certainly wasn't your typical playoff push. The Mustangs dropped their final four regular season contests to back in, lost their playoff game vs. Milton, and lost their next two consolation games vs. Hopkinton and Bishop Feehan before finally righting the ship vs. Dedham on Thanksgiving Day.

What differences does Tighe see between last year's group and the incumbent which may bode better as the season rolls along?

"We're a different team," he said. "We're a different make-up, we have a different identity. I think our defense this year is the strength of our team, and from an offensive perspective we have to find some additional ways to score."

"And that's the challenge."

Norwood returns home this week against another rival, this time the Walpole Rebels. Kickoff is at 3 p.m. at Norwood High School.
